Students entering with a master's degree in a related field may be granted up to 30 credit hours toward the 84 credit hours required for the doctorate. This leaves 30 credit hours of coursework, 12 credit hours of research and 12 credit hours of dissertation (54 credit hours total) to be earned post-admission.

Students entering without a master's degree must earn an additional 30 hours of graduate credit, produce a research portfolio which is formally evaluated by a faculty committee, and present that research in a public forum before continuing on in the later stage of the doctorate.

All students must maintain a 3.20 (scale is 4.00 = "A") average GPA in their courses and complete degree requirements per the program's satisfactory progress policy.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement outlining educational and professional goals
- ☐ • current curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

Undergraduate coursework in anthropology is not a prerequisite for admission but is generally advisable. Students may be admitted without such a background and may be required to acquire knowledge of general anthropology in a manner to be specified at the time of admission.

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants may also submit an optional scholarly writing sample not to exceed 20-30 double-spaced pages to be included in their application materials.

Anthropology (Complex Adaptive Systems Science), PHD (LAANTHCPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Anthropology (Complex Adaptive Systems Science), PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The School of Human Evolution and Social Change is an excellent choice for students wanting to pursue a PhD in the classic fields of anthropology:

- ☐ • archaeology
- ☐ • bioarchaeology
- ☐ • evolutionary anthropology
- ☐ • sociocultural anthropology

It is also an ideal environment for students who want to combine these approaches and other disciplines to explore specific issues or research questions within a transdisciplinary context. The flexible graduate curricula are designed to encourage students to design innovative plans of study to pursue their interests while receiving broad training in key areas. The anthropology faculty actively engage with faculty in other disciplines, including:

- ☐ • applied mathematics
- ☐ • chemistry
- ☐ • environmental economics
- ☐ • epidemiology
- ☐ • formal modeling
- ☐ • genetics
- ☐ • sociology
- ☐ • sustainability
- ☐ • technology and society
- ☐ • urban planning

The training students receive in this program prepares them to become expert scholars able to contribute not only to their chosen field, but to finding solutions to humankind's greatest challenges.

The complex adaptive systems science doctoral concentration trains the next generation of scientists in advanced concepts and methods needed for approaching diverse phenomena in the social and life sciences. The program is tightly integrated with diverse, ongoing, university-wide research on complex adaptive systems science at Arizona State University and emphasizes the value of a complex adaptive perspective to give better insight and a more active role in seeking solutions to a broad array of critical issues facing our society today. Students will be fluent in the common language of complexity while also receiving a solid foundation in the domain knowledge of existing academic disciplines.

Applied Behavior Analysis, MS (LAAPBAMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Applied Behavior Analysis, MS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Offered by the Department of Psychology, this program is a full-time, scientifically based, two-year program that meets the Behavior Analyst Certification Board fourth edition task list for coursework with more than 270 classroom hours and 1,500 hours of practicum fieldwork. Successful graduates will be able to sit for BACB certification and, once certified, they will be eligible for state-licensure. The program's learning outcomes include mastery across three major areas as identified by the BACB: basic behavior-analytic skills, client-centered responsibilities and foundational knowledge.

Applied behavior analysis training in the Department of Psychology at ASU includes supervised experience and instruction in:

- ☐ • behavior analytic attitudes such as determinism, empiricism and parsimony
- ☐ • fundamental elements of behavior change and behavior change procedures
- ☐ • identification, assessments and interventions for behavioral excesses, deficiencies and challenging behavior
- ☐ • professional ethics and conduct of ABA
- ☐ • training others in the science and practice of ABA
- ☐ • use of different behavioral measurement types and systems
- ☐ • use of experimental designs to determine relationships among and between measurement, relevant variables and behavior

Degree Requirements:

42 Credit hours including the required applied project course (PSB 593).

Required Core (24 credit hours)

PSB 501 Basic Principles of Applied Behavior Analysis (3)

PSB 510 Basic Principles of Experimental Analysis of Behavior (2)

PSB 511 Advanced Research Methods (2)

PSB 520 Ethical Issues and Professional Standards in Applied Behavior Analysis (3)

PSB 530 Behavioral Observation and Functional Assessment (3)

PSB 540 Development of Applied Behavioral Intervention Programs (3)

PSB 563 Basic Principles of Organizational Behavior Management (2)

PSB 573 Advanced Principles of Learning and Analysis of Behavior (3)

PSB 578 Applied Behavior Analysis in Developmental Disorders (3)

Electives or Research (4 credit hours)

PSB 591 Seminar (2)

PSB 598 Special Topics (2)

Other Requirements (9 credit hours)

PSB 580 Practicum: Applied Behavior Analysis (4)

PSB 583 Fieldwork: Applied Behavior Analysis (5)

Culminating Experience (5 credit hours)

PSB 593 Applied Project (5)

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's degree in psychology, human development, sociology or a closely related field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • SlideRoom application and fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose form
- ☐ • applicant response form
- ☐ • curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • two academic letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

The Department of Psychology application process is completed online through ASU's Graduate Admission Services which includes the application form and official transcripts. Application to the Department of Psychology Master of Science program in applied behavioral analysis is also completed via SlideRoom to process supplemental application materials. The SlideRoom account requires an additional fee. To apply to the program, students must follow the instructions on the applied behavioral analysis admission checklist.

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

It is strongly recommended to download and print the Master of Science in applied behavioral analysis admissions checklist to ensure completion of the application process and include all of the required supplemental forms.

The statement of purpose form should describe professional and academic aspirations.

Applicants must submit two academic letters of recommendation, one of which should be from a tenure-track faculty member associated with the applicant's most recent degree program. If the applicant's graduation year is greater than five years from the application date, then a letter from a recent or current employer may be substituted.

Applied Linguistics, PHD (EDAPLPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Applied Linguistics, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Applied linguistics combines research topics in the linguistics sciences and education to pursue principled approaches to language-related concerns. The applied linguistics PhD program at Arizona State University is focused on simultaneous and developmental bilingualism in children and adolescents. Faculty participate in the program from within multiple curricular units across the institution's four campuses. The program encourages transdisciplinary study, and its flexible requirements enable students to pursue those aspects of the disciplines that interest them the most. The program prepares students for entrance into the field as teachers, scholars and professionals.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Foundation Coursework (18 credit hours)

Overview of the Field: A three-credit course providing a survey of the field of applied linguistics is required. (3)

Linguistics: Coursework in theoretical linguistics, including one approved linguistics elective, is required. (15)

Teaching Internship (1 credit hour)

Colloquia (8 credit hours)

A four-semester sequence of two-credit colloquium meetings is required for students in the first two years.

Research Methods (6 credit hours)

Students must take two courses in research methods, selected in consultation with the advisor.

Research Specialization (33 credit hours)

In consultation with the program director, students take 11 three-credit courses in their field of specialization.

Breadth (6 credit hours)

Two courses in a secondary concentration area are required.

Dissertation (12 credit hours)

Additional Curriculum Information

An oral defense of the dissertation is required.

There must be a minimum of 54 credit hours beyond the master's degree level, including a minimum of 12 units of dissertation credit. All students in the program must satisfy 18 credit hours of foundation coursework.

Because applied linguistics is transdisciplinary in nature, applicants may differ from one another with regard to their prior experience and preparation. For instance, while some applicants may have substantial prior training in core theoretical linguistics (foundations) others may have considerable preparation in an area related to a supported concentration. Students should consult the program director for assistance in planning their degree programs. The program director may address potential redundancies in a student's program requirements with prior academic preparation by allocating a maximum of 30 credit hours from an awarded and approved graduate degree toward the applied linguistics program requirements, or the director may permit the student to take additional elective courses in lieu of introductory courses covered in an undergraduate program.

Language Requirement: Students in the applied linguistics doctoral program must demonstrate proficiency in a second language equivalent to two years of study. A language appropriate to the student's area of interest is selected in consultation with the advisor. The language requirement must be satisfied, by examination or coursework, prior to advancement to candidacy. Computer or other nonhuman languages may not be used to satisfy this requirement. Students for whom English is a second language may use their first language to satisfy the requirement by examination. Course credit used to satisfy the language requirement cannot be used to satisfy other program requirements and cannot be counted toward the total required 84 credits.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • resume or CV
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • academic writing sample relevant to the field
- ☐ • GRE general test scores
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. Students should see the Department of English website for specific details about English proficiency requirements.

Applied Mathematics, PHD (LAAPMPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Applied Mathematics, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

This degree program is intended for students with superior computational and mathematical modeling ability. It emphasizes a solid mathematical foundation and promotes creative scholarship in an application discipline. The School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences at Arizona State University has faculty in applied mathematics with outstanding transdisciplinary research programs and strong external funding.

Current research interests include mathematical epidemiology and mathematical ecology, mathematical neuroscience, environmental fluid dynamics and high performance computing, imaging and inverse problems, supply chain dynamics, control and optimization, computational methods for ordinary and partial differential equations, analysis of differential equations, and geophysical and environmental fluid dynamics.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Five core courses (15)
MAT 591 Seminar (3)
MAT 799 Dissertation (12)

Students must pass a written comprehensive examination and an oral dissertation prospectus. Each student must write a dissertation and defend it orally in front of five dissertation committee members. Students should see the department website for examination information.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in mathematics, applied mathematics, economics, engineering or a natural science from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of education and career goals
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • GRE (general) scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Additional eligibility requirements include:

- ☐ • be competitive in an applicant pool as evidenced by coursework in linear algebra (equivalent to ASU course MAT 342 or MAT 343) and advanced calculus (equivalent to ASU course MAT 371)
- ☐ • have scientific programming skills (desirable)

Applied Mathematics for the Life & Social Sciences, PHD (LAAMLPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Applied Mathematics for the Life and Social Sciences, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The applied mathematics for the life and social sciences PhD program focuses on the training of researchers working on scientific questions at the interface of the mathematical, life and social sciences. Graduates of the program will be making innovative and far-reaching scientific contributions that rely on the cutting-edge computational mathematical and modeling approaches. This program focuses on producing quantitative scientists and applied mathematicians conducting high-level, transdisciplinary research. The faculty includes mathematicians, statisticians, theoretical biologists and social scientists from five different schools at Arizona State University.

There is a high demand for first-rate scientists, researchers and faculty interested in meeting the challenges faced by communities in the 21st century and by research and planning programs at institutions with the mission to address global challenges. The health, environmental and natural resource challenges in Arizona and the nation are urgently in need of a large pool of researchers with these transdisciplinary skills.

There are three tracks a student can follow:

- ☐ • applied mathematics: a more in-depth focus on the tools as applied to the life and social sciences, i.e., on dynamical systems, computational and numerical methods, simulation and mathematical analysis

- ☐ • life sciences: focuses on understanding the tools for representing the structure and operation of complex biological and ecological processes
- ☐ • social sciences: focuses on understanding the tools for representing the structure and operation of complex social systems and processes

By offering courses that enhance transdisciplinary exchanges and collaboration among the faculty and students interested in addressing questions of social relevance, the program builds upon foundations already established in:

- ☐ • bioinformatics
- ☐ • computational sciences
- ☐ • ecology
- ☐ • genomics
- ☐ • mathematical analysis
- ☐ • mathematical epidemiology
- ☐ • nonlinear dynamics
- ☐ • population dynamics
- ☐ • social science fields

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students entering with a master's degree in a related field may be granted up to 30 credit hours toward the 84 credit hour total required for the doctorate degree. This leaves 30 credit hours of coursework, 12 credit hours of research credit and 12 hours of dissertation credit (54 credit hours total) to be earned post-admission.

Students entering the program without a master's degree must earn an additional 30 hours of graduate credit, produce a research portfolio which is formally evaluated by a faculty committee and present that research in a public forum before continuing in the later stage of the doctoral program.

All students must maintain a 3.20 (scale is 4.00 = "A") average GPA in their courses and complete degree requirements per the program's satisfactory progress policy.

All students are required to complete a sequence of core courses. The core competencies consist of:

- ☐ • core math skills
- ☐ • deterministic modeling or computational methods
- ☐ • math biology
- ☐ • statistics and probability
- ☐ • stochastic modeling

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution. A master's degree in the social sciences (e.g., anthropology, gender studies, geography, sociology), life sciences or related fields (e.g., biology, ecology, genomics), applied mathematics, mathematics or statistics is preferred.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement outlining educational and professional goals
- ☐ • current curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants may submit an optional scholarly writing sample, not to exceed 20-30 double-spaced pages to be included in their application materials.

Prior to admission, students should have completed, at the undergraduate junior or senior level, a minimum of the following:

- ☐ • 15 hours of mathematics or statistics
- ☐ • nine hours of life sciences and social sciences coursework at the senior or college graduate level
- ☐ • no fewer than three hours each of life sciences and social sciences coursework

Asian Languages and Civilizations (Chinese), MA (LACHINAMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Asian Languages/Civilizations (Chinese), MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The Chinese graduate program in the School of International Letters and Cultures offers an MA degree with a focus in one of two areas:

- ☐ • area 1: literature, linguistics and culture
- ☐ • area 2: pedagogy

Area one seeks to prepare students for further academic training, for entrance to professional schools in such fields as law, business or journalism, and for a general level of knowledge about the languages and cultures of China as an asset to a professional career. Area two is intended for students whose major interest is in teaching modern Chinese in K-16 environments.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis, or 30 credit hours including the required applied project course (CHI 593).

The plan of study for the master's degree includes a minimum of 30 credit hours of graduate-level work as approved by the candidate's supervisory committee, a thesis or an applied project option. The plan must include a 500-level bibliography and research methods course offered by the department. When approved by the candidate's supervisory committee, nine hours of advanced-level work in another language or in closely related courses may be included in the plan. Students who are primarily interested in teaching at the secondary or community college levels may select a plan of study with a concentration in language pedagogy.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in Chinese, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

The writing sample should represent the applicant's thinking and writing skills (preferably written in Chinese, on a topic connected with the language or Chinese culture).

Candidates for the master's degree should, upon entrance, present the equivalent of an undergraduate major in the language in which the degree is sought. Those who lack this background but who show strong potential and meet the Graduate College admission requirements, including those with regard to English proficiency, may be admitted to a graduate program on a provisional basis, pending removal of specified deficiencies. These deficiencies must be completed in addition to the regular plan of study for the master's degree.

Asian Languages and Civilizations (Japanese), MA (LAJAPANMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Asian Languages/Civilizations (Japanese), MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The Asian languages faculty in the School of International Letters and Cultures offer a graduate program leading to an MA in Asian languages and civilizations (Japanese). In addition to preparing some students for further academic training, the program helps to prepare students for jobs relating to Japan (in fields such as law, business or journalism) and for entrance into professional schools.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis, or 30 credit hours including the required applied project course (JPN 593).

The plan of study for the MA includes a minimum of 30 credit hours of graduate-level work and a thesis, as approved by the candidate's supervisory committee, or 27 credit hours of coursework and three credit hours of applied project. The plan must include a 500-level bibliography and research methods course offered by the department. When approved by the candidate's supervisory committee, nine hours of advanced-level work in another language or in closely related courses may be included in the plan.

Students who are primarily interested in teaching at the secondary or community college levels may select a plan of study with an area of study in language pedagogy. Students seeking a master's degree in Asian languages and civilization should consult their Graduate College representative. In keeping with the idea of in-situ experience as a key ingredient for advanced intellectual understanding, all degree candidates must have spent at least nine continuous months in a Japanese language environment within four years of entering the program.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in Japanese, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. The writing sample should represent the applicant's thinking and writing skills (preferably written in Japanese, on a topic connected with the language or Japanese culture). The personal statement should highlight the applicant's motivations and skills and indicate why they are interested in the Japanese graduate program.

Candidates for the program should, upon entrance, present the equivalent of an undergraduate major in the language in which the degree is sought. Those who lack this background but who show strong potential and meet the Graduate College admission requirements may be admitted to a graduate program on a conditional basis, pending removal of specified deficiencies. These deficiencies must be completed in addition to the regular plan of study for the master's degree.

Students should see the School of International Letters and Cultures website for more information.

Asian Studies (certificate), Certificate (LAASIANCE)

Online Degree Search Title: Asian Studies (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The graduate certificate program in Asian studies offers graduate students a transdisciplinary specialization in Asian language and area studies. The certificate is available in two tracks: the East Asia track that covers the area that includes China, Japan and Korea, and the Southeast Asia track that covers the areas of Indonesia, Laos, Thailand and Vietnam.

Degree Requirements:

18 credit hours.

Required Core (6 credit hours)

two courses at the 500 level or above dealing with Asian content from a single discipline

Electives (6 credit hours)

two courses at the 500 level or above dealing with Asian content from a discipline other than that chosen for the core courses

Other Requirements (6 credit hours)

language proficiency requirement: two courses at the 400 level or above in one Asian language (Chinese, Indonesian, Japanese, Korean, Thai, Vietnamese)

Culminating Experience (0 credit hours)

a thesis or capstone project on a topic related to the student's region of emphasis and selected in consultation with the student's faculty mentor

Additional Curricular Information

Students work closely with a faculty advisor from the Center for Asian Research to develop a cohesive curriculum tailored to their individual goals and interests.

Some of the coursework from the discipline in which the student is earning a graduate degree may be used to satisfy these requirements.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Graduate students currently enrolled in any discipline may pursue a certificate in Asian studies in conjunction with their degree program.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. The Graduate College requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (PBT) or 80 (iBT).

Astrophysics, MS (LAASPHMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Astrophysics and Astronomy, MS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The program provides fundamental graduate training in astrophysics and astronomy. It prepares candidates for further graduate study or for careers in related fields, such as scientific staff positions at government laboratories, teaching at the community college level and technical positions in industry.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis.

Required Core (18 credit hours)

AST 521 Stars and Interstellar Medium I (3)

AST 522 Stars and Interstellar Medium II (3)

AST 523 Stars and Interstellar Medium III (3)

AST 531 Galaxies and Cosmology I (3)
AST 532 Galaxies and Cosmology II (3)
AST 533 Galaxies and Cosmology III (3)

Electives or Research (3 credit hours)

Other Requirements (3 credit hours)
GLG 500 Earth and Space Exploration Colloquium (1)
GLG 591 Seminar Topic: Faculty Research Seminar (1)
AST 591 Seminar - Various Topics (1)

Culminating Experience (6 credit hours)
AST 599 Thesis (6)

Additional Curricular Information

Twenty credit hours are from structured courses. The student, with the approval of the advisor and supervisory committee (formed upon enrollment), selects courses that make up a coherent plan of study.

The "Other Requirements" courses are combined with additional work in core fields such as physics or mathematics and provide comprehensive graduate training in the major fields of astrophysics. All students in the School of Earth and Space Exploration are also required to take three one-credit hour seminars.

Students are expected to exhibit mastery of topics in these core fields and may be required by their advisor and committee to include such courses in their plan of study. Specific course requirements may be waived by the advisor and the graduate oversight committee if the student has successfully completed equivalent courses at universities elsewhere. Individual plans of study that include work in related fields may also be designed with advisor approval, subject to the requirements of the Graduate College.

The master's degree plan of study also includes six credit hours of thesis credit or AST 599. Students must follow the Graduate College policies and procedures for admission to the program and for fulfilling the requirements of the degree.

A thesis based on observational, theoretical, laboratory or literature research in astrophysics is required.

A final oral examination in defense of the thesis is required.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admissions application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • scores on the general GRE
- ☐ • scores on the physics GRE
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Students should see the program website for application deadlines.

Astrophysics, PHD (LAASTPHPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Astrophysics, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in astrophysics is designed to develop creative scholarship and prepare students for professional careers in astrophysics, astronomy or related fields.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students may be admitted into the program with a bachelor's degree or master's degree in a related field. Up to 30 credit hours of master's degree-level work in a related field can be accepted toward the fulfillment of the doctoral requirements.

The plan of study for the doctorate program will be selected with the recommendation of the student's supervisory committee. Each plan of study must include 12 credit hours of dissertation and a minimum of 25 credit hours of coursework. For students in the astrophysics program, required coursework includes:

AST 521 Stars and Interstellar Medium I (3)
 AST 522 Stars and Interstellar Medium II (3)
 AST 523 Stars and Interstellar Medium III (3)
 AST 531 Galaxies and Cosmology I (3)
 AST 532 Galaxies and Cosmology II (3)
 AST 533 Galaxies and Cosmology III (3)

These courses are combined with additional work in core fields such as physics or mathematics and provide comprehensive graduate training in the major fields of astrophysics. All students in the School of Earth and Space Exploration are also required to take two one-credit seminars:

GLG 500 SESE Colloquium (1)
 GLG 591 Faculty Research Seminar (1)

Students may transfer in coursework under the Graduate College preadmission policy with advisor, graduate oversight committee and Graduate College approval if the student has successfully completed equivalent courses at universities elsewhere. Individual plans of study that include work in related fields may also be designated with advisor approval, subject to the requirements of the Graduate College.

Comprehensive examination: The student's supervisory committee will determine the content of the comprehensive examination, consisting of a written and an oral examination.

Dissertation requirements: A dissertation is required, which is based on original work demonstrating creativity in research and scholarly proficiency in the subject area.

Final examination: A final oral examination in defense of the dissertation is required.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Atmospheric Science (certificate), Certificate (LAATMOSCE)

Online Degree Search Title: Atmospheric Science (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The transdisciplinary certificate program in atmospheric science is administered by an executive committee composed of faculty from the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. The objective of this program is to recognize Arizona State University graduate students who complete a dissertation on a topic related to the atmospheric or oceanic sciences under the supervision of a faculty member from one of the cooperating departments.

Degree Requirements:

16 credit hours.

A minimum of 16 credit hours will be required in order to qualify for the atmospheric science certificate, consisting of:

- three three-credit-hour courses from a list of courses in the core disciplines (9)
- two three-credit-hour courses from a list of electives at the 400 level or above (6)
- a capstone seminar (1)

Considering the diversity of courses and in order to ensure a transdisciplinary flavor, all prospective recipients will have their certificate program approved by the certificate executive committee. Certificates will only be awarded to students who are enrolled in an MA, MS, MNS or PhD program at ASU. The student's thesis or dissertation must also be related to some aspect of atmospheric science.

The core courses are offered at least once every other year, so the certificate may be completed within two years.

Specific requirements are:

- approval by the certificate committee of the student's proposed course selection
- completion of one course from each of the core disciplines with a grade of "B" (3.00) or better
- completion of two courses from the list of electives with a grade of "B" (3.00) or better
- completion of the capstone seminar, which is one credit hour
- completion of a dissertation on a topic related to the atmospheric or oceanic sciences

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Program Description:

Students earning an MS degree in biochemistry in the School of Molecular Sciences are trained in the fundamental aspects of the discipline, but most will also choose to learn by joining transdisciplinary teams that work on larger, mission-based contemporary problems in areas such as:

- ☐ • biogeochemistry
- ☐ • energy and sustainability
- ☐ • fundamental chemical biology
- ☐ • materials and nanoscience
- ☐ • medicine and health
- ☐ • structure function and dynamics

The master's degree program in biochemistry in the School of Molecular Sciences provides students with the training they need to solve biological problems at the molecular scale and to contribute to research in current challenging societal issues.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis.

500-level or above courses as approved by the school (12)

BCH 501 or CHM 501 Seminar or other seminar course as approved by the school (4)

BCH 592 Research courses (8)

BCH 599 Thesis (6)

Additional Curricular Information

The program consists of coursework and seminars selected by the student in consultation with the student's supervisory committee and based on the student's area of research. A written thesis is required and must be successfully defended during a public final oral defense. Students must maintain a minimum GPA of 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") or better.

A program fee in the amount of $300 per semester is required in addition to the normal tuition costs.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in chemistry, biochemistry, or closely related field from a regionally accredited institution.

Biology (Biology and Society), MS (LABIOSMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Biology (Biology and Society), MS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

In the biology and society concentration of the MS program in biology, students examine topics where biology intersects with society. The concentration program tailors individual plans of study to individual needs and interests, with a solid grounding in life and related sciences and with a rigorous analytical and interdisciplinary education. Three tracks offer suggested courses for those wishing to focus on these areas: bioethics, policy and law; ecology, economics and ethics of the environment; and history and philosophy of science

The bioethics, policy and law track trains students in the pressing moral, policy and legal issues raised by the biosciences and biomedicine and in the disciplinary methods necessary to address these issues. Ecology, economics and ethics of the environment trains students in the theory and empirical methods for understanding, analyzing and shaping policy for coupled human-natural systems. The history and philosophy of science track trains students in the conceptual foundations of science, especially the epistemological and methodological assumptions that shape science and its progress.

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior and senior years, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis.

An individual student plan is developed in consultation with the student's advisor and committee.
Academic Catalog Archive 2017-2018

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • academic record form
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

Students are expected to have completed the equivalent of core requirements for an undergraduate major in biology or a related discipline (typically evolution, genetics and other courses appropriate to the student's particular interests). Students without an undergraduate-level competency in the sciences may be considered for conditional admission to the biology and society concentration.

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency

GRE scores of 50% verbal and 70% quantitative are desired.

Biology (Biology and Society), PHD (LABIOSPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Biology (Biology and Society), PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

In the biology and society concentration of the PhD in biology, students examine topics where biology intersects with society. The concentration tailors individual plans of study to individual needs and interests, with a solid grounding in life sciences and related sciences and with a rigorous analytical and interdisciplinary education. Three tracks offer suggested courses for those wishing to focus on these areas: bioethics, policy and law; ecology, economics and ethics of the environment; and, history and philosophy of science.

The bioethics, policy and law track trains students in the pressing moral, policy and legal issues raised by the biosciences and biomedicine and in the disciplinary methods necessary to address these issues. Ecology, economics and ethics of the environment trains students in the theory and empirical methods for understanding, analyzing and shaping policy for coupled human-natural systems. The history and philosophy of science track trains students in the conceptual foundations of science, especially the epistemological and methodological assumptions that shape science and its progress.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Biology (Complex Adaptive Systems Science), PHD (LABIOCPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Biology (Complex Adaptive Systems Science), PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in biology with a concentration in complex adaptive systems science trains the next generation of scientists in advanced concepts and methods needed for approaching diverse phenomena in the social and life sciences. The program is tightly integrated with diverse, ongoing university-wide research on complex adaptive system science at Arizona State University and emphasizes the value of a complex adaptive perspective to give better insight and a more active role in seeking solutions to a broad array of critical issues facing our society today. Students will be fluent in the common language of complexity while also receiving a solid foundation in the domain knowledge of existing academic disciplines.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Student doctoral dissertations should include the application of complex adaptive systems concepts and methods in their field of study, and candidates typically will have a member of the complex adaptive systems science graduate faculty as a member of the doctoral supervisory committee.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Biomimicry, MS (LABMYMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Biomimicry, MS

Campus: Online

Program Description:

ASU, in conjunction with Biomimicry 3.8, has developed an MS program designed to empower change agents passionate about a world mentored by life's genius. Graduates work toward innovative and sustainable solutions to pressing global challenges --- like the way business is conducted, buildings and products are designed, governments are run, health care is provided and goods are manufactured to how future generations will be educated --- drawing upon time-tested sustainable solutions of the last 3.8 billion years. The Master of Science program in biomimicry is designed to prepare students to facilitate the practice of biomimicry across corporate, government, education and nongovernment organization sectors. Students will gain biomimicry experience in biome-based applications, business case studies, biological strategy research and in each student's self-designed biomimicry project in the student's chosen career field.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a portfolio.

Required Core (13 credit hours)

BMV 501 Essentials of Biomimicry (1)

BMV 502 Life's Principles (4)

BMV 503 Biology Taught Functionally (4)

BMV 504 Biomimicry Thinking (4)

Electives or Research (11 credit hours)

Other Requirements (6 credit hours; choose 3)

BMV 530 Virtual Design Lab Practicum (2)

BMV 580 Topic: BioBrainstorm Practicum (2)

BMV 580 Topic: Biomimicry Case Study Practicum (2)

BMV 580 Topic: Biomimicry Genius of Place Practicum (2)

Chemistry, MS (LACHEMMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Chemistry, MS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Students earning an MS degree in chemistry in the School of Molecular Sciences are trained in the foundation disciplines of analytical, organic, physical, inorganic, and environmental chemistry and geochemistry, but most will also choose to learn by joining transdisciplinary research teams that work on larger, mission-based contemporary problems in areas such as:

- ☐ • energy and sustainability
- ☐ • frontiers of chemical measurement
- ☐ • fundamental molecular science
- ☐ • geologic and biospheric science
- ☐ • materials and nanoscience
- ☐ • medicine and health
- ☐ • structure function and dynamics

The master's degree program in chemistry provides students with the training they need to solve molecular scale problems and to contribute to research in current challenging societal issues.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis.

500-level or above courses as approved by the school (12)

Communication, PHD (LACOMMOPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Communication, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The graduate faculty members of communication offer a transdisciplinary graduate program leading to the PhD in communication. Concentrations are available in interpersonal, intercultural and organizational communication. This program also provides coursework and resources in rhetoric and performance studies.

The program is housed in the Hugh Downs School of Human Communication and is designed to prepare scholars for research-oriented careers in universities and in the public or private sectors. Students are provided training in communication theory, research methodology and a specialization in one or more areas of concentration. The goal of the program is to meet the needs of students whose interests transcend traditional disciplinary boundaries.

Degree Requirements:

96 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

The PhD requires a minimum of 66 hours beyond an appropriate master's degree.

Coursework for a typical plan of study is distributed as follows:

required core courses (6)
area of concentration (36)
COM 792 Research (12)
COM 799 Dissertation (12)

Students are required to demonstrate proficiency in research methods (statistics, computer languages, content analysis methods, interviewing, participant observation, etc.) which, in the judgment of the supervisory committee, is needed for the student's dissertation research.

Students are required to take three credit hours of COM 792 Prospectus/Dissertation Practicum and three credit hours of COM 792 Seminar Assistant.

Students must take at least one of the three advanced methods courses:

COM 607 Contemporary Rhetorical Methods (3)
COM 608 Multivariate Statistical Analysis of Data in Communication (3)
COM 609 Advanced Qualitative Research Methods in Communication (3)

The required theory course is COM 604 Theory Construction in Communication (3).

Two transdisciplinary theory and methodology courses are required of all students in the program.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official GRE scores

Computer-Assisted Language Learning (Certificate), Certificate (LACALLGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Computer-Assisted Language Learning (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The graduate certificate program in computer-assisted language learning focuses on the application of technology in foreign language teaching and research. It provides the practical, hands-on skills needed to create and evaluate learning and teaching materials with new computer-based technologies. The certificate program teaches students how to use technology effectively to facilitate instructed second-language acquisition and how to develop, manage and maintain a cutting-edge language computing facility. It also provides students with a solid theoretical and pedagogical framework for the integration of technology into the foreign language curriculum and provides them with the tools necessary to teach language courses in either a hybrid or distance-learning environment.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours including a capstone course (ENG 597).

Required Core (6 credit hours)

ENG 557 Computer-Assisted Language Learning (3)

SLC 510 Computer-Assisted Language Learning Praxis (3)

Restricted Electives (3 credit hours)

LIN 520 Second Language Acquisition Theories (3) OR SLC 515 Second Language Acquisition (3)

Electives (6 credit hours)

Additional Curriculum Information

For restricted electives, students may select an approved second language acquisition course equivalent to LIN 520 or SLC 515 with department approval.

Admission Requirements:

All applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, with a major or minor in foreign language study, English, or English education, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Students may apply for admission to the certificate program once they have been accepted into a graduate degree program in the School of International Letters and Cultures or other school or department at ASU.

Applicants must have an undergraduate major in the language they will teach or be native speakers of the language they will teach, or they must have a minor or ASU minor equivalency as determined by SILC policies (18 upper-division credit hours, including at least three credit hours from the 400 level in their undergraduate program). Current graduate student applicants who do not meet the language requirements must be enrolled in a foreign language graduate program, the Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (MTESOL) program, an applied linguistics graduate program, or a closely related field (as determined by the directors). A teaching certification is not required as this certificate is open to all graduate students with an interest in computer-assisted language learning and meet the admission requirements.

Applicants must have completed an introduction to linguistics or applied linguistics course at the time of application (to be verified by the certificate directors.) The course does not count toward the 15 credit hours required for the certificate.

Applicants must complete a language teaching methods course (to be verified by the certificate directors.) This course also may be taken at ASU prior to completion of the certificate program. The course does not count toward the 15 credit hours required for the certificate.

Creative Writing, MFA (LACWRITMFA)

Online Degree Search Title: Creative Writing, MFA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The MFA in creative writing at ASU has always been an unswervingly student-first program. Through small classes, intimate workshops, or one-to-one mentoring, the centuries-old apprenticeship model thrives within the New American University. Poets and fiction writers work with an outstanding faculty that has published more than 80 books and has garnered national and international attention through awards that include:

- ☐ • Guggenheim, Howard Foundation, and National Endowment for the Arts fellowships
- ☐ • Pulitzer Prize
- ☐ • International Griffin Poetry Prize
- ☐ • Walt Whitman Award from the Academy of American Poets
- ☐ • two Medals of Achievement from the National Society of Arts and Letters

Additionally, in concert with the Master of Fine Arts program, the Virginia G. Piper Center for Creative Writing offers students a variety of creative and global fellowship opportunities each year, including two teaching fellowships in Singapore; four to five global residency fellowships to study and write abroad; one to two fellowships to provide summer funding for writing; and other generous forms of support that include graduate assistantships and travel scholarships.

Furthermore, students have access to a variety of professional development opportunities, including serving on the editorial board of an international literary journal, Hayden's Ferry Review, and internships with Four Way Books.

Degree Requirements:

48 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, and an applied project (ENG 593).

The creative writing program requires 48 credit hours of study evenly divided between writing courses and literature courses designed to inform that writing.

While students are expected to satisfy these requirements in the genre in which they were accepted, the program encourages cross-genre study and electives can include courses taken outside of the creative writing program, even outside the English department.

A written comprehensive exam and an applied project are required.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution. Applicants should have an undergraduate major in English or creative writing; however, exceptional students who do not have either of these undergraduate majors may be admitted on the basis of writing excellence.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • creative manuscript
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. Students should see the Department of English website for specific details about English proficiency requirements.

Applicants applying for funding must also submit a teaching assistant application and statement of teaching philosophy. Students should see the Department of English website for specific details. TA applicants also must submit an academic writing sample.

The personal statement should include the applicant's writing background, intended area of specialization, a brief self-evaluation of recent work and the applicant's goals. The statement should be single-spaced, up to 1000 words.

Applicants must also submit three copies of the creative manuscript, up to 20 pages of poetry or up to 30 pages of prose.

The three letters of recommendation must consist of one copy of each letter from three recommenders.

The personal statement, the creative manuscript copies, and the letters of recommendation must be sent directly to:

Critical Theory (certificate), Certificate (LACRTGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Critical Theory (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe, West

Program Description:

The certificate program in critical theory provides students with historical and thematic approaches to critical theory and promotes the skills required for the interpretation and production of concepts based in continental philosophy and used broadly in the arts, humanities and social sciences. Students learn about key thinkers and movements in critical theory, which offer the tools for creating a critical engagement with society and culture, for interpreting social and cultural objects and texts, and for the production of new theoretical ideas. This transdisciplinary certificate program provides opportunities to study theoretical approaches as applied across a wide range of arts, humanities and social science disciplines.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours and a Portfolio.

Required Core (3 credit hours)

ENG 502 Contemporary Critical Theories (3)

Electives (12 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (0 credit hours)

Portfolio (0)

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

The graduate certificate in critical theory is available to all ASU graduate students irrespective of their major and to nondegree graduate students and working professionals provided they meet eligibility criteria. Sample majors include English; women and gender studies; art history; and arts, media and engineering.

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. Specific details about English proficiency requirements are available on the Department of English website.

Eligible applicants must have taken a course in critical theory or related field taken at the upper-division undergraduate level (such as ENG 401 Topics in Critical Theory) or at the graduate level (such as ENG 502 Contemporary Critical Theories).

After submitting the online application, applicants must email unofficial transcripts, a brief statement of purpose explaining the student's areas of interest in critical theory, and resume to the graduate program manager in the Department of English, with this subject line: Critical Theory Certificate Application.

Digital Humanities (Certificate), Certificate (LACDHGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Digital Humanities (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The graduate certificate program in digital humanities provides students with methods and skills central to conducting humanities research that employs both qualitative and quantitative approaches. The certificate program is designed to promote cross-disciplinary study in humanities and social and computational sciences, and is open to students in all disciplines. The program features training in transdisciplinary collaboration, project-based communication skills, critical theory and the simultaneous application of quantitative and qualitative problem-solving skills. This certificate highlights an area of excellence within ASU that has emerged across its colleges, schools and departments and is integral to the effort of transforming the humanities at ASU into new transdisciplinary configurations.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours including an applied project course (CDH 593).

Required Core (3 credit hours)

CDH 501 Digital Humanities: Critical Theory and Methods (3)

Electives (6 credit hours)

Other Requirement (3 credit hours)

CDH 580 Practicum: Computational and Digital Humanities Lab (3)

Culminating Experience (3 credit hours)

CDH 593 Applied Project (3)

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Admission is open to all ASU graduate students enrolled in an existing master's or doctoral program and in good standing. Students who are interested in transdisciplinary work are particularly well-suited for this certificate program.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. The program requires a TOEFL score of at least 600 (PBT) or 100 (iBT).

Students will be asked to outline a desired transdisciplinary area of inquiry. For example, a student who works on digital rhetoric and literacy may want to understand how to create and manage social media data sets or how to create a social media application. Alternatively, a student in School of International Letters and Cultures may want to study digital archives of Slavic literature and may need to understand how digital archives are enmeshed in national and capitalist networks.

East Asian Languages and Civilizations (Chinese), PHD (LAEALCPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: East Asian Languages and Civilization, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in East Asian languages and civilizations is a research-intensive, transdisciplinary, area-based degree in the study of traditional and modern languages and cultures of China and Japan. Students may focus on:

- ☐ • comparative cultural studies
- ☐ • cultural history or linguistics
- ☐ • literary criticism
- ☐ • literature
- ☐ • thoughts

In every case, students will be expected to acquire a solid grounding in the classical and modern versions in the primary language of their area.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, two foreign language exams, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

The program requires a minimum of 84 credit hours, of which 30 credit hours from an earned master's degree program that is directly relevant to the doctoral program may be counted toward that requirement. However, a minimum of 30 credit hours of coursework and 24 credit hours of research are required beyond the master's degree level. If a student already has a master's degree, it will not be necessary to complete the existing School of International Letters and Cultures master's degree program in Asian languages and civilizations. However, the student will be required to satisfy all course requirements for the master's degree.

All students, whether specializing in Chinese or Japanese, must comply with the following requirements:

- ☐ • complete a minimum of six courses selected from advanced courses in literature, religions or intellectual history
- ☐ • complete five seminars
- ☐ • complete SLC 500 Theory and Methodology in East Asian Literature and Culture
- ☐ • complete 12 core requirements
- ☐ • submit a dissertation and pass an oral defense of that dissertation
- ☐ • demonstrate reading knowledge of a second pertinent Asian language and one pertinent European language, aside from English
- ☐ • pass written and oral comprehensive examinations in four fields, three of which must be selected from areas that are well-represented within the East Asian languages and civilizations doctoral graduate curriculum

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution. Applicants to the Chinese concentration should have completed at least three years of modern Chinese and one year of classical Chinese. Applicants to the Japanese concentration should have completed at least three years of modern Japanese and one semester of classical Japanese.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.30 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.30 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • speech sample in Chinese
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

The writing sample should represent the applicant's thinking as well as writing skills (on a topic connected with the language or Chinese culture, no more than 15 pages).

The speech sample should be a recorded message approximately four minutes in length, in Chinese, on a topic of the applicant's choosing. (Applicants are asked to please not read the message. This is to help the committee evaluate the level of proficiency, and the message should realistically reflect the applicant's spoken Chinese.) Recordings should be emailed to the SILC graduate program coordinator.

Applicants should see the department website for more information.

English (Literature), PHD (LAENLITPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: English (Literature), PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in English with a concentration in literature promotes the study of the production, distribution and reception of texts; of their linguistic, rhetorical and literary structures and functions; and of the internal and external forces shaping literature. The program offers courses that examine chronology and genre while also considering the importance of embodiment. Many courses explore issues relating to gender, class, race and ethnicity. The program prepares students for entrance into the profession as teachers and scholars.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a foreign language exam, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

A student with an appropriate master's degree must complete a minimum of 54 credit hours of approved graduate work, which includes 12 credit hours of dissertation, provided the student's master's degree is accepted by the supervisory committee and the academic unit. Research hours may be used toward coursework in consultation with the advisor. A student without an appropriate master's degree must complete 84 credit hours of work at ASU. At the advisor's discretion, students may include up to 12 credit hours of appropriate, graduate-level coursework undertaken at another university and not previously counted toward any other degree.

Specifically required are six credit hours in theory courses and ENG 501 Approaches to Research. Students must complete eight graduate courses in any of the following categories:

- ☐ • cultural studies
- ☐ • ethnic studies
- ☐ • gender studies
- ☐ • genre
- ☐ • history and structure of the English language
- ☐ • literature 1500-1660
- ☐ • literature 1660-1900
- ☐ • literature since 1900
- ☐ • literature to 1500
- ☐ • postcolonial or anglophone literatures

Students must take at least five graduate seminars at the 600 level en route to the doctorate, at least three of which must be taken in the doctoral program. Up to 12 credit hours taken outside the department may be counted toward the degree. Students should consult with their supervisory committees when choosing electives.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.50 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

English (Writing, Rhetorics, and Literacies), PHD (LAENRHTPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: English (Writing, Rhetorics and Literacies), PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in English with a concentration in writing, rhetorics and literacies promotes the study of rhetorical strategies, production, distribution and interpretation of oral, written, digital, visual, discursive, material and symbolic texts.

Students study the history, theories and methods of inquiry as well as pragmatic and social actions of writing, rhetoric and literacies. With theories and methods from both historical and contemporary contexts, students learn strategies for inquiry; the ways in which communication creates knowledge and action; and how communication is constructed, circulated, reacted to and repurposed over time and across space. Program requirements are designed to encourage a full understanding of theoretical and applied aspects of writing studies, rhetorical studies and literacy studies. Students also will be provided many opportunities to explore the intersections and tensions that exist within and between the three different areas of inquiry.

The program encourages transdisciplinary study, and its flexible requirements enable students to pursue those aspects of the disciplines that interest them the most. The program prepares students for entrance into the field as teachers, scholars and professionals.

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in a related discipline, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Applicants must submit the following:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • academic record form
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

A GRE score of 50% verbal and 70% quantitative is desired.

Environmental Social Science, PHD (LAESSPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Environmental Social Science, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in environmental social science is one of the few doctoral degree programs in the U.S. that draws on the premise that reducing human impacts and developing more sustainable environmental practices will be difficult, if not impossible, to achieve without a focus on the social dynamics of environmental issues using critical social science perspectives.

The program is organized around theoretically based conceptual domains:

- ☐ • culture and the environment
- ☐ • environmental hazards and vulnerability
- ☐ • environmental justice
- ☐ • human environment impacts
- ☐ • political ecology
- ☐ • science and technology studies

This is the basis for addressing various topical foci, including urban environments, technologies and their consequences, landscapes, institutions, and health and the environment.

Students will work with faculty who have expertise in a broad range of fields including:

- ☐ • archaeology
- ☐ • community resources
- ☐ • cultural and medical anthropology
- ☐ • demography
- ☐ • environmental history
- ☐ • geographic information systems
- ☐ • human and physical geography
- ☐ • planning
- ☐ • public affairs
- ☐ • science and technology studies
- ☐ • sociology

The program will train students to move into teaching and research positions or to assume leadership roles in government, industry or nongovernmental organizations.

Coursework for the degree is focused on developing real-world skills and a solid grasp of complex social science approaches to environmental issues. Students work closely with their committee to develop a curriculum appropriate to their chosen interests and career goals.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students entering with a master's degree in a related field may be granted up to 30 credit hours toward the 84 credit hour total required for the doctorate degree program. This leaves 30 credit hours of coursework, 12 credit hours of research credit and 12 hours of dissertation credit (54 credit hours total) to be earned post-admission.

Students entering without a master's degree must earn an additional 30 hours of graduate credit, produce a research portfolio which is formally evaluated by a faculty committee and present that research in a public forum before continuing on in the later stage of the doctorate degree program.

All students must maintain a 3.20 average GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in their courses and complete degree requirements per the program's satisfactory progress policy.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution. Undergraduate coursework in the social sciences (e.g., geography, political science, sociology, anthropology, planning or history) is not a prerequisite for admission but is generally advisable. Students may be admitted without such a background and may be required to acquire knowledge of the social sciences in a manner to be specified at the time of admission.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement outlining educational and professional goals
- ☐ • current curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants may submit an optional scholarly writing sample, not to exceed 20 to 30 double-spaced pages, to be included in the application materials.

Coursework for the degree is focused on developing real-world skills and a solid grasp of complex social science approaches to environmental issues. Students work closely with their committee to develop a curriculum appropriate to their chosen interests and career goals.

The complex adaptive systems science doctoral concentration trains the next generation of scientists in advanced concepts and methods needed for approaching diverse phenomena in the social and life sciences. The program is tightly integrated with diverse, ongoing, university-wide research on complex adaptive systems science at Arizona State University and emphasizes the value of a complex adaptive systems perspective to give better insight and a more active role in seeking solutions to a broad array of critical issues facing our society today. Students will be fluent in the common language of complexity while also receiving a solid foundation in the domain knowledge of existing academic disciplines.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (9 credit hours)

Concentration (12 credit hours)

Electives or Research (21 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (12 credit hours)

Additional Curriculum Information

When approved by the student's supervisory committee and the Graduate College, this program allows 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree to be used for this degree. If students do not have a previously awarded master's degree, the 30 hours of coursework will be made up of electives and research.

Students entering without a master's degree must earn an additional 30 hours of graduate credit, produce a research portfolio which is formally evaluated by a faculty committee and present that research in a public forum before continuing on in the later stage of the doctorate.

All students must maintain a 3.20 (scale is 4.00 = "A") average GPA in their courses and complete degree requirements per the program's satisfactory progress policy.

Student doctoral dissertations should include the application of complex adaptive systems concepts and methods in their field of study and typically will have a member of the complex adaptive systems science graduate faculty as a member of their doctoral supervisory committee.

Students should see the academic unit for a complete list of approved electives and concentration courses.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

The program will train students to move into teaching and research positions or to assume leadership roles in government, industry or in nongovernmental organizations.

Coursework for the degree is focused on developing real-world skills and a solid grasp of complex social science approaches to environmental issues. Students work closely with their committee to develop a curriculum appropriate to their chosen interests and career goals.

The concentration in urbanism will leverage the varied interests in urbanism and help emerging scholars as they attempt to compare, contrast and take stock of urbanism. Working with faculty from across a range of departments and programs at ASU, doctoral students will be able to capture the creative tensions that scholarship on urbanism has inspired in order to stimulate a provocative, constructive kind of inquiry.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students entering with a master's degree in a related field may be granted up to 30 credit hours toward the 84 credit hour total required for the doctorate. All students must maintain a 3.20 average GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in their courses and complete degree requirements per the program's satisfactory progress policy.

All students entering the program complete 18 credit hours of core classes in conceptual domains and topical foci. For the concentration in urbanism, 15 credit hours will be selected from an approved list of applicable courses related to urbanism. Some of the environmental social science core courses also count toward the concentration in urbanism. These courses will include the core urbanism course GCU 516 as well as one course from each of the four urbanism clusters:

- ☐ • built form
- ☐ • culture and society
- ☐ • natural environment
- ☐ • institutions and governance

Additional credit hours come from courses in research design, technical expertise and electives. Students may select from a substantial range of courses to satisfy noncore requirements.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution. Undergraduate coursework in the social sciences (e.g., geography, political science, sociology, anthropology, planning or history) is not a prerequisite for admission but is generally advisable. Evolutionary Biology, PHD (LAEVOPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Evolutionary Biology, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Evolutionary biology is a transdisciplinary graduate degree program that will provide doctorate-level training in the historical, conceptual, empirical and quantitative aspects of biological evolution. Evolution cuts across the biological sciences in ways that few other foci do. It allows integration of information and patterns across levels of organization, informs the theoretical foundations of subfields ranging from population genetics to systematics to ecosystem ecology, and provides bridges between temporal and spatial scales.

Forgoing emphases on particular taxa or methods, the program focuses on understanding the patterns and processes that have and continue to shape life on Earth, training the next generation of scientists to use this knowledge to meet present and future challenges to the biosphere and human health in the face of increasing environmental perturbation.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (9 credit hours)

BIO 614 Biometry (4)

EVO 601 Principles of Evolution (3)

EVO 610 Research Areas of Evolution (2)

Electives (9 credit hours)

The program advisor as well as the student's advisor will determine these courses in conjunction with the student.

Other Requirements (54 credit hours)

research, coursework or 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree

Dissertation (12 credit hours)

EVO 799 Dissertation (12)

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in a related discipline, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Exploration Systems Design, PHD (LAESDPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Exploration Systems Design, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in exploration systems design offers students an advanced systems approach for developing scientific exploration technologies in a wide range of demanding environments on the earth, planets, moons and in space. This transdisciplinary degree program provides a unique platform to train systems engineers targeting technological development for exploration science. This collaborative program between the School of Earth and Space Exploration and the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering allows students to specialize in topics related to planetary exploration, astronomical instrumentation, robotics, sensors and sensor networks. The curriculum will integrate the School of Earth and Space Exploration's science, instrumentation and systems engineering core courses with related coursework from the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering. Students must select a concentration as part of this degree program. Concentrations are available in instrumentation, systems engineering and sensor networks.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (6 credit hours)

Electives or Research (57 credit hours)

Concentration (9 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (12 credit hours)

AST 799 or GLG 799 Dissertation (12)

Additional Curriculum Information

Students may be admitted into the program with a bachelor's degree or master's degree in a related field. Up to 30 credit hours of master's degree-level work in a related field such as engineering, computer science, geological sciences or physics can be accepted toward the fulfillment of the doctoral requirements.

As part of the elective credit hours, students will be required to complete two seminars: GLG 500 SESE Colloquium (1) and GLG 591 Faculty Research Seminar (1).

The plan of study for the doctorate will be selected with the recommendation of the student's supervisory committee.

Students should see the academic unit for a complete list of approved electives.

Family and Human Development, MS (LAFAMHDMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Family and Human Development, MS

Campus: Online

Program Description:

The MS program in family and human development provides practitioner-oriented professionals with an understanding of relationships and developmental dynamics, and they learn how to effectively evaluate and consume research, how to translate research into best practices, and how to apply these principles at work.

The online format provides easy access to rigorous and valuable information that informs best practices in improving the lives of families and family members. The program also includes a customizable culminating experience that allows students to focus their training in their areas of interest and work.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours including the required capstone course (FAS 588).

Required Core (9 credit hours)

CDE 531 Theoretical Issues in Child Development (3)

FAS 586 or SOC 586 Capstone I (3)

FAS 587 or SOC 587 Capstone II (3)

Electives or Research (18 credit hours)

FAS 500 Research Methods (3)

CDE 501 Social Statistics (3)

diversity course (3)

other elective coursework (9)

Culminating Experience (3 credit hours)

FAS 588 Capstone III (3)

Additional Curriculum Information

Students will complete the coursework and culminating experience courses in consultation with the assigned faculty advisor. The plan of study should be completed and approved by the faculty advisor once completing 50 percent of the minimum required credit hours for the degree.

Acceptance of the proposed plan of study must be verified by the signature of the chair and faculty advisor. After approval from the program or college, the plan of study is submitted to the Graduate College for final approval.

FAS 500 and CDE 501 may be replaced by equivalent courses with approval by the academic advisor.

The diversity course and other elective coursework are chosen with approval by the academic advisor. The remaining elective credits must be from the FAS, CDE, or SOC prefixes.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

French (Comparative Literature), MA (LAFRECLMA)

Online Degree Search Title: French Comparative Literature, MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The School of International Letters and Cultures offers a graduate program in French leading to the MA in French with concentration in comparative literature.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours including the required applied project course (FRE 593) and a written comprehensive exam.

Graduate students may take only 500-level courses for graduate credit. At least nine credit hours must be selected from those courses listed exclusively for graduate students. The program must include:

- ☐ • FRE 500 Bibliography and Research Methods (3)
- ☐ • two courses in linguistics, civilization or translation, of which one course must be in linguistics
- ☐ • one course in critical or cultural theory

It is recommended that the candidate enroll in FRE 500 as early as possible.

A minimum of four core courses offered by the French section must be selected from any combination of the following categories:

- ☐ • Francophone studies courses
- ☐ • genre courses
- ☐ • period courses

When approved by the graduate committee, up to six hours of related coursework may be taken outside of French.

A student must achieve a GPA of "B" (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher in all work specifically included in the plan of study. Grades below a "C" (2.00) cannot be used to meet the requirements of a graduate degree. No student may accumulate more than one incomplete at any one time.

Independent study courses will be given only under exceptional circumstances and will not duplicate courses which are available. The French graduate committee is responsible for authorizing such work in cooperation with the individual professor. No more than three hours of independent study will be permitted.

Students must complete an applied project.

The written examination for the concentration in comparative literature will be administered by the interdepartmental committee for comparative literature and will consist of two essay-based components: general concepts of comparative literature and problems of comparative literature.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in French from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

The writing sample should represent the applicant's thinking as well as writing skills, and it should be written in French on a topic connected with the language or French culture. The writing sample should be approximately five to 10 pages in length.

Those who lack the appropriate background but who show strong potential and meet the Graduate College admission requirements may be admitted to a graduate program on a provisional basis, pending removal of specified deficiencies. These deficiencies must be completed in addition to the regular program of study for the master's degree.

Gender Studies, PHD (LAGSTPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Gender Studies, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The gender studies doctoral program is part of the nation's first School of Social Transformation. The diverse community of scholars takes an innovative approach to the study of social justice by uniting multiple academic disciplines to strategically create social change that is democratic, inclusive and just.

The inclusive gender studies doctoral program empowers tomorrow's community leaders and shapers by immersing them in:

- ☐ • ASU's on-campus Digital Humanities research lab
- ☐ • creative and critical knowledge production
- ☐ • deep fluency in feminist theory and practical applications
- ☐ • publicly engaged academic research
- ☐ • socially embedded community partnerships

The connections between social locations, community and lived experience are the foundation of the research, teaching and community engagement. Faculty and students explore these intersections from a holistic, historical perspective that goes beyond the classroom.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (12 credit hours)

WST 601 Critical Concepts of Gender (3)

WST 602 Mapping the Intersections of Gender (3)

WST 603 Engendering Methodology (3)

WST 701 Research Design and Proposal Development in Gender Studies (3)

Elective Coursework in Methodology (6 credit hours)

Elective Coursework in Specialization (12 credit hours)

General Electives (30 credit hours)

Research and Dissertation (24 credit hours)

Additional Curriculum Information

When approved by the student's supervisory committee and the Graduate College, this program allows 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree to be used for this degree. If students do not have a previously awarded master's degree, the 30 hours of coursework will be made up of electives to reach the required 84 credit hours.

Students should see the academic unit for a complete list of approved electives.

The gender studies doctoral program is designed to provide students with the transdisciplinary training in theory and methods needed to conduct original research and scholarship about gender.

Students also take two research methods courses relevant to their dissertation, plus additional courses chosen from three areas of specialization: gender, justice and social change; health, science and technology; and visual and narrative culture.

Students must maintain a 3.20 average GPA in their courses.

Gender, Justice and Social Change --- Courses in this area explore the gender dimension of social structures, institutions and organizations; the processes of social change and community development; and the ways policies and laws can change gender relations. Faculty have expertise in:

- ☐ • child welfare
- ☐ • domestic violence
- ☐ • gender and the biophysical environment
- ☐ • globalization
- ☐ • immigration
- ☐ • labor and employment
- ☐ • social policy
- ☐ • sustainability
- ☐ • transnational feminisms
- ☐ • women's rights and gender equality in the developing world

Health, Science and Technology --- Courses in this area explore the impact of gender on:

- ☐ • health care
- ☐ • health occupations
- ☐ • science and technology

Faculty have expertise in:

- ☐ • bioethics
- ☐ • gender and technology
- ☐ • health and sexuality
- ☐ • HIV and AIDS prevention
- ☐ • the participation of women in math and science in the developing world
- ☐ • women's roles as healers and caregivers

Visual and Narrative Culture --- Courses in this area explore historical and contemporary representations of gender in all genres, including:

- ☐ • art
- ☐ • literature
- ☐ • popular culture
- ☐ • scientific, medical, historical and legal discourse
- ☐ • theater

The faculty focus especially on the intersections of gender representations with representations of race, sexuality and class, and the ways in which representations produce rather than simply mimic gender inequality and polarized identities.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

The gender studies program welcomes applications from qualified students without regard to race, creed, color, religion, sex or national origin. Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official copies of all undergraduate and graduate transcripts
- ☐ • official GRE scores
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • three letters of reference, preferably from faculty or other researchers
- ☐ • writing sample (10-15 pages)
- ☐ • proof of English language proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

GRE test scores cannot be more than five years old.

Doctoral students entering with a bachelor's degree must complete 84 credit hours. These hours include 72 credit hours of coursework and research at ASU and 12 dissertation credit hours.

Doctoral students entering with a master's degree must complete 54 credit hours. These include 42 credit hours of combined coursework and research hours at ASU and 12 dissertation credit hours.

Coursework and research hours are selected by the student in consultation with an advisory committee.

Up to six credit hours of 400-level coursework may be applied toward the plan of study.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants who do not have an adequate background in geography will be asked to take additional geography coursework including but not limited to GPH 371 Introduction to Cartography and GCU 495 Georepresentation and Qualitative Methods in Geography.

The personal statement must address four items:

- ☐ • What specialty in geography does the applicant wish to pursue, and why?
- ☐ • What aspects of the applicant's education (a description is needed) will enable the student to pursue this specialty?
- ☐ • What additional training does the applicant believe can be obtained at Arizona State University to realize the applicant's educational and career goals?
- ☐ • Applicants should provide any other information they feel should be considered in their application for admission (e.g., research experience or information which might be drawn from the applicant's resume).

Letters of recommendation must be from three faculty members who can attest to the applicant's academic achievements.

Geological Sciences, MS (LAGEOSCMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Geological Sciences, MS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The MS program in geological sciences is designed to provide fundamental graduate training in geology and to prepare the student for further graduate study or for careers in geochemistry, geology, geophysics, planetary geology, hydrology and related areas.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis.

The Master of Science program in geological sciences consists of a minimum of 30 credit hours of graduate-level coursework. The student, with approval of the advisor and supervisory committee (formed upon enrollment), selects courses that make a coherent plan of study. Each plan of study must include six credit hours of thesis credits and 20 or more credit hours of coursework other than research and thesis. Half the credit hours applicable toward the degree must be in geological sciences courses while the remainder may include work in related fields. In addition, all students in the School of Earth and Space Exploration are required to take two seminars:

GLG 591 Faculty Research Seminar (1)

A research-based thesis is required. The final examination is an oral defense of that thesis.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admissions application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants should see the program website for application deadlines.

Geological Sciences, PHD (LAGEOSCPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Geological Sciences, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in geological sciences is designed to develop creative scholarship and to prepare students for professional careers in geological science fields such as geochemistry, geology, geophysics, planetary geology, hydrology and related areas.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Up to 30 credit hours of master's degree-level work in a related field can be accepted toward the fulfillment of the doctoral requirements.

The plan of study for the doctorate program is selected with the recommendation of the student's supervisory committee. Each plan of study must include 12 credit hours of dissertation and 25 credit hours of coursework. All students in the School of Earth and Space Exploration are also required to take two seminars:

GLG 500 Earth & Space Exploration Colloquium (1)

GLG 591 Faculty Research Seminar (1)

ASU Graduate College policies and procedures must also be met both for admission into the program and for fulfilling the degree requirements.

Comprehensive Examination: Doctoral candidacy is earned on the basis of a written component and an oral component. The written examination is in the form of two written research projects. The oral exam consists of an oral defense of the two projects.

Dissertation Requirements: A dissertation is required that is based on original work demonstrating creativity in research and scholarly proficiency in the subject area.

Final Examination: A final oral examination in defense of the dissertation is required.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.0 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

German, MA (LAGERMMA)

Online Degree Search Title: German, MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The faculty in the School of International Letters and Cultures offer graduate programs leading to the MA degree with a major in German. Students admitted to the master's degree program with a major in secondary education may elect German as their subject matter field.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis, or 30 credit hours including the required applied project course (GER 593).

The plan of study for the master's degree includes a minimum of 30 credit hours of graduate-level work and a thesis or an applied project, as approved by the candidate's supervisory committee. The program must include a 500-level bibliography and research methods course offered by the school. When approved by the candidate's supervisory committee, nine hours in another language or in closely related courses may be included in the program.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in German, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Those who lack this background but who show strong potential and meet the Graduate College admission requirements may be admitted to a graduate program on a provisional basis, pending removal of specified deficiencies. These deficiencies must be completed in addition to the regular program of study for the master's degree.

The writing sample should represent the applicant's thinking as well as their writing skills, and it should be written in German on a topic connected with the language or German culture.

Global Health, MA (LASSHMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Global Health, MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

In this MA program, global health is considered to be much more than, and very different from, international public health. It emphasizes that major health challenges stem from many factors well beyond disease itself --- factors that are:

- ☐ • cultural
- ☐ • ecological
- ☐ • evolutionary
- ☐ • historical
- ☐ • institutional
- ☐ • social
- ☐ • technological

Any effective, sustainable solutions to our most pressing global health challenges will need to take all of these factors into account, including the complex ways in which they relate to each other. In this manner, this degree program teaches students to understand health as not simply a product of disease, but rather emerging in the contexts of our complex and interrelated ecology, politics, history, culture, social institutions and evolutionary biology. It also places primacy on how to address the broader (i.e., structural, cultural) bases of ill health in complicated, ever-changing health challenges in low-resource community settings and a globalizing world. To do this, the program combines both social and life science theories with on-the-ground research and its application. There is a strong emphasis on collaborative action as key to identifying and addressing global health problems in a sustainable and meaningful way.

Students accepted into the program are tied to ongoing transdisciplinary global health projects that address complicated, multifaceted health challenges that defy easy fixes, such as:

- ☐ • climate change-related diseases
- ☐ • emerging infectious diseases
- ☐ • obesity

By applying a collaborative, problem-solving format, the master's degree program in global health is intended to provide those planning to enter health or related fields (i.e., environmental, social) with the transdisciplinary orientation, team skills and social and cultural acuity that the Pew Health Professions Commission inter alia has identified as critical but lacking in current health workforce training. The program also emphasizes experiential learning as a way to gain mastery and requires participation in a global internship program based in one of the international partnering communities.

Accelerated Degrees:

This degree is also offered in an accelerated format with Global Health, BA

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior and senior years, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Degree Requirements:

30 Credit Hours including the required applied project course (SSH 593).

All students are required to take the following four foundational courses (12 credit hours):

ASB 500 Ethnographic Field Methods (3)

ASB 503/SSH 503 Medical Anthropology (3)

ASB 510/SSH 510 Health: Social and Biocultural Theories (3)

AML 613 Methods and Concepts in Math Epidemiology OR SSH 591 Principles of Epidemiology for Global Health (3)

Substitutes may be permitted by the graduate director for some coursework that includes individualized research, conference and independent study courses with approved faculty. Additional methods-focused courses or graduate-level epidemiology courses can count toward this requirement.

Students are also required to complete a minimum of six credit hours of practicum, six credit hours of electives and six credit hours of an applied project. Applied projects are completed in consultation with a faculty advisor; options include internship, practicum, a research project, scholarly research paper or an outreach project.

All students must maintain a 3.00 average GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") on both the interactive plan of study and graduate GPAs per the Graduate College satisfactory academic progress policy.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in the social or life sciences (i.e., anthropology, sociology, gender studies, geography, political science), public health or related fields (i.e., nutrition, human biology) is generally expected for applicants, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement outlining educational and professional goals
- ☐ • current curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants may submit an optional scholarly writing sample, not to exceed 20 to 30 double-spaced pages to be included in their application materials.

Admission is competitive and based on student academic excellence, additional relevant experience, and fit with available faculty. Value will be placed on foreign language skills; practical, cross-cultural and international experiences; and prior social science and life science research.

Global Health, PHD (LASSHPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Global Health , PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in global health draws on the premise that sustainable and satisfying solutions to the most pressing global health challenges require a sophisticated understanding of how cultural context, social and ecological processes and disease are really related.

The transdisciplinary graduate program trains students broadly in cutting-edge health social science research theory and methods. While it leverages the strength in medical anthropology at ASU (including the 15 medical anthropologists on campus), it also takes advantage of a much wider set of skills offered by such fields as medical sociology, demography, human geography and epidemiology. It is designed to train those who anticipate working in transdisciplinary academic settings, medical schools or nonacademic health settings, such as the commercial sector, government agencies or nongovernmental organizations.

Some particular thematic foci of the program are:

- ☐ • biocultural approaches to human coping
- ☐ • computer-based complexity modeling
- ☐ • culture and health
- ☐ • health in the Americas
- ☐ • indigenous and minority health
- ☐ • mathematical epidemiology
- ☐ • nutritional anthropology
- ☐ • social justice and vulnerable populations
- ☐ • social networks
- ☐ • urban and environmental health

The program draws some 80 faculty members from throughout the university to consider how cutting-edge social science can be applied to understand and substantively improve the health of populations. The program favors community-based research and runs collaborative projects in which students are encouraged to gain experience and conduct research, from large U.S. cities to hunter-gatherer communities. Students generally enter the program with a master's degree in a relevant field.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students entering with a master's degree in a related field may be granted up to 30 credit hours toward the 84 credit hour total required for the doctorate. This leaves 30 credit hours of coursework, 12 hours of research credit and 12 hours of dissertation credit (54 credit hours total) to be earned post admission.

Students entering without a master's degree must earn an additional 30 hours of graduate credit, produce a research portfolio that is formally evaluated by a faculty committee, and present that research in a public forum before continuing on in the later stage of the doctoral program.

All students must maintain a 3.20 average GPA (out of 4.00) in their courses and complete degree requirements per the program's satisfactory progress policy.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee

- ☐ • current curriculum vitae or resume

- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Suitable backgrounds for admission include a master's degree in the social sciences (such as anthropology or sociology), public health, human biology or related fields. Students entering directly from a bachelor's degree program should already have completed at least 15 hours of social science and six hours of human biology (or equivalent) at the senior level, and should also have some background in statistics or epidemiology.

Applicants may submit an optional scholarly writing sample, not to exceed 20 to 30 double-spaced pages to be included in their application materials.

The program draws together some 80 faculty members from across the university to consider how cutting-edge social science can be applied to not only understand but also to substantively improve the health of populations. The program favors community-based research and runs collaborative projects in which students are encouraged to gain experience and conduct research, from large U.S. cities to hunter-gatherer communities. Students generally enter the program with a master's degree in a relevant field.

The complex adaptive systems science doctoral concentration trains the next generation of scientists in advanced concepts and methods needed for approaching diverse phenomena in the social and life sciences. The program is tightly integrated with diverse, ongoing, university-wide research on complex adaptive systems perspective at Arizona State University and emphasizes the value of a complex adaptive systems science perspective to give better insight and a more active role in seeking solutions to a broad array of critical issues facing our society today. Students will be fluent in the common language of complexity while also receiving a solid foundation in the domain knowledge of existing academic disciplines.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students entering with a master's degree in a related field may be granted up to 30 credit hours toward the 84 credit hour total required for the program. All students must maintain a 3.20 (out of 4.00) average GPA in their courses and complete degree requirements per the program's satisfactory progress policy.

For the concentration in complex adaptive systems science, 12 credit hours will be selected from an approved list of applicable courses related to complexity.

Student doctoral dissertations should include the application of complex adaptive systems concepts and methods in their field of study, and typically will have a member of the complex adaptive systems science graduate faculty as a member of their doctoral supervisory committee.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

The program favors community-based research and runs collaborative projects in which students are encouraged to gain experience and conduct research, from large U.S. cities to hunter-gatherer communities. Students generally enter the program with a master's degree in a relevant field.

The concentration in culture and health provides focused, specialized training in theories and methods for researching the relationship between culture and health. This concentration utilizes the perspectives of medical anthropology and sophisticated ethnographic methods to study and interpret the role of cultural and social differences in shaping health. Students investigate these methods in the context of the community-based, participatory approaches that tend to promote the most mutually meaningful and lasting health solutions. Graduates are thus particularly prepared for leadership in addressing health disparities in cross-cultural settings and with the most vulnerable populations. This includes very complex, difficult settings where particularly nuanced and sophisticated (often anthropological) understandings of health-related challenges are needed.

Global Health (Urbanism), PHD (LASSHURPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Global Health (Urbanism), PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in global health draws on the premise that sustainable and satisfying solutions to the most pressing global health challenges require a sophisticated understanding of how cultural context, social and ecological processes, and disease are really related.

The transdisciplinary graduate program trains students broadly in cutting-edge health social science research theory and methods. While it leverages the strength in medical anthropology at ASU (including the 15 medical anthropologists on campus), it also takes advantage of a much wider set of skills offered by such fields as medical sociology, demography, human geography and epidemiology. It is designed to train those who anticipate working in transdisciplinary academic settings, medical schools or nonacademic health settings such as the commercial sector, government agencies and nongovernmental organizations.

Some particular thematic foci of the program are:

- ☐ • biocultural approaches to human coping
- ☐ • computer-based complexity modeling
- ☐ • culture and health
- ☐ • health in the Americas
- ☐ • indigenous and minority health
- ☐ • mathematical epidemiology
- ☐ • nutritional anthropology
- ☐ • social justice and vulnerable populations
- ☐ • social networks
- ☐ • urban and environmental health

The program draws some 80 faculty members from all across the university to consider how cutting-edge social science can be applied to not only understand, but also to substantively improve the health of populations. The program favors community-based research and runs collaborative projects in which students are encouraged to gain experience and conduct research into societies --- from large U.S. cities to hunter-gatherer communities. Students generally enter the program with a master's degree in a relevant field.

The concentration in urbanism will leverage the varied interests in urbanism and help emerging scholars as they attempt to compare, contrast and take stock of urbanism as it pertains to the thematic foci of the program. Working with faculty from across a range of departments and programs at ASU, doctoral students will be able to capture the creative tensions that scholarship on urbanism has inspired in order to stimulate a provocative, constructive kind of inquiry.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students entering with a master's degree in a related field may be granted up to 30 credit hours toward the 84 credit hour total required for the doctorate. This leaves 30 credit hours of coursework, 12 hours of research credit and 12 hours of dissertation credit (54 credit hours total) to be earned post-admission.

Students entering without a master's degree must earn an additional 30 hours of graduate credit, produce a research portfolio that is formally evaluated by a faculty committee and present that research in a public forum before continuing on in the later stage of the doctorate program.

All students must maintain a 3.20 average GPA (out of 4.00) in their courses and complete degree requirements per the program's satisfactory progress policy.

For the concentration in urbanism, 15 credit hours will be selected from an approved list of applicable courses related to urbanism. These courses will include the core urbanism course, GCU 516 (three credit hours) as well as one course from each of the four urbanism clusters. These clusters are:

- ☐ • built form
- ☐ • culture and society
- ☐ • institutions and governance
- ☐ • natural environment

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ▣ graduate admission application and application fee
- ▣ official transcripts
- ▣ personal statement outlining educational and professional goals
- ▣ current curriculum vitae or resume
- ▣ GRE scores
- ▣ three letters of recommendation
- ▣ proof of English proficiency

History, MA (LAHISTMA)

Online Degree Search Title: History, MA

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The MA program in history provides students the fundamental training needed for careers in such areas as historical research and public history, just to name a few. It prepares students for entering a PhD program or for a professional degree in another discipline. The program is a leader in the field of public history, which trains master's degree and doctoral students for careers in historic preservation, museums, historical societies, archives, and government agencies.

The master's degree program offers studies in the geographical areas of North America, Europe, and global-comparative history. Students who select public history choose a geographic focus (i.e., North America and public history). The focus of the history program is to encourage the development of research skills, critical analysis of the literature, and writing skills needed for a professional career.

Accelerated Degrees:

This degree is also offered in an accelerated format with History, BA

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior and senior years, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis, or 30 credit hours including the required applied project course (HST 593), or 30 credit hours including the required capstone course (HST 597).

There are two options for the master's degree program in history: the thesis option and the nonthesis option. The thesis options requires 30 total credit hours of coursework, including six credit hours of HST 599 Thesis. The nonthesis option requires 30 total credit hours of coursework, including three credit hours of HST 593 Applied Project, three credit hours of HST 591 Seminar and an additional 24 credit hours of coursework.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in an applicable master's degree program. The most competitive applicants will have a GPA of 3.30 or higher.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • official GRE scores
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. The history program requires a TOEFL score of at least 600 (PBT) or 90 (iBT).

Students are required to submit a minimum of three email addresses from faculty or others qualified to speak to the student's suitability for graduate study in history.

The statement of purpose should be addressed to the history admission committee and should explain the applicant's scholarly background and training, career goals, the primary field the applicant wishes to pursue, and why the applicant wants to pursue graduate study at ASU (about 500 words in length). It is not necessary to specify a research topic, but if an applicant has one in mind, they should include it in the statement of purpose

The writing sample may be an article (published or unpublished), a research paper, or any other extended sample of expository writing no longer than 35 pages in length. Longer writing samples should not be submitted without first consulting the graduate director. Documents and files should not be password protected. Acceptable file types are .rtf, .pdf, and .doc.

Immigration Studies (certificate), Certificate (LAIMMSTUCE)

Online Degree Search Title: Immigration Studies (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The immigration studies graduate certificate program provides students with an understanding of the causes and consequences of international migration as well as relevant professional and research training opportunities.

The program prepares graduates for future study in graduate and professional schools or for careers as immigration practitioners and advocates in nongovernmental organizations, local and federal government agencies, as well as in other private and public institutions serving immigrant and refugee communities.

The objective of the certificate program is to offer traditional academic training through coursework, research and practical experience working with local immigrant and refugee communities.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours.

All students will be required to take one core course, three approved elective courses on immigration, and three hours of a culminating experience (either an internship or a research project). Students are to contact the school for a list of approved courses.

Students may do an internship with Phoenix-based, nongovernmental organizations or government agencies that provide services to immigrants and refugees. Such internships will give students professional training and actual experience working with immigrant and refugee communities. Students will be required to write a report describing the organization and their experience as interns.

Students may enroll in three credit hours of research with a faculty member in order to do an independent research project. They must write a substantial research paper based on field research in a local immigrant community, on library and archival research, or on readings on an immigration topic.

Certificate students may choose to specialize in humanities, Mexican and Latino immigrants in the U.S., or social sciences.

Given the nature of the immigration courses offered at ASU and the preponderance of Latino immigrant communities in the Phoenix area, the program emphasizes Latino immigration. However, students will have the opportunity to take broader courses focusing on global migration and other immigrant groups, as well as work with local Asian or Southeast Asian immigrants and refugee communities.

For students currently enrolled in an ASU graduate degree program, applicable certificate courses may count toward their degree program with the approval and consent of the degree granting program. For certificate students who are later admitted to an ASU graduate degree program, up to 12 credit hours from the certificate program may count toward their doctoral degree or up to 12 credit hours may count toward their master's degree, with the approval and consent of the degree-granting program.

All requirements for the certificate program should be completed within a three year time limit with a cumulative GPA of at least 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A"). Students who require more time to finish the program (because of their part-time status or lack of desirable or available courses) must obtain approval from the executive committee.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement outlining educational and professional goals
- ☐ • current curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants may submit an optional scholarly writing sample, not to exceed 20-30 double-spaced pages to be included in their application materials.

Justice Studies, MS (LAJUSSTMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Justice Studies, MS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The MS program in justice studies prepares graduates to pursue careers in research centers, social justice organizations and academic institutions. Many master of science students also go on to pursue doctoral degrees in interdisciplinary programs such as justice studies, criminology and law as well as American studies, ethnic studies, and women's and gender studies.

Accelerated Degrees:

This degree is also offered as an accelerated degree with:

- Justice Studies, BA
- Justice Studies, BS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior and senior years, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis, or 30 credit hours including the required applied project course (JUS 593).

Required Core (12 credit hours)

- JUS 500 Justice Research Methods (3)
- JUS 501 Justice Theory (3)
- JUS 509 Statistical Problems in Justice Research (3)
- JUS 521 Qualitative Data Analysis and Evaluation (3)

Electives (12 credit hours)

Research (0-3 credit hours)

- JUS 592 Research (3)

Culminating Experience (3-6 credit hours)

- JUS 593 Applied Project (3) or
- JUS 599 Thesis (6)

Additional Curriculum Information

Each student's program is developed in concert with the advisory committee. The required foundation courses provide students with a fundamental understanding of the theories, methods and analytic techniques associated with the study of justice.

To satisfy the thesis requirement for the degree, candidates must write a thesis and defend it in an oral examination conducted by the student's advisory committee. Students in this option are not required to take JUS 592 Research.

Students who elect to complete the applied project option will have to enroll in three credit hours of JUS 592 Research prior to enrolling in JUS 593 Applied Project. Candidates pursuing the applied project option must present their applied project and defend it in an oral examination conducted by the faculty member who supervises the project and the graduate programs director or designated representative. The applied project typically includes a brief literature review to identify the nature of the issue or problem and a description of the methodology used and, if relevant, of the program studied, followed by an analysis.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Linguistics (certificate), Certificate (LALINGUICE)

Online Degree Search Title: Linguistics (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

This transdisciplinary graduate certificate in linguistics offers students in several fields the opportunity to gain an understanding of the way in which languages are structured, how they are acquired and how they vary over time, space, social distance and situational contexts.

The skills acquired through the completion of the core courses for this certificate include analytical abilities, critical thinking, effective communication and problem-solving. In addition, the knowledge acquired in the areas of discourse analysis and pragmatics makes students aware of the necessity to use appropriate registers and styles when creating written documents or oral presentations to different audiences.

Degree Requirements:

18 credit hours.

Required Core Areas (9 credit hours)

discourse analysis and pragmatics (3) phonology (3)

syntax (3)

Electives (9 credit hours)

Additional Curriculum Information

The electives may be chosen from fields such as applied linguistics, educational linguistics, natural language processing, second-language acquisition and sociolinguistics. The electives are determined by the student in consultation with a faculty advisor.

Prerequisite: Students must have completed an introductory course in linguistics taken at the upper-division or graduate level. Consult the certificate program director for advice.

All certificate coursework must be completed with an average grade of "B" or higher (3.00 on a 4.00 scale).

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. Students should visit the Department of English website for specific details about English proficiency requirements.

Once the online application has been submitted, the applicant should send a copy of unofficial transcripts, a one- to two-page, well-considered statement of purpose detailing the student's background and reasons for wanting to do the linguistics certificate, and resume to the department email address with the subject line: Linguistics Certificate Application.

To be considered for admission, an applicant must have taken an introductory course in linguistics at the upper-division or graduate level. Applicants must also show proof of a formal knowledge of a foreign language, equivalent to two years of study at the university level or plans to fulfill the language requirement concurrently with certificate courses. The language requirement may be met by completion of courses through the second-year level (four semesters) at ASU or elsewhere; or by completion of an upper-division language course with an average of "B" or better (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) for all such coursework (200 or 300 level); or through an examination that indicates placement above the 200 level.

Language placement tests are available online at the Language Placement Policies and Tests webpage on the School of International Letters and Academic Catalog Archive 2017-2018

Cultures website. If this requirement is not already fulfilled at the time of application, candidates must demonstrate completion of this requirement at the end of their certificate coursework in order for their certificate to be granted.

Linguistics and Applied Linguistics, MA (LALINMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Linguistics and Applied Linguistics, MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The master's degree program in linguistics and applied linguistics addresses the study of human language and the application of that study to the human condition through training in linguistics and applied linguistics. At the master's level, it provides foundational training in several different areas, including discourse analysis, language and cognition, language contact and change, language planning, phonetics, phonology, pragmatics, second language acquisition, second-language teaching and learning, semantics, sociolinguistics, syntax, teaching English to speakers of other languages, and World Englishes.

Degree Requirements:

Required Core (3 credit hours)

LIN 515 American English (3) or

LIN 516 Pragmatics and Discourse Analysis (3)

General Linguistics Track (6 credit hours)

LIN 511 Phonetics and Phonology (3)

LIN 514 Syntax (3)

Applied Linguistics Track (6 credit hours)

LIN 511 Phonetics and Phonology (3) or LIN 514 Syntax (3)

LIN 520 Second Language Acquisition Theories (3) or APL 601 Introduction to Applied Linguistics (3)

Electives (12-15 credit hours)

Research (3 credit hours)

LIN 501 Approaches to Research (3)

Culminating Experience (3-6 credit hours)

LIN 599 or APL 599 Thesis (6)

LIN 593 or APL 593 Applied Project (3)

Additional Curriculum Information

Students choose one of the two tracks in either general linguistics or applied linguistics.

Electives are restricted based on the student's chosen track. For the general linguistics track, one of the electives must be a 600-level course from the approved course list.

Students who select the thesis option take 12 credit hours of electives. Applied project students select 15 credit hours of electives.

Students must demonstrate evidence of a competent knowledge of a natural language other than modern English, to be selected by the student, subject to the approval of the chair of the thesis committee or the director of the applied project. This requirement may be met by:

- ☐ • earning a "B" or better (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) in a 400- or 500-level course in an appropriate (approved) language course
- ☐ • demonstrating comparable proficiency by taking a language examination, administered by the School of International Letters and Cultures, in a language approved by the student's supervisory committee
- ☐ • demonstrating native-speaker proficiency, as determined by the School of International Letters and Cultures, in a language approved by the student's supervisory committee

- ☐ • earning a "B" or better (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) in both ENG 530 Old English and ENG 531 Old English Literature or their equivalent
- ☐ • holding a bachelor's degree in an approved foreign language
- ☐ • two years (four semesters) of successfully completed college-level coursework (completed no more than six years prior to admission to the degree program) at least at the 100 and 200 levels with a "C" or better (scale is 4.00 = "A") for languages which the School of International Letters and Cultures does not offer or does not offer above the 200 level

Any course in which all class meetings are conducted in the approved language will satisfy the requirement for a "B" or better in a 400- or 500-level course in an appropriate language course; courses conducted in English will not satisfy the requirement. Also satisfying the requirement are GER 550 German for Reading Knowledge, FRE 550 French for Reading Knowledge, SPA 550 Spanish for Reading Knowledge, and ITA 550 Italian for Reading Knowledge. The Department of English does not require its graduate students to write papers in the approved language.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in such related fields as anthropology, applied linguistics, communication, cognitive science, comparative languages and literatures, literature, education, history, law, linguistics, modern languages, philosophy, political science, psychology, religious studies, rhetoric, composition, sociology, speech and hearing science, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00= "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. Students should see the Department of English website for specific details about English proficiency requirements.

Successful completion of (at least) one upper-division course in linguistics, language study, or related topic is required.

The one-page, single-spaced statement of purpose should explain the applicant's background in language study, reasons for wanting to do graduate work in linguistics, and plans for the future.

- ☐ • one qualifying sequence examination
- ☐ • a final oral examination in defense of the thesis

Nonthesis Option

The degree program requires:

- ☐ • 30 credit hours of math or math related graduate coursework
- ☐ • two qualifying sequence examinations or portfolio with oral presentation

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.
 Academic Catalog Archive 2017-2018

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in mathematics or a closely related field from a regionally accredited institution, as well as coursework in linear algebra (equivalent to ASU course MAT 342 or MAT 343) and advanced calculus (equivalent to ASU course MAT 371).

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of education and career goals
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • GRE (general) scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Mathematics, PHD (LAMATHPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Mathematics, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program is intended for students with superior mathematical ability. It emphasizes a solid mathematical foundation and promotes creative scholarship in mathematics and its many related disciplines. The School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences has very active research groups in analysis, number theory, geometry and discrete mathematics.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students must pass two qualifying examinations, a written comprehensive examination and an oral dissertation prospectus, and they should see the school website for examination information.

Students must register for 12 credit hours of dissertation (MAT 799).

Students must write a dissertation and defend it orally in front of five dissertation committee members.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in mathematics, or a closely related area, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of education and career goals
- ☐ • resume

- ☐ • GRE (general) scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Additional eligibility requirements include competitiveness in an applicant pool as evidenced by coursework in linear algebra (equivalent to ASU course MAT 342 or MAT 343) and advanced calculus (equivalent to ASU course MAT 371), and it is desirable that applicants have scientific programming skills.

Mathematics Education, PHD (LAMTEPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Mathematics Education (Mathematics and Statistics Dept - Grades 9-20), PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

This transdisciplinary program accommodates students from a variety of academic backgrounds. It provides students with a solid foundation in graduate-level mathematics as well as research skills and perspectives that will allow them to deal broadly with mathematics problems of:

- ☐ • curriculum
- ☐ • learning
- ☐ • teaching
- ☐ • technology

Conducting individual and collaborative research in the learning and teaching of mathematics is an integral part of the program.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Program requirements include the following:

- ☐ • 12 credit hours of Research in Undergraduate Mathematics Education (RUME) 1-4, with qualifying exams given in RUME 1 and 2
- ☐ • four graduate math courses from a list of options
- ☐ • six credit hours of research (MTE 792)
- ☐ • a written comprehensive examination
- ☐ • an oral comprehensive examination
- ☐ • an oral dissertation prospectus defense
- ☐ • 12 credit hours of dissertation (MTE 799)

Students should see the school's website for information about qualifier and comprehensive examinations based on math coursework.

Each student must write a dissertation and defend it orally in front of five dissertation committee members.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in mathematics or a closely related area, with exceptionally high grades in advanced coursework in mathematics, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of education and career goals
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • GRE (general) scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Additional eligibility requirements include competitiveness in an applicant pool as evidenced by the required GRE scores.

At least two of the letters of recommendation must be from faculty.

Medieval Studies (certificate), Certificate (LAMEDSTCE)

Online Degree Search Title: Medieval Studies (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The certificate program prepares students for advanced study or for academic positions by augmenting their skills and knowledge, thereby making them better equipped to meet the demands of their fields.

Degree Requirements:

18 credit hours (MA certificate), or 27 credit hours (PhD certificate).

Medieval Latin:

one semester (three or four credit hours) for students at the master's degree level, two semesters (six to eight credit hours) for doctoral students proficiency attested either by achieving a grade of "B" (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better in the Medieval Latin courses or by satisfactory performance on the Medieval/Renaissance Latin examinations offered by the Centre for Medieval Studies at the University of Toronto (the requirement presupposing two years or 12 to 16 credit hours or equivalent of undergraduate training in Latin)

Medieval vernacular language (e.g., Old English, Old Norse, Old French):

two semesters (six credit hours) for students at the master's degree level, three semesters (nine credit hours) for doctoral students

Paleography:

one semester (three credit hours)

Medieval coursework outside the major discipline:

two semesters (six credit hours) for students at the master's degree level, three semesters (nine credit hours) for doctoral students

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Admission is open to all ASU graduate students enrolled in an existing master's or doctoral program and in good standing.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Molecular and Cellular Biology, PHD (LACELLPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Molecular/Cellular Biology, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in molecular and cellular biology prepares students for careers that span traditional disciplinary boundaries. Research in this exciting field is focused on understanding the fundamental molecular events that are at the core of all life. The goal of the program is to provide a diverse range of research and training opportunities for doctoral students interested in pursuing a transdisciplinary approach to their studies that extends beyond the traditional boundaries of biological research. The broad-based training provides the necessary skills for professional careers in academic institutions, governmental institutions and industry, particularly those related to health and chemical sciences.

Participating faculty members and researchers are drawn from multiple departments, colleges, centers and institutes across the university, including the School of Life Sciences; the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry; the School of Biological and Health Systems Engineering; the School for Engineering of Matter, Transport and Energy; the School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences; the School of Human Evolution and Social Change; the Department of Psychology; and the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences. Participating faculty members are also based at partner institutions in the greater Phoenix area, including the Translational Genomics Research Institute, Mayo Clinic in Arizona, Barrow Neurological Institute, Carl T. Hayden Veteran's Administration Medical Center and University of Arizona College of Medicine-Phoenix.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

The plan of study is designed by the student and the supervisory committee consisting of a professor in the major and three additional faculty members; the professor in the major and one other must be from the molecular and cellular biology core faculty.

Museum Studies, MA (LAMUSSTMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Museum Studies, MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The museum studies master's degree program examines how museums produce and reflect culture and examines the role museums play worldwide.

Students develop theoretical questions and applied skills that engage the functions, practices and critical analyses of museums. They also gain practical experience while being encouraged to challenge preconceived notions about museums and the way museums affect and are affected by societies and cultures. Designed to be use-inspired, socially embedded and transcultural, the program ensures that students understand the meaning and significance of museums in contemporary society and prepares them for diverse museum careers.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a research portfolio.

Required Core (3 credit hours)

ASB 579 Critical Issues in Museum Studies (3)

Electives and Research (18)

ASB 592 Research (6)

Other electives and research (12)

Other Requirements (9)

ASB 500 Research Methods (3) or ASB 572 Museum Collection Management (3)

ASB 584 Internship (6), or ASB 584 Internship (3) and ASB 580 Practicum (3)

Culminating Experience (0 credit hours)

Portfolio (0)

Additional Curriculum Information

For a complete list of approved elective and research courses, students should contact the school.

Internship (ASB 584) and Practicum (ASB 580) must be approved by their supervisory committees, usually in a museum setting or museum quality collection or archive related to their chosen area of study: anthropology, art history, theory and criticism or public history.

Other courses may be substituted for ASB 500 as an equivalent course with academic unit approval.

On completion of the internship, students must submit a journal or portfolio about the internship and skills acquired.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution. Suitable backgrounds for admission include disciplines related to museum studies, anthropology, history or art (fine art or art history).

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00="A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement outlining educational and professional goals
- ☐ • current curriculum vitae or resume

Certificate students may choose to specialize in areas such as anthropology, art history and public history.

For a complete list of approved elective and research courses, students should contact the school.

Internship (ASB 584) and Practicum (ASB 580) must be approved by their supervisory committees, usually in a museum setting or museum-quality collection or archive related to their chosen area of study: anthropology, art history, theory and criticism or public history.

For students currently enrolled in an ASU graduate degree program, applicable certificate courses may count toward their degree program, with the approval and consent of the degree granting program. For certificate students who are later admitted to an ASU graduate degree program, up to 12 credit hours from the certificate program may count toward their doctoral degree or up to 12 credit hours may count toward their master's degree, with the approval and consent of the degree-granting program.

All requirements for the certificate program should be completed within a three-year time limit with a cumulative GPA of at least 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A"). Students who require more time to finish the program (because of their part-time status or lack of desirable or available courses) must obtain approval from the executive committee.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution. Suitable backgrounds for admission include disciplines related to museum studies, anthropology, history or art (fine art or art history).

Nanoscience, PSM (LANANPSM)

Online Degree Search Title: Nanoscience, PSM

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PSM in nanoscience is a cohesive program of transdisciplinary courses that provide the knowledge base required for research and innovation in nanoscience. The program incorporates courses in:

- ☐ • chemistry and biochemistry
- ☐ • electrical engineering

- ☐ • materials science
- ☐ • physics

Commercial innovation is a particular target goal of the degree, including applications in:

- ☐ • biochemistry and sensing technology
- ☐ • biophysics and biomedical technology
- ☐ • nanomaterials and nanoscale devices

The Professional Science Master's degree program in nanoscience is suitable for working professionals as well as for students who have obtained a traditional bachelor's degree or master's degree in related fields.

Accelerated Degrees:

This degree is also offered as an accelerated degree with:

- Biochemistry, BS
- Biochemistry (Medicinal Chemistry), BS
- Chemistry, BS
- Materials Science and Engineering, BSE
- Physics, BS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior and senior years, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours including the required applied project course (NAN 593).

The program does not require a thesis. Rather, the applied project forms the basis of the final capstone presentation.

Required Core (5 credit hours)

NAN 505 Nanoscience and Society (2) or NAN 506 Innovation and IP Management (2)

NAN 571 Quantum Physics (3) or NAN 544 Introduction to Nanoscience (3)

Electives or Research (15 credit hours)

Other Requirements (4 credit hours)

NAN 591 Professional Seminar (4)

Culminating Experience (6 credit hours)

NAN 593 Applied Project (6)

Additional Curriculum Information

Students must take either NAN 505 or NAN 506. Students may also take the other course as an elective.

Students with a physical science or engineering background should take NAN 571 Quantum Physics and students with a biochemistry or life sciences background should take NAN 544 Introduction to Nanoscience.

The program includes a two-semester, student-centered professional seminar in which emerges the central role of the program as a vehicle for innovation. During the spring semester and summer session, students conduct an individual applied project in association with a research group. Throughout the program, students interact with research faculty and other students in a variety of disciplines related to nanoscience. Students also meet with visiting speakers and industrialists in the professional seminar as well as in other seminars.

If taken full time, the PSM in nanoscience can be completed in 12 months (fall semester, spring semester and two eight-week summer sessions). Another option is the two-year, part-time program, which allows prospective students and their employers flexibility in scheduling the program of study.

Students should see the academic unit for a complete list of approved electives. Many of the requisite elective courses are currently offered within the Department of Physics and the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry. Most are cross-listed with other units.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in physics, chemistry or a related field from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = A) in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • two letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. TOEFL scores or equivalent will be required for applicants whose native language is not English.

The personal statement should outline the applicant's research interests and why the applicant wants to apply to the Professional Science Master's degree program.

GRE scores are not required but will be taken into consideration if submitted.

Letters of recommendation should be from individuals familiar with the applicant's work or studies relevant to the program.

Natural Science (Geological Sciences), MNS (LANATSCIMN)

Online Degree Search Title: Geological Sciences, MNS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The School of Earth and Space Exploration participates in the program leading to the MNS in natural science with a concentration in geological sciences. This transdisciplinary degree is designed to meet the needs of professionals seeking a graduate-level degree. The program offers the opportunity for transdisciplinary graduate training in the natural sciences (i.e., biological sciences, mathematics and physical sciences) and cognate areas.

The degree program is especially suited for individuals who desire professional training rather than research training. Because of designed flexibility, the degree also offers the opportunity for individualized professional graduate programs depending upon the backgrounds and goals of the students. Students are expected to emphasize coursework in two or more areas of specialization. The program must be transdisciplinary.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and an applied project.

The supervisory committee is chosen by the student in conjunction with the advisor. The composition of the supervisory committee must reflect the transdisciplinary nature of the program. The student will develop a suitable applied project with the approval of the supervisory committee.

Students must submit a plan of study after conferring with the supervisory committee. While a minimum of 30 credit hours is required for the degree, more credit hours may be required by the supervisory committee, depending upon the background of the student and the nature of the proposed program. All students admitted to this program are also required to take two seminars:

GLG 591 Faculty Research Seminar (1)

In some cases, undergraduate courses may be required to remove deficiencies.

An applied project is required.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admissions application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants should see the program website for application deadlines.

Natural Science (Physics), MNS (LAPHYSMNS)

Online Degree Search Title: Physics, MNS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The MNS curriculum provides transdisciplinary graduate training in physics, physical science or physics education. The program is especially suited for high school science teachers who desire professional training rather than research training. Designed for flexibility, the curriculum also features individualized professional graduate programs. These programs are well-suited to the backgrounds and goals of students. Students are expected to emphasize coursework in two or more areas of concentration. The program must be transdisciplinary.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours including the required applied project course (PHS 593).

Supervisory Committee:

- ☐ • The graduate advisor and the student suggest persons to serve on the supervisory committee. The supervisory committee recommends the plan of study, after conferring with the student.
- ☐ • The supervisory committee, consisting of three faculty members, is appointed by the vice provost for the Graduate College upon the recommendation of the chair of the Department of Physics.
- ☐ • The supervisory committee is formed soon after the student has been admitted to the degree program and must reflect the transdisciplinary nature of the program.
- ☐ • The supervisory committee may require more courses, depending upon the background of the student and the nature of the proposed program. In some cases undergraduate courses may be required to overcome deficiencies.

Teachers may enroll in these courses in order to earn credit toward recertification or to pursue a Master of Natural Science degree. These courses are held during the summer. Depending on teacher interest, they may be offered at other times. For some courses, the prerequisites are two semesters of trigonometry-based college physics and an introductory calculus course.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's degree from a regionally accredited institution. The program is open to in-service high school teachers who have completed two semesters of college physics and an introductory calculus course. Under-prepared teachers can make up deficiencies in regularly scheduled courses. Students must be able to attend classes in-person at the Tempe campus.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts of all undergraduate and graduate coursework
- ☐ • two letters of recommendation
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

The letters of recommendation should be from individuals familiar with the applicant's work or studies relevant to the natural science program.

Conditions for admission are the availability of resources for the proposed program and a Department of Physics faculty member designated to serve as a graduate advisor.

Neuroscience, PHD (GCBMENPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Neuroscience, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Neuroscience involves the study of the nervous system and its relation to an organism's function. It encompasses how gene and nerve networks interact with the environment throughout an organism.

The PhD degree program in neuroscience integrates aspects of graduate-level training from many different units on campus as well as from the program's partner institutions distributed across the greater Phoenix area. Partner institutions include Barrow Neurological Institute, Translational Genomics Research Institute, University of Arizona College of Medicine and Sun Health Research Institute.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

The program requires the completion of 84 credit hours of which only 12 hours are dissertation credits. At least 18 credit hours of formal coursework are required. In consultation with their committee and their supervisor or mentor, students will be able to customize their plan of study to suit their particular interests and goals.

Each student completes six credit hours of core course credits. The core course sequence must be completed before the oral and written evaluation examinations are taken. Additional credit hours will be comprised of specialized disciplinary courses or research credits chosen in consultation with the mentor and advisory committee. A one-credit-hour journal club seminar will be required each semester.

Advancement to candidacy will be dependent on successfully passing a formal comprehensive examination that includes a written proposal of the dissertation research and an oral examination in the broader areas that pertain to that research study. When the research is completed, the dissertation must be written and presented in a public seminar and successfully defended before the supervisory committee.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

admission may be granted to applicants who have achieved a GPA of 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") or better in the last two years of work leading to a bachelor's degree and who are competitive in the applicant pool as evidenced by GRE verbal, quantitative and analytical scores, the statement of educational and career goals (personal statement) and the letters of recommendation. Particular attention will be paid to research experience and overall preparation in problem-solving abilities as evidenced by previous coursework, research experiences and GRE scores.

Because this program draws on an extremely broad range of disciplinary backgrounds in recruiting students, there is no specific set of undergraduate course requirements other than those implied by the degree requirements described above. Most students will be expected to have had coursework in biology, chemistry and math or demonstrated ability through a subject test GRE.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ▣ graduate admission application and application fee
- ▣ official transcripts
- ▣ academic record form
- ▣ personal statement
- ▣ CV/Resume
- ▣ GRE Scores
- ▣ three letters of recommendation
- ▣ proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Desired qualifications:

- ▣ GRE scores: 50 percent verbal and 70 percent quantitative
- ▣ research experience

Nonfiction Writing and Publishing (Certificate), Certificate (LANWPGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Nonfiction Writing and Publishing (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

Students in the nonfiction writing and publishing certificate program will learn good writing, which includes the ability to read, analyze and synthesize information and concepts and to express them with words. Graduates will have a portable, professional skill that can transcend disciplines and equip them for life both within and beyond the academy. Graduates will have the skills to publish analyses and narratives of complex ideas and knowledge for diverse audiences, from scholars to various public audiences. The certificate embraces all varieties of nonfiction:

- ▣ biography
- ▣ blogs and other types of Web writing
- ▣ creative nonfiction
- ▣ essays
- ▣ formal scholarship
- ▣ genre-specific rhetoric
- ▣ journalism
- ▣ narrative history
- ▣ op-eds
- ▣ popular science writing
- ▣ young adult literature
- ▣ and any other types of prose not based on fiction

The certificate program is unique as it is embedded in specific academic content areas, including disciplinary-specific and transdisciplinary areas.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours.

Required Core (3 credit hours)

HPS 520 or HST 520 Masters of Nonfiction (3)

Electives (12 credit hours)

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the School for the Future of Innovation in Society.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution. Applicants who attended school outside of the U.S. must hold a bachelor's degree, graduate degree or equivalent from an institution that is officially recognized by that country.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours or 90 quarter hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ official transcripts
- ☐ writing sample
- ☐ proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants are encouraged to enroll in a graduate degree program in conjunction with this certificate but are not required to do so.

Philosophy, MA (LAPHILMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Philosophy, MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The School of Historical, Philosophical, and Religious Studies offers a master's degree program in traditional and contemporary philosophy. General areas of research include ethics, political philosophy, metaphysics, epistemology, philosophy of law, philosophy of science, feminist philosophy, philosophy of language, experimental philosophy, and the history of philosophy. Members of the faculty are involved in interdisciplinary work in a variety of fields and enjoy close ties with the Lincoln Center for Applied Ethics, the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law, and a number of other graduate programs at ASU. The philosophy program sponsors an active colloquium series and regular philosophical conferences on diverse topics. The Lincoln Center for Applied Ethics also sponsors a wide range of activities, including large-scale conferences, distinguished visitors, and support for graduate study.

The master's program in philosophy is designed to prepare students to:

- ☐ teach philosophy at the community college level
- ☐ enter doctoral programs
- ☐ work in any area that requires critical, analytical thinking, such as medicine, law, government, or publishing

The program seeks to maintain a balance between course offerings in the traditional areas of philosophy and opportunities for study of current philosophical developments.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a portfolio, or 30 credit hours and a thesis.

There are two options for the master's degree program in philosophy: the thesis option and the nonthesis portfolio option.

The thesis options requires 30 credit hours of coursework, including six credit hours of PHI 599 Thesis.

The nonthesis portfolio option requires 30 credit hours of coursework, including three credit hours of PHI 592 Research.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • official GRE scores
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • curriculum vitae
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency as well as a copy of an article or research paper in their native or principal research language in addition to the English writing sample required of all students. The history program requires a TOEFL score of at least 600 (PBT) or 90 (iBT).

GRE Scores should be no more than five years old. Official scores should be sent by the ETS to ASU using the university code 4007. The department code may be left blank or entered as 0000.

The statement of purpose should explain the applicant's specific intent and be no more than 600 words in length.

The writing sample is a piece of philosophical writing, preferably a seminar paper or published article (no more than 20 pages) and not a thesis or dissertation.

Philosophy, PHD (LAPHILPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Philosophy, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies offers a newly redesigned PhD program that focuses on practical and applied philosophy. General areas of research include ethics, political philosophy, metaphysics, epistemology, philosophy of law, philosophy of science, philosophy of language, philosophy of religion and the history of philosophy. Members of the faculty are involved in interdisciplinary work in a variety of fields and enjoy close ties with the Lincoln Center for Applied Ethics, the College of Law, and a number of other graduate programs at the university. The ASU philosophy faculty group sponsors an active colloquium series and regular philosophical conferences on diverse topics. The Lincoln Center for Applied Ethics also sponsors a wide range of activities, including large-scale conferences, distinguished visitors and support for graduate study.

The doctoral program in philosophy features a focus on practical and applied philosophy and an interdisciplinary coursework component related to the student's research topic. Practical philosophy includes the fields of ethics, philosophy of law, social and political philosophy, feminist ethics and political philosophy. Applied philosophy includes both the application of theories developed within any of the sub-disciplines of philosophy to everyday problems or phenomena (for example, the application of the philosophy of language in relation to hate speech or the philosophy of mind in relation to computing and artificial intelligence). Applied philosophy also includes the application of research produced by methods used in other disciplines in order to understand and address philosophical questions (for example, the application of data-gathering instruments used in psychology to answer questions in experimental philosophy).

Students may design dissertation projects in any of the major subfields of philosophy. For their interdisciplinary coursework supporting the dissertation project, students might, for example, pursue a certificate in social transformation, gender studies, responsible innovation in sciences, or engineering and society, etc. The program is designed to prepare students for careers as philosophers, as teachers of philosophy, and in areas in which they may benefit from advanced training in philosophy, such as law, civil service and publishing).

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core Areas (18 credit hours)

applied philosophy (3)
epistemology (3)
formal methods (3) history of philosophy (3) metaphysics (3)
value theory (3)

Electives (42 credit hours)Research (12 credit hours)

PHI 792 Research (12)

Culminating Experience (12 credit hours)

PHI 799 Dissertation (12)

Additional Curriculum Information

Students should see the academic unit for the list of courses approved for each required core area.

In completing the electives requirements, at least nine credit hours and no more than 18 credit hours must be from other disciplines supporting the student's proposed dissertation area. Thirty credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree may apply toward this requirement with approval by the student's supervisory committee and the Graduate College.

To ensure breadth in the traditional areas of philosophy, students must pass with a grade of "B" (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Philosophy (History and Philosophy of Science), MA (LAHPSMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Philosophy (History and Philosophy of Science), MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Nationally, there is great interest in science and in understanding the nature of science and the forces that change scientific research. The job market in philosophy is strong for philosophers of science (and especially in the life sciences) with some positions remaining unfilled even when the market is intensely competitive in other areas. In addition, the history and philosophy of science is becoming a strong disciplinary emphasis within growing professional societies.

Some programs, elsewhere, focus primarily on philosophy or primarily on history, but those that bring the two together are regarded among the strongest in each area. The objective here is to provide a program for students who come to history and philosophy of science from the humanities and who seek a career based in philosophical analysis of the sciences. ASU's program has the research strength competitive with any international program.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours, including the required capstone course (HPS 551) and a thesis.

Graduate coursework includes:

history of science (3)
philosophy of science (3)
topics in the history of science (3) topics in the philosophy of science (3) research methods in the history and philosophy of science (3) prospectus writing (3)
research and thesis (12)

Program Description:

The strength of ASU's history and philosophy of science program is to bring philosophy, history and the study of science together. This degree program combines solid training in the core areas of philosophy with an emphasis on transdisciplinary studies of the sciences, and their:

- ☐ • conceptual structure
- ☐ • epistemology
- ☐ • history
- ☐ • impacts on society

The program is especially appropriate for students with a background in philosophy who seek to broaden their disciplinary studies with a historical perspective. Applicants will typically come from undergraduate programs that have included philosophical, historical, or history and philosophy of science training or with a master's degree in one of those fields. Science students are eligible as well and will make up relevant undergraduate humanistic core courses during their first years.

Most graduates will seek a career based in philosophical or historical analyses of the sciences.

Physics, MS (LAPHYSIMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Physics, MS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The MS program in physics provides graduate instruction and research experience appropriate to many physics-related careers. The structure of the program is flexible enough to allow a wide range of programs of study and a wide range of student backgrounds. It is also suitable for part-time study.

Completion of the program requires a minimum of two years, with students typically taking courses for the first three semesters and completing a research project in their final semester. The student defends a master's degree thesis at the end of the program.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a thesis.

The master's degree in physics can emphasize either physics or physics in combination with other fields.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in physics or a closely related field, from a regionally accredited institution. To be admitted to the master's degree program in physics without deficiencies, applicants should have adequate undergraduate preparation equivalent to an undergraduate major of 30 credit hours in physics and 20 credit hours in mathematics. Courses in analytic mechanics, electromagnetism and modern physics, including quantum mechanics, are particularly important.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • test scores for the verbal, quantitative and analytical sections of the GRE
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency in the form of a TOEFL or equivalent score.

Submission of scores for the physics GRE subject test is recommended, although not mandatory.

Financial support in the form of teaching or research assistantships is contingent upon:

- ☐ • satisfactory performance in coursework
- ☐ • timely completion of the final examination for the master's degree
- ☐ • need and availability of such support

Students on probation are offered financial support only under exceptional circumstances.

Physics, PHD (LAPHYSIPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Physics, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD in physics is intended for highly capable students having the interest and ability to follow a career in independent research. Graduates find positions in a variety of settings, such as:

- ☐ • academic faculty

- ☐ • administration
- ☐ • government labs
- ☐ • industrial labs
- ☐ • management

The recent advent of the graduate faculty initiative at ASU extends the spectrum of potential physics doctoral topics and advisors to include highly transdisciplinary projects that draw upon:

- ☐ • biochemistry
- ☐ • biology
- ☐ • chemistry
- ☐ • electrical engineering
- ☐ • materials science
- ☐ • other related fields

Consequently, students and doctoral advisors can craft novel doctoral projects that transcend the classical palette of physics subjects. Transdisciplinary expertise of this nature is increasingly vital to modern science and technology.

Current areas of particular emphasis within the department include:

- ☐ • biological physics
- ☐ • cosmology
- ☐ • electron diffraction and imaging
- ☐ • nanoscale and materials physics
- ☐ • particle physics and astrophysics

The department has more than 90 doctoral students and more than 40 faculty members.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (18 credit hours)

PHY 500 Research Rotation I (3)

PHY 500 Research Rotation II (3)

PHY 521 Classical and Continuum Mechanics (3)

PHY 531 Electrodynamics (3)

PHY 541 Statistical Physics (3)

PHY 576 Quantum Theory (3)

Electives or Research (54 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (12 credit hours)

PHY 799 Dissertation (12)

Additional Curriculum Information

Of particular note within the core courses are the PHY 500 Research Rotations, which are specifically designed to engage doctoral students in genuine, faculty-guided research starting in their first semester at ASU. Students take PHY 500 in the first and second year of study.

Coursework beyond the core courses is established by the student's doctoral advisor and supervisory committee, working in partnership with the student. The intent is to tailor the doctoral training to the specific research interests and aptitudes of the student while ensuring that each graduating student emerges with the expertise, core knowledge and problem-solving skills that define a successful doctoral degree in physics.

When approved by the student's supervisory committee and the Graduate College, this program allows 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree to be used for this degree. If students do not have a previously awarded master's degree, the 30 credit hours of coursework will be made up of electives to reach the required 84 credit hours.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in physics or a closely related area, from a regionally accredited institution. Applicants must have had adequate undergraduate preparation equivalent to an undergraduate major of 30 credit hours in physics and 20 credit hours in mathematics. Courses in analytic mechanics, electromagnetism and modern physics, including quantum mechanics, are particularly important.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • GRE scores (general GRE and physics GRE)
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Scores from the verbal, quantitative and analytical sections of the GRE are required. The subject GRE test scores are also required.

Applicants requesting credit for prior graduate courses, taken either at ASU or elsewhere, must demonstrate mastery of the relevant course material to the graduate-level standards of the Department of Physics.

- Political Science, BA

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior and senior years, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours and a portfolio, or 30 credit hours and a thesis.

A minimum of 30 credit hours is required for the degree. This program includes two options: a thesis and portfolio (nonthesis).

- ☐ • All candidates must take POS 503 and the core courses in the student's major field.
- ☐ • A maximum of six credit hours in approved courses may be taken outside the department.
- ☐ • Six credit hours of reading and conferences (POS 590) or independent study (POS 592) may count toward the 30 credit hour requirement.
- ☐ • Additional hours must be taken in graduate-level courses and seminars each semester until coursework is completed.

If the thesis option is followed, the program must include a combination of three credit hours of research (POS 592) and three credit hours of thesis (POS 599).

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program; or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • list of political science courses taken
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

To assist in evaluating all candidates, the applicant should list titles and related information for all previous undergraduate and graduate courses or coursework in political science or related fields. The information should be in a table with the following column headings:

Crs Title | Undergrad Credit Hrs | Graduate Credit Hrs | Grade | Institution | Year

The file must be saved in a .doc, .rtf or .txt format and uploaded with the online graduate admission application.

Undergraduate coursework in political science is not a prerequisite for admission. However, master's degree students should have a basic understanding of elementary statistics and the undergraduate content of the political science fields of concentration that they wish to study. Students should allow sufficient time to acquire such a background.

Psychology, PHD (LAPSYCHPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Psychology, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The Department of Psychology offers doctoral programs designed to provide outstanding training in innovative research, methodology and the application of psychological principles to a wide variety of human conditions. The department is organized into six major areas of interest:

- ☐ • behavioral neuroscience
- ☐ • clinical
- ☐ • cognitive science
- ☐ • developmental
- ☐ • quantitative (must apply to the Quantitative Research Methods, PhD)
- ☐ • social psychology

Students pursue their graduate studies within one of these six areas, and each area determines the basic curriculum for their graduate program. There is, however, substantial opportunity to integrate courses of study across areas in the department.

Further specialized emphases are available that integrate across programs in the university (e.g., integrating psychology and law).

At the core of doctoral training in psychology is an emphasis on the development of skill in research and quantitative methods. Faculty in all six areas are actively engaged in major research programs. These theoretically grounded research programs address the breadth of psychological processes:

- ☐ • cognitive processes (e.g., attention, language, memory) as they occur within the context of perception and action, personality and issues of stigma and prejudice
- ☐ • cultural influences on psychological processes
- ☐ • evolution and behavior
- ☐ • individual resilience
- ☐ • lifespan developmental aspects of emotion and cognition
- ☐ • neurobiological and psychosocial processes that underlie behavior and health (e.g., drug abuse, stress, heart disease)
- ☐ • prevention of child mental health problems

A unique strength of the Department of Psychology is the wealth of outstanding faculty members whose specialization is quantitative methods. A breadth of courses and experiences in quantitative methods are available that are well-integrated into the areas of research that characterize the department and offer students a rare opportunity to develop expertise in this critical domain.

Concurrent Degrees:

This degree is also offered as concurrent degree program with Juris Doctor, JD

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

In addition to required coursework (according to training area), students take courses related to their area of interest as determined in consultation with their supervisory committees. All doctoral students complete 12 dissertation credit hours. Requirements vary across training areas.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in psychology or a related field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

The Department of Psychology application process is completed online through ASU's Graduate Admission Services which includes the application form and official transcripts. Application to the Department of Psychology doctoral programs is also completed via SlideRoom, to process supplemental application materials. The SlideRoom account requires an additional fee. To apply to the doctoral programs, follow the instructions on the Doctoral Program Admissions Instructions and Checklist.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • SlideRoom application and fee
- ☐ • statement of purpose form
- ☐ • applicant response form
- ☐ • graduate assistantship application
- ☐ • curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores

- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

It is strongly recommended to download and print the Doctoral Program Admissions Instructions and Checklist to ensure completion of the application process and include all of the required supplemental forms:

Students applying to the clinical program are strongly encouraged to submit Psychology Advanced Test GRE scores.

Religious Studies, MA (LARELIGMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Religious Studies, MA

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The faculty in religious studies offer a graduate program leading to the MA in religious studies. Candidates are offered an opportunity to develop knowledge of various religious traditions in their historical and cultural contexts and to learn research methods. Although students often concentrate upon a single religious tradition for their thesis work, the program seeks to provide a broadly comparative understanding of religions, not simply a specialist's training in a single tradition.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours including the required applied project course (REL 593) and a foreign language exam, or 30 credit hours, a thesis and a foreign language exam.

Required Core (6 credit hours)

REL 501 Research Methods in Religious Studies (3)

REL 502 Research Methods in Religious Studies (3)

Electives or Research (18-21 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (3-6 credit hours)

REL 599 Thesis (6) or
REL 593 Applied Project (3)

Additional Curriculum Information

There are two options for the culminating experience: a thesis or an applied project. An oral defense of the final written work is required for both options.

The thesis option is recommended for students intending to seek admission to a doctoral program upon completion of the master's degree or planning to teach in the discipline at community colleges. Thesis students must have reading knowledge of all languages relevant to the proposed thesis topic and take 18 credit hours of electives or research coursework.

The applied project option is recommended for students intending to augment their primary area of expertise and professional training in fields such as counseling, journalism, K-12 education, law, social work, and the ministry. The applied project requires submission of three publishable papers: one on theory and method, one on the student's minor area of study, and one on the major area of study. The student's chosen areas of study determine the coursework taken as electives, with applied project students taking 21 credit hours of electives coursework, four courses being in a major area of study and two courses being in a minor area. Reading knowledge of a foreign language relevant to the proposed area of study is required.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution. Transcripts must show evidence of having completed the equivalent of 15 credit hours of undergraduate work in the study of religions, including advanced courses in both western and Asian or other nonwestern religions. Applicants who have not met this requirement may be required to take additional coursework beyond program requirements to remedy this deficiency.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.30 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program. The most competitive applicants will have a GPA of 3.50 or higher.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • curriculum vitae
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • contact information for three references
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. The Graduate College requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (PBT) or 80 (iBT).

Students are required to submit contact information for three academic references who are qualified to provide detailed, accurate evaluations of the applicant's potential as a graduate student in religious studies. Professors are preferred, particularly faculty advisors. Recommenders are contacted by the Graduate College with a request to complete a reference questionnaire.

GRE scores should be no more than five years old. Official scores should be sent by the ETS to ASU using the university code 4007. The department code can be left blank or entered as 0000.

The statement of purpose should be approximately 1,000 words and should outline the applicant's academic background, career goals, and specific areas of interest in religious studies.

Social Science Research Methods (Certificate), Certificate (LASSRMGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Social Science Research Methods (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

The graduate certificate program in social science research methods prepares students to acquire, manage and analyze a broad range of data on human thought and human behavior. Data can be qualitative (e.g., text, images or sound) or quantitative (e.g., direct observation, surveys or geospatial). Data acquisition skills may include the downloading and managing of information from online sources or the primary collection of data in surveys or in direct observation. A key feature of this program is a focus on data analysis, so students and professionals will be able to analyze and interpret any data that they can collect. All students in this program will demonstrate skills in statistical analysis plus skills in a selection of methods related to their interests.

Degree Requirements:

Required Core (3 credit hours)

SOC 508 Structural Equation Analysis for the Social Sciences (3) or

STP 533 Applied Multivariate Analysis (3) or

POS 604 Polimetrics II (3)

Electives or Research (12 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (3 credit hours)

GCU 593 Applied Project (3)

Additional Curriculum Information

Students will select one of the multivariate data analysis core courses for a total of three credit hours.

Students select four three-credit hour elective and research methods courses for a total of 12 credit hours in consultation with the program directors. The program recognizes that other graduate-level courses on research methods are offered at ASU. Advanced courses on methods are often taught in omnibus courses, courses that have rotating content and whose content is not reflected in their titles. Students may include these courses in their certificate curriculum with approval of the program directors.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution (e.g., human development, sustainability, geography, political science, including other areas with approval of the academic unit).

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Applicants must have completed an introductory statistics course before admission to the program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of interest
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Examples of introductory statistics courses include: CRJ 504 Statistical Tools for Criminology and Criminal Justice NUR 617 Foundational Concepts in Science and Statistics POS 603 Polimetrics ISTP 530 Applied Regression Analysis or equivalent with approval of the academic unit

A statement of interest should include how the certificate program will enhance the applicant's graduate studies or professional work.

Social Transformation Certificate, Certificate (LASOTGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Social Transformation (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

This certificate program is designed for graduate and postbaccalaureate students interested in how change is catalyzed by social movements, protest, law, social entrepreneurship, activism and community organizing. Through the exploration of theories and research related to social change, students are able to augment their disciplinary degrees and be prepared to contribute as leaders and change makers in their communities.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours and a practicum.

Required Core (3 credit hours)

SST 501 Foundations of Social Transformation (3)

Electives (9 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (3 credit hours)

SST 580 Practicum (3)

Additional Curriculum Information

The electives taken will be selected with the faculty advisor. The faculty advisor will directionalize the electives to ensure they have a common theme. That will help to ensure students' experiences in the courses align with the learning goals outlined for the certificate.

The culminating experience will be a community-based practicum experience and a paper that synthesizes students' interests with their implications for social transformation. The practicum placement will be with a local nonprofit or governmental organization working toward social innovation and social change. Students will be assisted in identifying a practicum placement by the program advisor. At the end of the practicum, students will produce a paper which will analyze the social and political dimensions of some issue within (or aspect of) social transformation. The paper should also identify the implications of this aspect or issue for social policy and social justice. The paper should begin within the context of the practicum experience and will be presented to the designated subset of the certificate executive board for final approval. Students will take SST 580 Practicum to complete the practicum and then revise, improve and finalize the paper with a certificate faculty member.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of purpose
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Students must submit a statement of purpose to the School of Social Transformation that is no longer than 250 words. The statement should indicate any demonstrated interest in the study of social transformation (e.g., previous coursework, professional experience, internships, career plans).

Applicants must meet the above criteria as judged by the School of Social Transformation graduate committee to have strong academic credentials (undergraduate or graduate GPA) as well as demonstrated interest in the area of social transformation. The committee will review applications for the certificate program in the fall and spring semesters of each year and make its admission recommendations to Graduate Admission Services.

Socio-Economic Justice (certificate), Certificate (LAECJUGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Socio-Economic Justice (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The graduate certificate program in socioeconomic justice addresses the social and political implications of global and local economies for economic inequality and social justice. This transdisciplinary program fuses interests in political economy, socioeconomic inequality and analysis of related policies and their consequences for social welfare in areas of income, housing, employment and education.

This program complements the current graduate curriculum at ASU and is structured to allow students to draw upon a combination of core courses in justice and social inquiry and coursework from units from throughout the university. The approach is transdisciplinary (i.e., inclusive of courses in a variety of disciplines but transcending disciplinary boundaries through an integrative core curriculum), intersectional (i.e., considering gender, race, class, nation and sexual relations) and transnational (courses that examine global and local concerns). It will strengthen student understanding of the justice implications of the convergence of social and economic inequalities in the global economy.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours.

Required Core (6 credit hours)

Students must select one course from each of the following two areas of study:

Economic Justice (3 credit hours)

JUS 550 Gender, Race and Economic Justice (3) or

JUS 660 Globalization and Economic Justice (3) Conducting Research in Communities (3 credit hours)

JHR 525 Action Research in Social Justice and Human Rights (3) or

JUS 633 Community Research (3)

Electives (9 credit hours)

Additional Curriculum Information

Students must select three elective courses on socioeconomic justice from a restricted list, and they should see the academic unit for the full list of possible courses.

Only one 400-level course may be listed on the plan of study. Students must have prior approval from the director of the certificate program for use of any 400-level course.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • at least one letter of recommendation
- ☐ • a statement of purpose for pursuing the certificate
- ☐ • a writing sample demonstrating excellent writing and analytical skills
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

The letter of recommendation, statement of purpose and writing sample should be submitted to the justice and social inquiry program office.

Spanish, PHD (LASPANPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Spanish, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The School of International Letters and Cultures offers a graduate program leading to a PhD in Spanish. The program trains students for entrance into the academic profession (teachers and scholars) as well as for professions outside of academia. The Spanish doctoral program offers three literature tracks and one linguistics track.

The tracks in literature promote the study of the production, distribution and reception of texts, either written or visual (photographs, films, visual narratives, etc.); study of their linguistic, rhetorical and literary structures and functions; and study of the internal and external forces shaping literature, with an emphasis on literary theories and cultural studies. Many literature courses explore issues relating to gender, class, race, ethnicity, globalization, post-human theories, and digital humanities.

The linguistics curriculum provides advanced interdisciplinary graduate training in three focus areas: second-language acquisition and teaching methodologies; heritage language research and heritage language pedagogy; and sociolinguistics, bilingualism and Spanish in the U.S.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, two foreign language exams, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (3 credit hours)

Track (18 credit hours)

Focus Area (0 or 12 credit hours)

Electives (27 or 39 credit hours)

Research (12 credit hours)

SPA 792 Research (12)

Culminating Experience (12 credit hours)

SPA 799 Dissertation (12)

Additional Curriculum Information

The doctoral program in Spanish has four available tracks: Early-Modern Iberian studies, Spanish linguistics, Mexican American studies, and visual studies.

Students in the Spanish linguistics track are required to complete 12 credit hours in a focus area. Available focus areas are: second-language acquisition and teaching methodologies; heritage language research and pedagogy; and sociolinguistics, bilingualism and Spanish in the U.S. Students in this track will complete a minimum of 27 credit hours of elective coursework.

Students in the Early-Modern Iberian studies, Mexican American studies, and visual studies tracks complete 39 credit hours of elective coursework and do not select a focus area.

The candidate must present an acceptable dissertation based on original investigation. The dissertation must represent a significant contribution to knowledge and demonstrate the candidate's ability to do independent, scholarly research.

Each candidate is expected to demonstrate a reading knowledge of two languages other than English and Spanish. The language requirements must be satisfied before the candidate is eligible to take the comprehensive examination.

The written and oral comprehensive examination, designed to ascertain the candidate's knowledge and orientation in the field of study and competency to proceed with the dissertation, is required at or near the end of coursework.

When approved by the student's supervisory committee and the Graduate College, this program allows 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree to be used for this degree.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in Spanish or equivalent, from a regionally accredited institution. Applicants from other academic backgrounds with relevant coursework in Spanish language and cultural studies may also be evaluated by the admissions committee.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.75 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.75 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

It is recommended but not required that students applying for admission to the program submit GRE scores; this is especially advisable for applicants for the Spanish Graduate Fellowship Award.

Candidates for the program will be required to demonstrate a near-native oral proficiency in Spanish and to show that they have developed a high order of expository prose in English and Spanish by presenting a term paper or a chapter of the master's degree thesis as their writing sample.

Statistics, MS (GCSTATMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Statistics, MS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences offers a program leading to an MS degree in statistics. The program draws upon a wide spectrum of faculty research and teaching interests, including from faculty outside of the school. As a result, plans of study can be transdisciplinary and tailored to reflect individual needs and goals.

Degree Requirements:

30 credit hours including the required applied project course (STP 593 or IEE 593 or ECN 593) and an oral comprehensive exam, or 30 credit hours, a thesis and an oral comprehensive exam, or 30 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam and an oral comprehensive exam.

Required Theory Courses (9 credit hours)

STP 501 Theory of Statistics I: Distribution Theory 3 (3)

STP 502 Theory of Statistics II: Inference (3)

STP 526 Theory of Statistical Linear Models (3)

Required Applied Linear Statistical Model Courses (6 credit hours)

ECN 525 or IEE 578 or STP 530 Applied Regression Analysis (3)

IEE 572 or STP 531 Applied Analysis of Variance and Design of Experiments (3)

Electives (9-15 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (0-6 credit hours)

ECN 593 or IEE 593 or STP 593 Applied Project (3)

ECN 599 or IEE 599 or STP 599 Thesis (6)

Oral and written comprehensive exam (0)

Additional Curriculum Information

Prerequisites may not be used to complete the 30 credit hours.

The required theory courses are fundamental to the education of statisticians and are necessary for more advanced graduate study.

The program must also include either three credit hours of ECN 593, IEE 593 or STP 593 Applied Project; six credit hours of ECN 599, IEE 599 or STP 599 Thesis; or an oral and written comprehensive exam on advanced statistics coursework to be administered by the School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences. The applied project or thesis must be defended at an oral examination. The content of the applied project report or thesis, in its final form, must be suitable for submission to an academic journal or conference proceedings. The thesis must conform to the Graduate College format requirements.

The remaining credit hours come from elective courses chosen by the student with the approval of supervising faculty. A maximum of six credit hours may be chosen from a related field on which statistics relies (such as computer science) or in which statistics is an essential tool (e.g., biostatistics, quality control). The elective courses allow the student to emphasize a particular area of statistical inference, culminating in an applied project report or a thesis on a topic in that area. No foreign language or written comprehensive examinations are required.

The student has considerable flexibility in selecting an area of specialty.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in mathematics, statistics or a closely related area from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of education and career goals
- ☐ • GRE (general) scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants should have completed the following courses (equivalents at ASU are given in parentheses): Applicants who lack any of these prerequisite courses must complete the prerequisites before being considered for admission.

Transborder Studies, PHD (LATCLPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Transborder Studies, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

This program is intended for graduate students who seek rigorous study of transborder and transnational economic, political, artistic, social, psychological, ecological and cultural dynamics, with implications not only for the Mexican-origin and Latina/o communities in the U.S. or the U.S.-Mexico border region, but also for other border communities around the world. This transdisciplinary degree is designed for students with serious interest in the many ways border processes affect society: past, present and future.

Due to the focus on transborder experiences in people's everyday lives, both regionally and globally, this program equips students with the knowledge, skills and competencies for transborder research, scholarship and innovation --- all of which are highly needed by current and future scholars in order to better grasp the complexity of contemporary societies in the 21st century.

Students will gain the ability to communicate findings, creations or productions to an academic and community public; the ability to create pedagogical models, learning units and assessment protocols for the transmission of learned concepts, theories and methods; and the ability to design and develop transdisciplinary research. They will learn how to display and apply concepts, methods and theories in courses and research projects; gain competency in the most pertinent theoretical and methodological approaches to the study of transborder and transnational contexts; and acquire historical understanding of the development of transborder ecologies, economies, social relations, migration and health, culture, power, language and expressive culture and media.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a foreign language exam, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (6 credit hours)

TSS 503 Epistemologies and Transborder Thought (3) or

TSS 504 Tools for Transborder Research (3)

Electives and Research (36 credit hours)

Dissertation (12 credit hours)

TSS 799 Dissertation (12)

Additional Curricular Information

When approved by the student's supervisory committee and the Graduate College, this program allows 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree to be used for this degree. If students do not already have a master's degree in a related field, then the remaining 30 hours will be made up of electives and research that equal the 84 credit hours required for the doctoral program.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in a related field such as anthropology, economics, education, sociology, literature or psychology from a regionally accredited institution. Applicants who have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in another discipline must align their scholarly interests with the program's mission.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee

- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • writing sample
- ☐ • resume or CV
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation (from academicians)
- ☐ • GRE scores

Transportation Systems (certificate), Certificate (GCTRANSCE)

Online Degree Search Title: Transportation Systems (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Transportation has emerged as one of the highest-priority issues for policymakers, employers and citizens. To respond to this challenging environment, the transportation systems certificate program enhances the education of current and future transportation professionals by building upon existing programs in five disciplines offered in five colleges and two campuses in the ASU system. The program approaches the subject from an integrated systems perspective, and it exposes students to a range of transportation alternatives and to the interrelationships among transportation, economic development, land use, energy and the environment.

The certificate program offers current ASU graduate students and transportation professionals the opportunity to pursue a wide range of transportation-related issues from a multi-modal and transdisciplinary perspective. The certificate is intended to be either a specialization within an existing master's degree or as a stand-alone nondegree program.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours including the required applied project course (PUP 593).

Required Core (3 credit hours)

a seminar course (3)

Electives (9 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (3 credit hours)

PUP 593 Applied Project (3)

Additional Curriculum Information

Three electives must be taken from an approved list of transportation-related courses (including at least one from a field outside the student's major); students should see the academic unit. Students are strongly encouraged to include as one of the three elective courses a course in methods or techniques applicable to transportation systems planning.

In the applied project course, students are encouraged to work with transportation professionals in their area of interest to identify a project that is of interest to the broader public.

All decisions related to program offerings and departmental participation are made in cooperation with the transportation systems certificate admissions and advisory committee, which includes a member from each participating department.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • online graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • responses to two essays
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants who wish to seek a graduate degree in any of the cooperating departments and who are not currently enrolled at ASU must complete the full graduate school application process as specified by the department of interest in addition to the online application for the transportation certificate. The applications will be evaluated independent of each other.

Applicants will be asked to answer the following essay questions:

- ☐ • What do you expect to gain from the transportation certificate program?
- ☐ • What types of courses within the certificate program would be the most helpful in meeting your objective?

Nursing and Health Innovation, College of Adult Gerontology Nurse Practitioner (Certificate), Certificate (NUAGNPGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Adult Gerontology Nurse Practitioner (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

This Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education-accredited certificate program is designed for nurses with a master's degree in nursing who seek to become adult gerontology nurse practitioners and for nurse practitioners with a master's degree or DNP who seek additional certification as adult gerontology nurse practitioners. This certificate program is offered in a hybrid iCourse and in-person format that requires students to travel to campus for orientation and then two or three times per semester. Adult gerontology-focused theory and clinical courses include theories, principles and clinical skills in the care of adults across the lifespan.

Focused clinical experiences are arranged with appropriate preceptors and administrators. Every attempt will be made to arrange this in the student's geographical area. In the event that clinical sites are unavailable in that area or if the faculty determine the student needs additional faculty supervision of skills, the student will be required to complete the clinical experience in the Phoenix area. Rural health and experiences with disadvantaged and multicultural populations are encouraged, and sites are available for these experiences.

Degree Requirements:

Required Core (22 credit hours)

DNP 623 Adult-Gerontology Health Promotion (3)

DNP 624 Adult-Gerontology Health Promotion Practicum (3)

DNP 625 Management of Common Health Problems in Adults Across the Lifespan (3)

DNP 626 Management of Common Health Problems/Adults Across the Lifespan Practicum (5)

DNP 627 Management of Complex Health Alterations in Adults Across the Lifespan (3)

DNP 628 Management of Adults Across the Lifespan w/Complex Health Alterations Practicum (5)

Additional Curriculum Information

Nurses who complete this certificate will meet the eligibility requirements to take the National Adult Gerontology Nurse Practitioner Certification Examination. In addition to completing didactic courses, students will complete 13 credit hours (585 clock hours) of practicum experiences in a community setting.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Nursing and Health Innovation.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's and master's degree in nursing from a nationally recognized, regionally accredited academic institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ▢ graduate admission application and application fee
- ▢ official transcripts
- ▢ documentation of a current unencumbered RN license in the state in which the student plans to do clinical practicums
- ▢ three professional letters of recommendation
- ▢ resume
- ▢ admission essay
- ▢ proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency per the Graduate College requirement and all requirements for the Commission on Graduates of Foreign Nursing Schools.

All students are required to have an unencumbered Arizona RN license or an unencumbered compact state RN license as mandated by the Arizona State Board of Nursing. The RN license must remain unencumbered throughout enrollment in any nursing program.

Applicants are required to have an in-person interview with the program faculty.

Applicants are asked to submit an admission essay addressing:

- ☐ • Describe your career goal(s) for the next 5-10 years and discuss how obtaining a NP certificate from Arizona State University will help you meet these goals.
- ☐ • Read The Essentials of Doctoral Education for Advanced Nursing Practice (2006) from the American Association of Colleges of Nursing. Focus on one of the first seven essentials and describe how meeting this essential will further your career goal(s).

All College of Nursing and Health Innovation students are required to complete health and safety requirements, and must have a passing disposition on a background clearance and satisfactory completion of a substance screen with the program's identified agency.

One year of clinical experience working within the student's specialty population is preferred.

DNP graduates are prepared to practice at the most advanced level of nursing. This program, accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education, provides a foundation for this specialty through graduate courses in application of theory to advance practice. Courses focus on theories, principles and clinical skills in the care of women and their families including critical thinking, diagnosis, problem-solving and nursing management of women throughout the maternity cycle and with common gynecological problems. Client education, communication and collaboration are emphasized.

This program is offered in a hybrid and iCourse format that requires students to travel to campus for up to a week for orientation at the beginning of the program and then two or three times per semester.

Focused clinical experiences are arranged with appropriate preceptors and administrators. Every attempt will be made to arrange these in the student's geographical area. In the event that clinical sites are unavailable in that area or if the faculty determines the student needs additional faculty supervision of skills, the student will be required to complete their clinical experience in the Phoenix area. Experiences with disadvantaged and multicultural populations are encouraged as are experiences in rural areas, and sites are available for these experiences.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours including the required applied project course (DNP 707).

Completion of an evidence-based doctoral applied project focused on a clinical issue relevant to advanced practice nursing is required.

The American Nurses Credentialing Center has recommended a minimum of 1,000 postbaccalaureate practicum hours for all students completing a nurse practitioner doctoral program. This program includes 1,125 practicum hours, exceeding the ANCC requirement.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Nursing and Health Innovation.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in nursing from a nationally recognized, regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • three professional letters of recommendation
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • goal statement
- ☐ • admission essay
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency per the Graduate College requirement and all requirements for the Commission on Graduates of Foreign Nursing Schools.

All students are also required to have an unencumbered Arizona RN license or an unencumbered compact state RN license as mandated by the Arizona State Board of Nursing. The RN license must remain unencumbered throughout enrollment in any nursing program.

An interview with program faculty is required.

One year of clinical experience working within the student's specialty population is preferred.

Health and safety requirements include passing disposition on a background clearance and satisfactory completion of a substance screen.

No admission examination is required.

Online Degree Search Title: Advanced Nursing Practice, DNP

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

DNP graduates are prepared to practice at the most advanced level of nursing. This program, accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education, is designed for master's degree-prepared, advanced practice nurses seeking a Doctor of Nursing Practice degree. Courses are designed for clinical experts and are innovative, interesting and organized to provide students with expert colleagues and mentors across the U.S. who can challenge them to take their practice to a new level.

Graduates of this program will be able to facilitate the application and integration of research into clinical practice using innovative approaches to improve health care outcomes of populations and individuals across multiple settings.

This program is offered in a hybrid iCourse and in-person format that requires students to travel to campus for up to a week for orientation at the beginning of the program and two to three times per semester.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours including the required applied project course (DNP 707).

Applicants to the post-master's program should identify a relevant clinical issue related to advanced practice nursing that they would like to pursue during their doctoral program. Students will complete 540 hours of clinical practice residency and the program courses. Completion of an evidence-based doctoral applied project is required. Each project will be developed individually with each student. Each student will have a primary mentor working with them on the project. Clinical practice residency hours will be used to complete the project in a practice setting; work settings may be included, but specific objectives will be developed individually with each student that may be different from the student's job. Experiences with disadvantaged and multicultural populations are encouraged, as are experiences in rural areas, and sites are available for these experiences.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Nursing and Health Innovation.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's and a master's degree in nursing from a nationally recognized, regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

Biospecimen Repository Administration (certificate), Certificate (NUBRAGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Biospecimen Repository Administration (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Online

Program Description:

The biospecimen repository administration certificate program prepares students to oversee the business and administrative operations of a biospecimen repository. The collection, storage and distribution of biological samples such as blood and tissue for research and personalized medicine is changing how researchers and doctors look at health, disease and treatments. Biobanks, or biospecimen repositories, found in hospitals, research institutions, laboratories, academic sites and pharmaceutical companies, need trained and capable leaders who can oversee the business, technical and operational aspects of the site including regulatory and informatics pieces. Leaders also need to apply best practices, existing regulations, and current methods and standards for the proper management of biospecimen repositories.

Focusing on collection, storage and disbursement of samples, the program includes ethical and practical considerations of biospecimen resource management and operations, resource evaluation and implementation, and project management. Related business concepts such as cost-benefit analytics, personnel and sustainability of the repository are also covered in the program. Emphasizing principles of ethical and quality practices, this program will prepare students to work in this highly regulated field.

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours.

Required Core (15 credit hours)

HCR 545 Foundations of Biospecimen Repository Administration (3)

HCR 546 Management of Biospecimen Repository Operations (3)

HCR 547 Biospecimen Resource and Technology Management (3)

HCR 548 Regulation and Ethics in Biospecimen Repository Administration (3)

HCR 549 Scientific Innovation and Biospecimen Repository Administration (3)

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Nursing and Health Innovation.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in any business, science, engineering, nursing, medicine, math, technology or health-related field or a bachelor's degree in any other field (not mentioned above) with more than six months vocational experience in the biospecimen repository administration field.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00=A) in an applicable master's degree program.

Family Nurse Practitioner (certificate), Certificate (NUFMPGRCE)

Online Degree Search Title: Family Nurse Practitioner (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

This certificate program accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education is designed for nurses with a DNP or MS degree in nursing who seek to become family nurse practitioners. This certificate program is offered in a hybrid iCourse and in-person format that requires students to travel to campus for up to a week for orientation at the beginning of the program and two or three times per semester.

Focused clinical experiences are arranged with appropriate preceptors and administrators. Every attempt will be made to arrange this in the student's geographical area. In the event that clinical sites are unavailable in that area or if the faculty determine the student needs additional faculty supervision of skills, the student will be required to complete the clinical experience in the Phoenix area. Rural health and experiences with disadvantaged and multicultural populations are encouraged, and sites are available for these experiences.

Degree Requirements:

22 credit hours.

This graduate certificate program (including 585 clinical hours) prepares nurses with their master's degree to become family nurse practitioners.

Prerequisites required or equivalent courses taken in master's program:

DNP 604 Advanced Human Pathophysiology Across Lifespan (4)

DNP 605 Advanced Health Assessment Across Lifespan (3)

DNP 608 Advanced Pharmacotherapeutics Across Lifespan (3)
DNP 609 Advanced Practice Nursing Role I (1)

Students will have an individual review of their transcripts and an individualized program of study designed to meet certification requirements. This may add up to one year of additional study to complete this certificate.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Nursing and Health Innovation.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's and master's degree in nursing from a nationally recognized, regionally accredited academic institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

Nursing (Community Health Advanced Practice Nursing), MS (NUCHNDTMS)

Online Degree Search Title: Community Health Nursing, MS

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The community health nursing graduate program provides theoretical and practical foundations for advanced practice in community and public health nursing in public or private sector health care settings. Graduate courses in nursing theory, research, epidemiology and biostatistics provide a foundation for practice in community and public health nursing. By combining public and community health theory with nursing theory and research, the community health nurse considers all influences on the population and community in decision-making and outcome evaluation. The major focus in this specialty area is on utilizing public health sciences and skills in the assessment of communities and populations, policy development, program planning, effective communication and the impact of cultural influences on health. The graduate in community and public health is actively engaged in education (e.g., community, staff, students and colleagues), case management, expert clinical practice, consultation, research and administration.

Degree Requirements:

45 credit hours including the required applied project course (NUR 593).

The practicum and internship requirements include 540 clock hours. At the completion of the program, students are eligible to take the American Nurses Credentialing Center exam for national certification as an advanced public health nurse.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Nursing and Health Innovation.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in nursing from a nationally recognized, regionally accredited academic institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • current unencumbered license
- ☐ • GRE analytical writing section scores
- ☐ • three online recommendations
- ☐ • self-evaluation submitted by the applicant
- ☐ • an interview with the program faculty

Women's Health Nurse Practitioner (Certificate), Certificate (NUWHNPGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Women's Health Nurse Practitioner (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

This Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education-accredited certificate program is designed for nurses with a master's degree in nursing who seek to become women's health nurse practitioners or for nurse practitioners with a master's degree or DNP who seek additional certification as women's health nurse practitioners. This certificate program is offered in a hybrid iCourse and in-person format that requires students to travel to campus for orientation and then two or three times per semester. Women's health care theory and clinical courses include theories, principles and clinical skills in the care of women and their families. Courses focus on critical thinking, diagnosis, problem-solving and nursing management of women throughout the maternity cycle and with common gynecological problems. Client education, communication and collaboration are emphasized.

Focused clinical experiences are arranged with appropriate preceptors and administrators. Every attempt will be made to arrange this in the student's geographical area. In the event that clinical sites are unavailable in that area or if the faculty determine the student needs additional faculty supervision of skills, the student will be required to complete the clinical experience in the Phoenix area. Rural health and experiences with disadvantaged and multicultural populations are encouraged, and sites are available for these experiences.

Degree Requirements:

Required Core (23 credit hours)

DNP 613 Women's Health Promotion I (3)

DNP 614 Women's Health Practicum I (3)

DNP 615 Management of Common Problems in Women's Health (3)

Community Resources and Development, PHD (PPCRDPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Community Resources and Development, PhD

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The School of Community Resources and Development offers a graduate program leading to the PhD in community resources and development.

The doctoral program in community resources and development is a theoretically grounded, research-intensive degree program designed to prepare graduates for research-oriented careers in higher education, governmental agencies, nonprofit organizations and private-sector businesses. The program is based on the concept of building sustainable and healthy communities as the unifying principle in the established focus areas of:

- ☐ • community studies
- ☐ • nonprofit leadership and management
- ☐ • parks, recreation and leisure
- ☐ • tourism development and management

The theoretical and methodological approaches embedded in this program serve to integrate scholarship in these areas, in order to gain a more meaningful understanding of and impact on community life and dynamics. The program is transdisciplinary in nature. The core faculty engaged in this program is housed in the School of Community Resources and Development. In addition, the program builds on current collaborations with faculty with related research interests from many ASU departments, schools and centers.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (24 credit hours)

CRD 610 Sustainable Communities (3)

CRD 620 Community Research Methods (3)

CRD 640 Research Seminar in Community Resources and Development I (3)

CRD 650 Research Seminar II (3)

CRD 683 Fieldwork (3)

REC 502 Statistical and Data Analysis (3)

REC 555 Theoretical Perspectives in Community Development (3) advanced statistics or methods (3)

Electives or Research (18 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (12 credit hours)

CRD 799 Dissertation (12)

Additional Curricular Information

Up to 30 hours from a previously awarded master's degree can count toward the doctoral requirements.

All students are advised initially by the doctoral program director as a cohort. Students are required to take 24 credit hours of core coursework, 15 hours of which are with the cohort during the first year and six hours of which are with the cohort during the second year. Students are assigned an individual advisor or mentor at the end of the first year of study. A supervisory committee is also formed at the end of the first year which reflects the interests of the student and faculty.

Each student develops a plan of study in consultation with the doctoral program coordinator, advisor and supervisory committee. Students complete elective coursework, including courses from contributing disciplines, selected in consultation with their advisor to foster the transdisciplinary nature of the degree program. Students also complete at least six credit hours of CRD 792 Research and 12 credit hours of CRD 799 Dissertation. When the majority of coursework has been completed and before dissertation research is started, students must complete a written examination followed by an oral examination. These examinations must be completed within five years of admission.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Public Service and Community Solutions.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • a current and professional resume
- ☐ • a statement of academic and professional goals in sufficient detail to indicate compatibility with the educational objectives and capabilities of the doctoral program
- ☐ • GRE test scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency. International applicants are also required to submit TOEFL scores and a financial guarantee statement.

The recommendation letters may be a mix of academic and professional references, but each must address the applicant's capacity to successfully complete the doctoral program.

Students applying to the program are expected to have a master's degree (from an accredited institution) which included a master's degree-level research methods and statistics class or classes. If deficiencies exist in community resource and development-related coursework at the master's degree level, appropriate classes are suggested.

Students should see the program website for application deadlines and admission terms.

Applications are reviewed by the admission committee and recommendations for admission are then made by the graduate program director to the dean for the Graduate College.

Latino Cultural Competency in Social Work (certificate), Certificate (PPSWGGRCL)

Online Degree Search Title: Latino Cultural Competency in Social Work (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

In response to the need, ASU offers a graduate certificate in Latino cultural competency through the College of Public Service and Community Solutions' School of Social Work. The School of Social Work offers Latino-oriented courses with an emphasis on Spanish language development for professional social workers.

The goal of the program is to enhance a social work professional's capacity for engaging in culturally grounded practice with Latino clients and their families.

The program is intended for professionals who want to:

- ☐ • expand their employment potential by adding an expertise in professional services with Latinos
- ☐ • learn the critical, cross-cultural factors that influence a worker's competency in forming professional helping relationships with Latinos
- ☐ • learn the social and cultural context and theoretical principles of social work practice with Latinos
- ☐ • learn the social service delivery issues involved in providing services for bilingual and limited- or non-English-speaking Latino populations

Degree Requirements:

15 credit hours.

The following is required for students enrolled in the Master of Social Work program:

- ☐ • completion of 480 hours of field practicum with Latino clients and communities (60 percent of case load to be Spanish-speaking)
- ☐ • field practice consisting of six credit hours of field practicum
- ☐ • six credit hours of Latino-oriented coursework
- ☐ • SWG 533 Diversity and Oppression in a Social Work Context (3)

At least three hours are required to be taken from within the School of Social Work.

Requirements for those already working in the field of social work as a community professional social worker and community worker are as follows:

- ☐ • six credit hours of independent study field practice consisting of the completion of 480 hours with Latino clients and communities (60 percent of client caseload to be Spanish-speaking)
- ☐ • six credit hours of Latino-oriented coursework
- ☐ • SWG 533 Diversity and Oppression in a Social Work Context (3)

Additional Curricular Information

At least three credit hours of the Latino-oriented coursework are required to be taken from within the School of Social Work.

Students already working in the field of social work may petition to use their place of employment for the six credit hours of independent study field practice.

Students with a Master of Social Work or BSW degree who have completed SWG 533 in the past five years may substitute another Latino-oriented course.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Public Service and Community Solutions.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • the School of Social Work Latino cultural competency application form and the required $50 application fee
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Social Work graduate students must have graduate status in the College of Public Service and Community Solutions' School of Social Work and must demonstrate proficiency in the Spanish language.

Community professional social workers must possess a Master of Social Work, Bachelor of Social Work or related master's degree and must demonstrate proficiency in the Spanish language.

Community workers must have the equivalency of a two-year work experience in the social service field, an undergraduate degree, and demonstrate proficiency in the Spanish language.

Policy Informatics (Certificate), Certificate (PPPOIGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Policy Informatics (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The policy informatics certificate program provides knowledge and skills for students seeking careers that will use informatics tools, models and simulations to help individuals and groups deliberate and evaluate policy decisions as well as explore new governance infrastructures. Emphasis is placed on theories and research concerning decision-making, complexity theory, and visualization of quantitative and qualitative information, collective intelligence, behavioral economics and persuasive technologies.

Policy informatics helps to advance evidence-driven policy design, wherein scientific models and analyses drive decision-making for resolution of complex policy challenges, dilemmas and problems. This is both an emerging field of research and a community of practice focusing on advancing decision-making in the public sector through information-centric analysis of evidence that leverages computational and technological advances.

Professionals who use policy informatics are involved in designing, managing and evaluating information systems and infrastructures for policy construction, analysis and implementation.

Policy informatics advances the transdisciplinary nature of the public administration discipline by infusing it with the advances of information technology, management of information systems, and computational and informational science perspectives.

Public Administration, EMPA (PPPUAEMPA)

Online Degree Search Title: Public Administration - Executive, EMPA

Campus: Online

Program Description:

The ASU Executive Master of Public Administration is a 19-month online graduate degree program which also features three-day face-to-face executive sessions in both Phoenix and Washington, D.C. The program is a collaboration between the School of Public Affairs and the McCain Institute for International Leadership.

The ASU Executive MPA program is designed for public sector leaders throughout the world. Students will participate in the program as part of a learning cohort, and the one-course-at-a-time online structure will enable them to maintain a work and life balance as they immerse in each topic. The learning experience begins with an orientation and executive session in Phoenix. Approximately one year later, the class will reconvene in Washington, D.C. for a second executive session. The Executive MPA Program ends in Phoenix, where students present their applied projects and have the opportunity to participate in the ASU Commencement Ceremony.

The ASU Executive MPA Program enables students to expand the breadth and depth of their professional network. The online curriculum attracts a more geographically diverse pool of applicants, both nationally and internationally. The executive sessions in Phoenix and Washington, D.C. further enable students to develop deeper relationships with their classmates. Executive MPA students will be selected based on their ability to demonstrate the value they would add to the learning experience of the entire class, and a new cohort will begin each May.

Public Administration, MPA (PPPADTMPA)

Online Degree Search Title: Public Administration (MPA) - Downtown Phoenix

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The MPA is a transdisciplinary, professional degree program designed to prepare students for public service, public management and policy analysis at the local, state and national levels of government. The Master of Public Administration degree program is accredited by the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration.

Students may also elect to specialize in one of the three approved Master of Public Administration concentrations: urban management, nonprofit administration or emergency management.

The urban management concentration provides knowledge and skills for students seeking careers in local urban government management and enables students to develop the skills and techniques used by city and urban leaders and managers.

The concentration in nonprofit administration is intended for professionals who work in or desire to work in the nonprofit sector and who wish to explore research, theory and the practice of management and leadership in the nonprofit sector.

The concentration in emergency management prepares graduates for a challenging career as a professional emergency manager. This program allows students to focus on concerns related to emergency management within the larger field of public administration.

In addition, the school offers concurrent programs in planning, sustainability, criminology and criminal justice, and social work. For admission and program requirements, students should see <https://spa.asu.edu/content/concurrent-degrees> (<https://spa.asu.edu/content/concurrent-degrees>).

Students enrolling in Master of Public Administration core courses must demonstrate minimum competency in statistics and American government. Courses taken to fulfill the competency do not count toward the total credit hours required for the degree program. Completion of prerequisite courses is not a requirement for admission but must be completed within one semester after starting the program.

Competency in statistics is met with a grade of "B" (scale is 4.00 = "A") or higher in one of the approved courses (PAF 301 or PAF 401, POS 401, PSY 230, ECN 221, QBA 221, SWU 321, STP 226 or SOC 390) within the past two years or passing a diagnostic test approved by the MPA committee. Other courses taken within the last two years may be substituted upon approval of the Master of Public Administration director.

Competency in American government is a demonstrated understanding of American government institutions and processes. Students may be required to take an undergraduate class in American government (PAF 300, PAF 340, POS 110 or POS 310) with a grade of "B" or higher. The CLEP Exam can also be used to demonstrate competency in American government.

Public Administration (Urbanism), PHD (PPPAURBPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Public Administration and Policy (Urbanism), PhD

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The PhD in public administration and policy is a theoretically grounded research degree program designed to prepare students for an academic career. The program is also appropriate for individuals who want to conduct high-level research and policy development in public and nonprofit agencies, foundations and research institutes. It is designed for students who seek full-time study.

The goal is to develop well-rounded, independent scholars who are grounded in the classic and current literatures of public administration and public policy, skilled in research methods, and ready to make a positive and important contribution to the field through teaching and research.

The doctoral program in public administration and policy with an urbanism concentration permits students to draw upon the extensive resources in urban affairs at ASU. As a result, these students are poised for success as productive and active scholars, researchers and teachers upon graduation.

The concentration in urbanism is a mechanism for organizing varied perspectives on urbanism into a collective body of scholarship. The study of public administration is enriched by grounding it in a comprehensive understanding of the characteristics of urban context and the dynamic forces that shape them. The concentration in urbanism leverages the varied interests in urbanism and helps emerging scholars as they attempt to compare, contrast and take stock of urbanism. Working with faculty from across a range of departments and programs at ASU, doctoral students will be able to capture the creative tensions that scholarship on urbanism has inspired in order to stimulate a provocative, constructive kind of inquiry.

Degree Requirements:

90 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

The doctoral program is designed to promote the mastery of the core knowledge of public administration and public policy and to develop more specialized expertise in chosen areas of study and research. Accordingly, in the first year doctoral students take four core courses as a cohort. These courses focus on the foundations of the field, the philosophy of science, and theories and issues in governance, public policy, systems, organizations and human behavior. Additionally, first-year students enroll in at least two elective courses. In the second year, students hone their skills in quantitative and qualitative research, enroll in additional electives, and develop a program of study for their areas of specialization. In the third year, students take an advanced seminar in research and teaching, complete their work in their selected areas of specialization and move forward to a proposal for completing their dissertation.

The program consists of a minimum of 60 credit hours of graduate work beyond the master's degree. Of the 60 credit hours, at least 24 must be research and dissertation credit (of which no more than 12 hours may be dissertation credit). A minimum of 30 credit hours of approved coursework, exclusive of dissertation and research, must be taken at ASU after admission to the program. In addition to the core courses above, doctoral students are required to complete coursework in two areas of specialization. Specializations are developed in consultation with the student's program of study committee and can focus on a variety of topics related to public administration and public policy. Doctoral students may work with faculty from other departments, if appropriate, to complete their specializations. As an alternative, students may opt for the urbanism concentration.

In addition to the required doctoral core courses, students take a required concentration core course (GCU 516 Principles of Urbanism) and 12 credit hours selected from an approved list of applicable courses related to the four areas below.

- ☐ • built form: includes architecture, urban design, urban morphology, urban planning, and transportation and infrastructure
- ☐ • culture and society: includes historical, cultural and sociological aspects of urbanism
- ☐ • institutions and governance: includes public policy, politics, and other governmental, economic, legal and political institutions
- ☐ • natural environment: includes global, ecological, biological, and other environmental and natural systems and resources

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Public Service and Community Solutions.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a master's degree, in a related field, from a regionally accredited institution.

All applicants are expected to have completed graduate level statistics and research methods classes before admission. Applicants also are expected to have sufficient formal coursework in public administration to pursue doctoral study in the field. Admitted students are required to take PAF 501, PAF 502, PAF 503, PAF 504, PAF 508 (or their equivalents) and statistics prior to beginning the doctoral core courses. Applicants who are not pursuing an MPA should not take these courses until they consult with the doctoral program director.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts of all undergraduate and graduate coursework
- ☐ • completed checklist
- ☐ • written statement
- ☐ • current resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • samples of research reports or papers
- ☐ • scores on the GRE (verbal, quantitative, analytical)
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must submit TOEFL scores to be considered for admission (institution code: 4007). This is true even for those who have a master's degree from a United States university. To be considered for admission to the PhD program in public administration and policy, the applicant's minimum score on a traditional TOEFL test must be 600; the minimum score for a TOEFL iBT must be 100. Applicants with scores below the minimum will not be considered. More on the English proficiency requirement is available at <https://students.asu.edu/graduate/proficiency> (<https://students.asu.edu/graduate/proficiency>).

The written statement of educational and career goals must include a discussion of research interests.

The letters of recommendation should be primarily from faculty members. All letters should address the candidate's capacity to successfully complete the doctoral program. They should assess the student's capacity for critical and analytic thought, their ability to communicate effectively, both orally and in writing, and their commitment to completion of the program.

Only GRE test scores from within the past five years will be accepted, and analytical scores will be considered in admission decisions.

Applicants are admitted for fall only. Admission is competitive; a limited number of well-qualified applicants will be admitted each year. Students should see the program website for application deadlines.

Public Administration and Policy, PHD (PPPUBADPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Public Administration and Policy, PhD

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The PhD in public administration and policy is a theoretically grounded research degree program designed to prepare students for an academic career. The degree is also appropriate for individuals who want to conduct high-level research and policy development in public and nonprofit agencies, foundations and research institutes. It is designed for students who seek full-time study.

This program is designed to develop well-rounded, independent scholars who are grounded in the classic and current literatures of public administration and public policy, are skilled in research methods, and are ready to make a positive and important contribution to the field through teaching and research. As a result, graduates are poised for success as productive and active scholars, researchers and teachers.

Degree Requirements:

90 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

The doctoral program is designed to promote the mastery of the core knowledge of public administration and public policy and to develop more specialized expertise in chosen areas of study and research. Accordingly, in the first year, doctoral students take four core courses as a cohort. These courses focus on the foundations of the field, the philosophy of science, and theories and issues in governance, public policy, systems, organizations and human behavior. In the second year, students hone their quantitative and qualitative research skills, enroll in additional electives, and develop a plan of study for their areas of specialization. In the third year, students take an advanced seminar in research and teaching, complete their work in their selected areas of specialization, and move forward to a proposal for completing their dissertation.

The program consists of a minimum of 60 credit hours of graduate work beyond the master's degree. Of the 60 credit hours, at least 24 must be research and dissertation credit (of which no more than 12 hours may be dissertation credit). A minimum of 30 credit hours of approved coursework, exclusive of dissertation and research, must be taken at ASU after admission to the program. In addition to the core courses above, doctoral students are required to complete coursework in two areas of specialization. Specializations are developed in consultation with the student's plan of study committee and can focus on a variety of topics related to public administration and public policy. Doctoral students may work with faculty from other departments, if appropriate, to complete their specializations. As an alternative, students may opt for the urbanism concentration.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Public Service and Community Solutions.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a master's degree from a regionally accredited institution.

ASU's School of Public Affairs expects doctoral student applicants to have demonstrated competency in the following subject areas at the time of application: organizational theory, public policy analysis, economics and quantitative analysis.

Applicants who have obtained a master's degree accredited by the Network of Schools of Public Policy, Affairs, and Administration in public affairs, public administration or public policy will not be required to complete prerequisites for admission to ASU's School of Public Affairs. In some cases, applicants from allied fields (e.i., political science, economics, sociology, business) will not be required to complete prerequisites, depending upon the extent to which previous training aligns with the competencies described above.

As is the case with all applicants, the doctoral program director or advisors may require or recommend completion of courses when there is a perceived deficit, especially if the deficit relates to graduate-level quantitative analysis and economics (PAF 502 and PAF 504, respectively, or equivalent courses). However, these requirements or recommendations, if any, are not a barrier to admission.

In cases where the doctoral student applicant has graduated from a public affairs, public administration or public policy program from another nation, or from a program not accredited by NASPAA, the applicant may be admitted and required to meet prerequisites after a review by the doctoral committee and doctoral program director.

Students applying with master's degrees from programs not closely related to public affairs (e.g., engineering, modern languages, chemistry) will be required to meet prerequisites equivalent to the courses required for either ASU's Master of Public Administration or Master of Public Policy:

<https://spa.asu.edu/content/graduate-programs> (<https://spa.asu.edu/content/graduate-programs>).

Prior to enrolling in any of the school's core classes, all students are expected to be familiar with the foundational competency readings related to organizational theory, public policy analysis, economics, and quantitative analysis.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program and have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts of all undergraduate and graduate coursework
- ☐ • completed checklist
- ☐ • written statement
- ☐ • current resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • samples of research reports or papers
- ☐ • GRE scores (verbal, quantitative, analytical)
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must submit Test of English as a Foreign Language scores to be considered for admission; institution code: 4007. This is true even for those who have a master's degree from a U.S. university. To be considered for admission to the doctorate in public administration and policy program, the minimum score on a traditional TOEFL test is 600, the minimum score for a TOEFL iBT is 100. Applicants with scores below the minimum will not be considered. More on the English proficiency requirement is available at <https://students.asu.edu/graduate/proficiency> (<https://students.asu.edu/graduate/proficiency>).

The written statement of educational and career goals must include a discussion of research interests.

Public Policy, MPP (PPPUBPMPP)

Online Degree Search Title: Public Policy, MPP

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The MPP program allows students to approach the study of public policy with a focus on public policy in the urban setting. The master's degree program in public policy prepares students for professional careers as policy analysts and leaders in public service involved in the formulation, approval, implementation and evaluation of public policy at all levels of government and in the private and nonprofit sectors. The program can also serve as a platform for preparation for doctoral studies in public policy, public administration, urban studies or other related programs. Students learn analytical techniques and conceptual frameworks for understanding policy issues and identifying potential solutions and about applying these skills to real-world issues --- especially relating to the needs of cities in the region. Students also gain an understanding of policies addressing issues such as poverty, education, the environment and public safety.

The program trains people capable of leading by making positive policy decisions, addressing the difficult questions associated with public policy, and managing the process of policy creation, approval, implementation and evaluation. At the conclusion of the master's degree program, students will be able to identify, analyze and interpret the challenges and dilemmas of public policies, especially those facing urban areas. Students will also be able to approach policy analysis with a variety of quantitative and qualitative methods, and be prepared to develop innovative processes and tools to deal with changing realities of public policy and address issues on a global, regional and local scale.

Social Work, MSW (PPSWDMSW)

Online Degree Search Title: Social Work - Standard Program, MSW

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Tucson, Online

Program Description:

The professional program leading to the MSW degree prepares social workers for advanced professional social work practice. The program is designed to prepare social workers to be capable of responding effectively to the needs of special populations, particularly in the Southwest. The Master of Social Work program is accredited by the Council on Social Work Education.

Concurrent Degrees:

This degree is also offered as concurrent degree with:

- Juris Doctor, JD
- Public Administration (MPA) - Downtown Phoenix

Degree Requirements:

45 credit hours and a portfolio, or 45 credit hours and a thesis, or 45 credit hours and an applied project (SWG 593), or 45 credit hours including the required capstone course (SWG 621), or 60 credit hours and a portfolio (MSW/MPA dual degree), or 60 credit hours and a thesis (MSW/MPA dual degree), or 60 credit hours and an applied project (SWG 593), or 60 credit hours including the required capstone course (SWG 621) (MSW/MPA dual degree).

Students begin the standard Master of Social Work program in the fall and they begin in the fall or spring for the online Master of Social Work program. The program may be completed within four semesters (full time) or six semesters (part time). It is a 45 to 60 credit hour program, including coursework and field instruction. It is divided into a foundation year (30 credit hours of core curriculum) taken by all students and a concentration year (30 credit hours).

The foundation year includes basic courses in direct practice, organizational and community change, social policy, human behavior and research.

In the second year, students pursue a concentration in one of the following:

- ☐ • advanced direct practice
- ☐ • advanced generalist
- ☐ • policy, administration and community practice

Students who pursue the advanced direct practice concentration also select one of the following three specializations: children, youth and families; health, behavioral health; or public child welfare.

Students are required to complete two internships: a foundation field placement (480 hours) and a concentration field placement (480 hours) in a different setting.

Culminating Events: The culminating events available to on-campus students are SWG 599 Thesis, SWG 593 Applied Project, SWG 621 Capstone course and the master's portfolio. The culminating events available to online students are SWG 593 Applied Project, SWG 621 Capstone course and the master's degree portfolio. The academic unit will advise and monitor the online campus students to ensure they choose the appropriate culminating event.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Public Service and Community Solutions.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in a closely related field from a regionally accredited institution. All applicants are required to have completed a course in human biology and a course in statistics before enrolling in the graduate program or before registering for SWG 519.

The School of Social Work requires one of the following:

- ☐ • undergraduate degree with 30 credit hours in liberal arts courses at the undergraduate or graduate level
- ☐ • Bachelor of Social Work from a Council on Social Work Education-accredited school of social work
- ☐ • liberal arts undergraduate degree

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts of all undergraduate and graduate work
- ☐ • three letters of reference
- ☐ • professional resume that includes volunteer and paid work experience
- ☐ • statement of educational and career goals
- ☐ • signed standards of ethical and professional behavior form
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

A combination of academic and professional references is desirable. References from friends, family members or personal therapists are not accepted. At least one of the three required references must be from the applicant's BSW field instructor or, if employed in a social work-related job for two or more years, a recommendation from the applicant's supervisor.

Guidelines for writing the statement of educational and career goals can be found at <https://socialwork.asu.edu/content/msw-application-proceduresmaterials> (<https://socialwork.asu.edu/content/msw-application-proceduresmaterials>).

Test scores from either the GRE or the Miller Analogies Test are required only if the applicant's junior and senior GPA was below a 3.20 (scale is 4.00 = "A").

All applicants must have 240 hours of volunteer or work experience in social services during a six-month period within the past five years.

Students should see the program website for application deadlines. Applicants admitted to the standard Master of Social Work degree program begin classes in the fall, and applicants admitted to the online Master of Social Work degree program begin classes in the fall or the spring.

Part-time Program

Students are admitted each fall to a planned part-time program and for the Master of Social Work online degree program in the fall or spring. Students interested in this option must specifically apply to the part-time program and complete it in accordance with the plan developed to finish the degree in three years.

Transfer Credit

Upon recommendation of the admission committee, the first year of graduate study (up to 30 graduate credit hours) earned at another school of social work that is accredited by the Council on Social Work Education may be transferred and applied toward the Master of Social Work degree program at ASU. Under these circumstances, the student must complete the second full year of graduate study (at least 30 credit hours of graduate work) at ASU. Transfer work must have been completed within three years of the semester and year of admission to the Master of Social Work degree program at ASU with a grade of "B" (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Exemption and Waiver Examinations

The number of hours required to complete the standard Master of Social Work program ranges from 45 to 60 credit hours. In addition to transferring in credit, per the recommendation of the School of Social Work director and the Master of Social Work coordinator, admitted students may meet requirements of up to 15 hours of credit toward the degree by exempting up to 15 hours of foundation coursework without examination or successfully completing examinations in SWG 501, SWG 502 or SWG 519. Students should note that, when applicable, the academic unit will provide a rationale for a student's exemption if the student is not from a Bachelor of Social Work program accredited by the Council on Social Work Education.

Concurrent degrees are currently unavailable for the online Master of Social Work degree program.

Students should contact the School of Social Work at 602-496-0800 with any questions about the application process.

Social Work, PHD (PPSW2PHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Social Work, PhD

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The purpose of the doctoral program in social work is to prepare future social work scholars. While there are many possible definitions of scholarship, the Arizona State University School of Social Work adheres to a broad definition.

A scholar in social work engages in research, teaching and service. The program introduces students to the complex range of roles and responsibilities of faculty and other social work roles of leadership. Critical thinking and creativity in research, teaching and service are at the core of the program.

Given the cultural and economic diversity of the Southwest, the program also strives to elaborate on the human potential embedded in the region's distinct experiences and perspectives. The university offers opportunities for scholarship integrating diverse cultural experiences such as those offered through specialized programs, including American Indian studies and Chicana/o studies, African and African American studies and Asian Pacific American studies. We hope our graduates will play key roles in integrating diversity in their social welfare activities with local, state and regional groups.

The program emphasizes enhancement of scholarship through:

- ☐ • applied social work research in diverse community settings and populations of the Southwest
- ☐ • participation in collegial decision-making
- ☐ • participation in field education and community services
- ☐ • teaching, from syllabus development to classroom teaching across the professional continuum

Students are expected to participate fully in research teaching and field liaison activities during their course of studies.

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Social Work Courses (12 credit hours)

Research Methods and Statistics (12 credit hours)

Directed Electives (9 credit hours)

Theory (3 credit hours)

Research (12 credit hours)

SWG 792 Research (12)

Culminating Experience (12 credit hours)

SWG 799 Dissertation (12)

Additional Curriculum Information

When approved by the student's supervisory committee and the Graduate College, this program allows 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree to be used for this degree. The doctoral program requires students to take a minimum of 36 course credit hours beyond the MSW in addition to the required 24 credit hours of research and dissertation; 84 credit hours are required beyond the bachelor's degree. Students may need to take additional coursework to achieve the competency requirements set by the program or set by their graduate supervisory committees.

Students develop their plan of study in consultation with the graduate supervisory committee. Required social work courses must be 700-level and approved by the doctoral program committee. Students should see the academic unit for approved course lists and other requirements for research methods and statistics courses, electives, and theory coursework.

Once the 36 minimum course credit hours are completed, students are required to register for 12 hours of SWG 792 Research before the defense of the prospectus and 12 hours of SWG 799 Dissertation after the prospectus defense. Students must be registered for at least one credit hour during the semester (including summer) when they do their dissertation proposal defense. At least one of the dissertation hours must be taken in the semester the student expects to defend his or her dissertation.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the College of Public Service and Community Solutions.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree in social work or a closely related field from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts of all undergraduate and graduate work
- ☐ • curriculum vitae or resume
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • three letters of reference
- ☐ • required writing sample: social problem essay
- ☐ • optional writing sample
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Admission to the doctoral program in the School of Social Work is based on the following criteria:

- ☐ • an MSW from an accredited school of social work, preferably with two or more years of post-degree employment in human services
- ☐ • experience in social work teaching or research and other scholarly activities
- ☐ • experience with diverse populations
- ☐ • goodness-of-fit with program goals
- ☐ • good professional standing
- ☐ • undergraduate and graduate GPA
- ☐ • quality and extensiveness of social work experience
- ☐ • research potential and creativity as demonstrated in requested essays and references
- ☐ • scores of the GRE, with emphasis on verbal and analytic scores

Though an MSW is preferred, exceptions may be made for students with a BSW from an accredited school of social work and a master's degree in a related field and for students from countries without accreditation.

Guidelines for writing the statement can be found at <https://socialwork.asu.edu/content/application-and-admission> (https://socialwork.asu.edu/content/application-and-admission) under "PhD Application and Admission Information."

Applicants have the option of submitting a sample of their written work. Examples include a referred journal article, a class paper, and a professional report such as one might write in an agency setting. The writing sample should illustrate the applicant's ability to succeed in the doctoral program. Guidelines for writing the statement can be found at <https://socialwork.asu.edu/content/application-and-admission> (<https://socialwork.asu.edu/content/application-and-admission>).

Program Description:

The MA in sustainability is a research-oriented degree that culminates with research writing (either a thesis or capstone in the form of a publishable scientific paper).

The program focuses on knowledge generation and designing new ways to address sustainability challenges and prepares students for designing and conducting transdisciplinary research. Although the graduate degree programs emphasize the integration of a broad range of expertise in student training, this master's degree program is best suited to students inclined toward social sciences, humanities, planning or related fields and who are interested in a career in research or academia. Students learn how different disciplines view and approach the challenges of sustainability in theory, research and practice, and they develop the academic and technical skills as well as the ethical insights that will help them understand, research and provide solutions to complex sustainability challenges at the local, regional, national and global levels. Students can also apply to participate in the Global Development Research Program, which works in conjunction with this program.

All sustainability graduate students will possess:

- • an understanding of the need for a transdisciplinary approach to solving sustainability challenges
- • the ability to communicate their work to professionals in other disciplines and to policymakers and the general public
- • the breadth of vision to recognize the interconnectedness of social, economic, environmental and technical systems
- • the critical-thinking skills necessary for approaching sustainability challenges from a systems perspective
- • the skills needed to work effectively in interdisciplinary teams
- • the technical skills required to formulate and solve problems at the appropriate scale

Degree Requirements:

37 credit hours and a thesis, or 37 credit hours including a capstone course (SOS 596).

Required Core (16 credit hours)

SOS 510 Perspectives on Sustainability (3)
SOS 520 Research Design and Methods for Sustainability (3)
SOS 525 Social-Ecological-Technical Systems: Domains and Interfaces (3)
SOS 581 Synthesis for Sustainability Research (3)
SOS 589 Community of Graduate Student Scholars (1)

Electives (15 credit hours)

methods (3)
normative dimensions of sustainability (3)
general electives (9)

Culminating Experience (6 credit hours)

SOS 596 Capstone: Scientific Paper (6) or
SOS 599 Thesis (6)

Additional Curriculum Information

The taught-course element of the program will be evaluated through course-specific examinations, research papers or applied projects and will be considered to have been successfully completed if the student obtains a GPA of 3.25 or higher. Graduate College policies and procedures for fulfillment of degree requirements must also be met.

SOS 589 is a one credit course taken over four semesters, for four credit hours total.

Approved general electives prefixes include, but are not limited to, the following:

SOS, ASB, ART, PAF, SGS, POS, SOC, PSB, PGS, PHI, COM, CPP, CRD, ESS, PGV, NTR, MCO, GCU, SCM, HPS, HST, JHR, JMC, JUS, LAW, LES, PUP, SBS, RTM, STS, TDM, URB

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements for both the Graduate College and the School of Sustainability.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.25 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.25 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of intent
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

The statement of intent should not exceed 600 words and should:

- ☐ • Describe how the applicant's background will contribute to success in the program.
- ☐ • Describe how completion of the degree will support long-term career goals.
- ☐ • Elaborate on key research questions the applicant wishes to address or problems to solve as part of the plan of study.
- ☐ • Identify potential faculty advisors.

Letters of recommendation must be from three people who can attest to the applicant's academic and professional achievements. At least one letter should be academic in nature.

Sustainability, PHD (SUSUSTPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Sustainability, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD in sustainability is offered for students who have completed a bachelor's or master's degree program. The doctoral program prepares students to become scientists and leaders in research, and to investigate the urgent sustainability challenges of this century. Graduates will possess an advanced understanding of the dynamics of coupled socioecological systems and be able to lead others in research providing adaptive solutions to specific sustainability challenges. The flexible, transdisciplinary nature of the program allows students to focus on problems of interest to them, drawing upon relevant knowledge from a variety of disciplines. Students can also apply to participate in the Global Development Research Program, which works in conjunction with this program.

All sustainability graduate students will possess:

- ☐ • an understanding of the need for a transdisciplinary approach to solving sustainability challenges
- ☐ • the ability to communicate their work to professionals in other disciplines and to policymakers and the general public
- ☐ • the breadth of vision to recognize the interconnectedness of social, economic, environmental and technical systems
- ☐ • the critical-thinking skills to approach sustainability challenges from a systems perspective
- ☐ • the skills needed to work effectively in transdisciplinary teams
- ☐ • the technical skills to formulate and solve problems at the appropriate scale

In addition to the common learning outcomes, students will be able to:

- ☐ • conduct research on particular sustainability challenges using standard skills, including the capacity to identify problems; formulate and test hypotheses; use statistical, econometric and geographical information-system techniques to construct and analyze datasets; and build and apply models
- ☐ • lead others in the analysis and design of the built environment and institutions' policies, regulations and technologies to support sustainable development
- ☐ • lead others in applying these concepts and methods to the development of sustainable strategies for water, land, air and urban management at the local and global levels
- ☐ • understand the concepts and methods of a number of critical disciplines bearing on the sustainability of systems at different spatial and temporal scales

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Students may be admitted to the program with a bachelor's degree or master's degree from relevant fields. The degree requirement is 84 credit hours of work beyond the level of a bachelor's degree. Up to 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree in a related field can be accepted toward the fulfillment of the doctoral requirements. Each student formulates a plan of study in consultation with his or her supervisory committee. The doctoral program is divided into the following four areas:

- ☐ • core courses
- ☐ • applied workshops
- ☐ • elective courses
- ☐ • required research and dissertation

Each plan of study must include 24 credit hours of a combination of research and dissertation. The taught-course element of the program will be evaluated through course-specific examinations and also research papers or applied projects and will be considered to have been successfully completed if the student obtains a GPA of 3.25 (scale is 4.00 = "A") or higher. Graduate College policies and procedures for fulfillment of degree requirements must also be met.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the School of Sustainability.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution. The school encourages applicants with diverse educational backgrounds and experiences that are relevant to the school's core objectives.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.25 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.25 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of intent
- ☐ • GRE scores
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Sustainability (Complex Adaptive Systems Science), PHD (SUSUSTCPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Sustainability (Complex Adaptive Systems Science), PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Complex adaptive systems science is the study of interactive and dynamic systems that change over time. The complex adaptive systems science concentration under the PhD in sustainability trains the next generation of scientists in advanced concepts and methods needed for approaching diverse phenomena in the social and life sciences. The program is tightly integrated with diverse, ongoing, university-wide research on complex adaptive systems science at Arizona State University and emphasizes the value of a complex adaptive systems science perspective, to give better insight and a more active role in seeking solutions to a broad array of critical issues facing our society today. Students will be fluent in the common language of complexity while also receiving a solid foundation in the domain knowledge of existing academic disciplines.

By broadly embedding an understanding of complex adaptive system-relevant approaches into the practice of normal science, students will gain the ability to transform science. The program promotes the development and testing of more robust theory and sophisticated methods in a wider array of research settings. This is needed to develop a deeper understanding of the nature and dynamics of complex adaptive systems, grounded in concrete examples and applications.

The doctoral program in sustainability with a concentration in complex adaptive systems science is offered for students who have completed a bachelor's or master's degree program. The doctoral program prepares students to become scientists and leaders in research and to investigate the urgent sustainability challenges of this century. Graduates will possess:

- ☐ • an understanding of the need for a transdisciplinary approach to solving sustainability challenges
- ☐ • the ability to communicate their work to professionals in other disciplines, policymakers and the general public
- ☐ • the breadth of vision to recognize the interconnectedness of social, economic, environmental and technical systems
- ☐ • the critical-thinking skills to approach sustainability challenges from a systems perspective
- ☐ • the skills needed to work effectively in interdisciplinary teams

- • the technical skills to formulate and solve problems at the appropriate scale

In addition to the common learning outcomes, students will be able to:

- • conduct research on particular sustainability challenges using standard skills, including the capacity to identify problems; formulate and test hypotheses; use statistical, econometric and geographical-information-system techniques to construct and analyze datasets; and build and apply models
- • lead others in the analysis and design of the built environment and institutions' policies, regulations and technologies to support sustainable development
- • lead others in applying these concepts and methods to the development of sustainable strategies for water, land, air and urban management at the local and global levels
- • understand the concepts and methods of a number of critical disciplines bearing on the sustainability of systems at different spatial and temporal scales

Degree Requirements:

84 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (18 credit hours)

Concentration (12 credit hours)

Research (12 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (12 credit hours)

SOS 799 Dissertation (12)

Additional Curriculum Information

When approved by the student's supervisory committee and the Graduate College, this program allows 30 credit hours from a previously awarded master's degree to be used for this degree. If students do not have a previously awarded master's degree, the 30 hours of coursework will be made up of electives to reach the required 84 credit hours. Students should see the academic unit for additional curricular requirements for students admitted with a bachelor's degree.

For a complete list of approved courses to fulfill the core and concentration requirements, students should see the academic unit. The 12 credit hour research requirement must include three credit hours of research related to complex adaptive systems science.

The student's chair or co-chair must be a complex adaptive systems science faculty member and the dissertation must include complex adaptive systems science approaches.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the School of Sustainability.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution. The school encourages applicants with diverse educational backgrounds and experiences that are relevant to the school's core objectives.

Culminating Experience (3 credit hours)

EMS 515 Capstone I (2)

EMS 516 Capstone II - Sustainability Leadership Workshop II (1)

Additional Curriculum Information

The curriculum for this program is focused around four principal themes: global context, strategy, communications and leadership. Students attend three in-person sessions --- two sessions at the ASU campus and one abroad (EMS 508).

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements for both the Graduate College and the School of Sustainability.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Applicants to the program should be interested in and passionate about advancing sustainability in their organizations, either directly or indirectly. Successful candidates will be expected to draw from and apply solutions to actual professional challenges and opportunities. Applicants should contact the program for more details if they are currently not employed.

Given that this is an executive master's degree for experienced professionals, work and life experience may be taken into account in lieu of deficiencies from past bachelor's degree program experience. Applicants with GPAs below 3.00 may be admitted on a provisional status. Applicants should contact the program for more details if their GPA falls below the 3.00 requirement.

Sustainability Leadership, MSL (SUSUSLMSL)

Online Degree Search Title: Sustainability Leadership, MSL

Campus: Online

Program Description:

The MSL program prepares professionals to advance social and environmental responsibility. The program teaches organizational leadership skills through the lens of sustainability. The Master of Sustainability Leadership program equips graduates to drive high-impact global sustainability results for their companies, organizations and communities.

The curriculum includes four synergistic thematic areas:

- ☐ • communications and change management
- ☐ • global context of sustainability
- ☐ • leadership for sustainability
- ☐ • sustainability and strategy

The program also includes opportunities for students to include electives that are related to their specific area of interest. Elective courses are offered that focus on the military, cities, climate, food systems and other thematic areas. Students may also choose to go on an approved study abroad trip to fulfill elective credits.

A sustainable future requires leaders who are able to integrate sustainability into existing institutions and new enterprises. A particular knowledge base and skill set is required to drive this kind of transformational change. Professionals with tools and skills learned in sustainability leadership, as opposed to other degree programs, are in a prime position to establish sustainability practices in any type of organization. Because sustainability is a relatively new field of study, professionals who are interested in this emerging field have often migrated into sustainability roles without formal training and education in sustainability practice. This program is designed and delivered by people who have worked in and with companies making sustainability transitions, and continue to be on the cutting edge of global sustainability leadership.

Degree Requirements:

35 credit hours including the required Capstone Course Course (EMS 588).

Required Core (27 credit hours)

EMS 502 Global Context I (2)
EMS 503 Strategic Sustainability I (2)
EMS 504 Communications and Sustainability I (2)
EMS 505 Sustainability Leadership I (2)
EMS 506 Global Context II (2)

Focus Area Electives (6 credit hours)

Culminating Experience (2 credit hours)

EMS 588 MSL Capstone (2)

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements for both the Graduate College and the School of Sustainability.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree, in any field, from a regionally accredited institution. They should also have a minimum of three years of professional or organizational experience or the equivalent.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program. Applicants who have a GPA below 3.00 may submit a statement describing contributing circumstances and reference personal experience to be considered for admission.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • statement of intent
- ☐ • resume or curriculum vitae
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English (regardless of current residency) must provide proof of English proficiency.

Because sustainability explores ways to improve human well-being globally without threatening earth's life supporting systems and because this program is designed to prepare decision-makers for the challenges ahead, for the statement of intent, applicants must explain in their own words (in no more than 300 words per question) why sustainability is important to them, and they must describe a time in which they demonstrated leadership to enact positive change. Applicants must explain how they plan to apply the lessons they learn from this degree in the short-term and long-term. And, lastly, applicants must explain how they have prepared to manage and accommodate family, work and life balance while completing this program in two years.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in a fully online format-no face-to-face sessions required. We offer six enrollment sessions throughout the year, and you learn in accelerated, 7.5-week classes. View the program description and request more information here.

Sustainability Solutions, MSUS (SUSUSOMSUS)

Online Degree Search Title: Sustainability Solutions, MSUS

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The MSUS program focuses on the application of established knowledge in sustainability and prepares students to develop solutions, working with stakeholders on sustainability challenges using a sustainability framework. The program is also designed to prepare students to apply sustainability principles and approaches to careers in a variety of fields, addressing complex human and environmental challenges. Students will have a knowledge base and skill set to bring sustainability solutions to corporate, government and NGO sectors. Students begin the program with a foundation in sustainability theory and methods, then are allowed to take electives in an area of interest.

A distinguishing element of the Master of Sustainability Solutions program is its applied approach and emphasis on solutions. This includes a course on managing sustainability projects as well as the capstone experience, in which students do an applied project in lieu of a thesis. Students are encouraged to apply sustainability principles and approaches to their chosen career field. They will be teaming up with a company, a government agency or a nongovernmental organization to develop a real-world sustainability solution. This practical experience will perfectly position graduates for today's competitive, knowledge-intensive job market. Students can also apply to participate in the Global Development Research Program, which works in conjunction with this program (or any graduate program at ASU).

Advanced Analytics in Higher Education, Certificate (TEAAHEGRCT)

Online Degree Search Title: Advanced Analytics in Higher Education (Graduate Certificate)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The graduate certificate program in advanced analytics in higher education prepares professionals to conduct the advanced analytics needed to support data-driven decision-making in all academic and operational areas of higher and postsecondary education.

In this certificate program, the coursework addresses the application of data mining, predictive analytics, sentiment analysis and data visualization techniques to higher education-specific problems with the goal of preparing individuals at all levels to use data in their decision-making processes. Through real-world projects using commonly used tools, students apply the knowledge and skills learned while gaining an understanding of the security and ethical considerations of analytics.

Program Description:

The MEd program in curriculum and instruction, early childhood education concentration, prepares individuals to meet the educational, social and emotional needs of children from birth through age eight.

Through online coursework, applied activities and in-person clinical experiences, the program equips students with specialized skills and advanced knowledge in early childhood pedagogy, community collaboration, technology, administration, policy analysis and advocacy.

The master's degree is appropriate for students interested in learning about early childhood education research and working with infants and children in grades K-3. This track may be of interest to students who already have a teaching certificate and are interested in furthering their knowledge and skills or pursuing doctoral studies in the future.

A second option is the master's degree and Arizona certification in early childhood education track, which provides students with the coursework and practical experiences necessary to become licensed to teach children birth through grade three in the public schools. The track provides participants an institutional recommendation for a state of Arizona early childhood education certification (birth through age eight or through grade three) and the master's degree.

All courses are online, but clinical experiences are completed in person.

Degree Requirements:

Curriculum and Instruction (English as a Second Language), MA (EDES/LMA)

Online Degree Search Title: English as a Second Language, MA

Campus: Online

Program Description:

The MA program in curriculum and instruction, English as a second language concentration, prepares students to teach English language learners in a variety of settings, including U.S. schools. The program caters to professionals with a wide range of roles, including both new and experienced teachers, administrators, policymakers and community workers. Graduate students gain strategies to assist their students in developing ESL skills in reading, writing and listening, and they will learn how to involve community and families as partners.

The program teaches educators specific skills for assessing English learner proficiency and content area knowledge. It also exposes students to various program models and provides a strong foundation for supporting ESL students' language acquisition. Students will leave the program with a historical perspective of English learners in the U.S. and on past and current policy toward ESL. All program faculty have worked with English learner students, have a good mix of elementary- and secondary-level focus and field-tested research strategies, and are advocates for ESL students.

The program provides coursework in English as a second language required for the endorsement from the Arizona Department of Education. While the program is an excellent choice for teachers seeking to improve their preparation to work with English learners and includes coursework supporting the Arizona ESL endorsement for certified teachers, it does not lead to teacher certification. There is no requirement that students entering the program hold a teaching certificate or seek to obtain one.

Note: This degree is not the same as the Master of Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages that is offered through the English department.

Curriculum and Instruction (Literacy Education), MA (EDLANGMA)

Online Degree Search Title: Literacy Education, MA

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The MA in curriculum and instruction with a concentration in literacy education provides students the opportunity to investigate theoretical and pedagogical perspectives in literacy education.

Students will study literacy assessment, essential elements of instruction, content area reading, leadership, children's literature, multiliteracies, literacy research and theoretical foundations. Students will choose from specializations in multiliteracies education or programs that lead to Arizona Department of Education reading endorsements. Embedded within the courses in this program are six strands of inquiry:

Literacy Leadership --- A primary goal of this program is to develop a cadre of literacy leaders to serve the needs of teachers and students in Arizona and beyond.

Theoretical Foundations --- Literacy educators need to understand the relationship between theories and instructional practices in order to develop sound instructional practices and provide effective literacy instruction for all students.

Pedagogical Knowledge and Resources --- This program provides a foundational knowledge base for literacy educators, addressing both pedagogical and content knowledge. Literacy educators need to understand how to use a variety of resources to assess students' literate abilities and use these assessments to construct appropriate instructional strategies.

Technology and Digital Resources --- Teachers and students alike need to be prepared to face the impact and challenges technology brings to today's learning environments. This program will focus on the use of technology in our lives and the classroom to enhance learning experiences for students.

Critical Literacy and Social Justice --- This program is designed to enhance teachers' skills and dispositions for supporting inclusive educational practices, critical-thinking skills and multiliteracies to face the challenges of a diverse and global society.

Reflective Practice --- In this program, teachers will be supported to inquire into their own instructional approaches, analyze the resources available for literacy instruction, and critically examine the environments and learning experiences constructed in their classrooms.

Educational Leadership, MEd (EDSUPVMED)

Online Degree Search Title: Educational Leadership, MEd

Campus: West

Program Description:

This page describes the in-person options for the educational leadership program.

For information on the online concentration in principalship, students should see the master's degree program in educational leadership (principalship) (TEPRINMED).

The MEd program in educational leadership is designed for individuals who believe in the power of education to transform children's lives and who aspire to school leadership positions as administrators or other leadership roles in K-12 settings. This rigorous, standards-based leadership preparation program provides students with the knowledge and expertise to become transformative administrators or teacher leaders with deep and unwavering commitment to providing excellent and equitable educational opportunities for all students.

This program equips students with the skills to facilitate school-level and systemic change; create and sustain a culture of innovation and collaboration; successfully lead curriculum development; interpret and use data to support student success; provide effective feedback, support and evaluation for teachers; build a community network of support for students and schools; and ensure equitable and excellent educational opportunities and support for all students.

The master's degree program in educational leadership is designed to prepare teachers to meet Arizona requirements for principal certification. Students seeking certification in a state other than Arizona should contact their state department of education to determine the principal certification requirements prior to applying.

EDA 634 Instructional Leadership (3)

Other Requirement (6 credit hours)
EDA 684 Internship (6)

Culminating Experience (3 credit hours)
EDA 593 Applied Project (3)

Additional Curriculum Information

The 15-month standards-based leadership development program begins with a three-week summer intensive that immerses the cohort in a simulated school experience during which students engage in required coursework in a hybrid format. Learning continues during the school year with a blend of Web-based and face-to-face courses taken at an ASU campus, including set meetings each semester wherein students visit schools and participate in instructional rounds. All students participate in a two-semester, school-based internship that provides the opportunity to apply new learning and research in a K-12 setting. The program concludes with a two-week summer intensive during which the cohort meets together and engages with coursework in a hybrid format.

Students must be employed in a school-based position or have access to an ASU- and district-approved school placement that will serve as the laboratory of practice for applying the concepts, principles and leadership approaches learned through the coursework.

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College.

Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a bachelor's or master's degree from a regionally accredited institution and have at least two years of pre-K through grade 12 teaching experience as a teacher of record.

Applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in the last 60 hours of a student's first bachelor's degree program, or applicants must have a minimum of a 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in an applicable master's degree program.

All applicants must submit:

- ☐ • graduate admission application and application fee
- ☐ • official transcripts
- ☐ • three letters of recommendation
- ☐ • personal statement
- ☐ • resume
- ☐ • proof of English proficiency

Educational Policy and Evaluation, PHD (EDLDRSHPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Educational Policy and Evaluation, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in educational policy and evaluation prepares scholars who teach and conduct rigorous, high-impact and transdisciplinary research on education policy that advances our collective understanding of preK-20 education.

Doctoral students in the educational policy and evaluation program engage in systematic analyses of education policies in a variety of settings, including schools, universities, research centers, government agencies and nongovernmental organizations.

The program emphasizes intensive training in the theory, methods and practice of education policy research and evaluation and an area of specialization supported by current faculty expertise.

Educational policy and evaluation students work closely with nationally and internationally recognized faculty members on collaborative and independent research projects that result in policy briefs, reports, scholarly articles and engagement in education policy. The program also provides opportunities for internships in applied settings and varied experiences in scholarly publishing.

Students are expected to engage in the doctoral program full time and are supported by Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College with funding renewable for four years with continued progress.

Elementary Education (Teacher Certification), MEd (TEEEACLME)

Online Degree Search Title: Elementary Education (Teacher Certification), MEd

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Tempe, West

Program Description:

This program is for those who already have a bachelor's degree in any field and want to become licensed to teach grades 1-8.

The elementary education program builds strong connections between theory and practice through quality classroom instruction paired with extensive clinical experiences.

Students gain a strong foundation in teaching and content knowledge from experts in the field of education. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty actively engage in the educational research community and embed this vital knowledge throughout the program. This connection further empowers our students to engage in their own research through the applied project coursework.

A series of clinical experiences or field placements are designed to assist our students in developing a thorough understanding of teaching and learning as they apply knowledge from their coursework in varied school settings. Individualized guidance through our clinical framework provides our students with the support they need to become effective educators.

The MEd program in elementary education offers three options for students to earn a master's degree and Arizona teacher certification:

The Masters and Arizona Certification (MAC) program students take classes at an ASU campus two nights a week and are required to do a field experience one day per week for at least two semesters. During the last semester of the MAC program, students complete a full-time student teaching experience.

The Induction, Masters and Arizona Certification (InMAC) program features a partnership with Teach For America, various school districts and charter schools. The InMAC program provides an alternative pathway to teacher certification for full-time teachers on an intern teaching certificate. To qualify, individuals must secure a full-time teaching position. Participants take classes one night per week and must be continuously enrolled in apprentice teaching coursework.

In the iTeachAZ program, students take classes and complete all field work in a partner school district. This is a daytime program in which students take classes two to three days per week and complete three days of field experience. In their next-to-last semester, students complete a full-time student teaching experience.

Higher and Postsecondary Education, MEd (EDPOSTMED)

Online Degree Search Title: Higher and Postsecondary Education, MEd

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Tempe

Program Description:

The MEd program in higher and postsecondary education is designed to facilitate the professional development of those who work in colleges and universities in administrative or support positions.

The higher and postsecondary education program develops leaders who have a strong understanding of the theory and practice of higher education administration, possess the capacity to analyze issues confronting contemporary colleges and universities and apply expertise in designing innovative solutions in administrative decision-making. The goal of this program is to provide graduates with a better understanding of the challenges that face contemporary colleges and universities and to prepare them to succeed in environments that demand innovation, excellence, inclusion and collaboration. Students will have the opportunity to make a local impact to support the success of higher education in the state of Arizona.

Coursework addresses a range of practice-focused topics in the field, including the following: the history of higher education in the United States; organizational characteristics of colleges and universities; important laws and policies pertaining to administrative practice in higher education; how colleges and universities are funded; how to successfully work with the diverse stakeholders in contemporary higher education; and how to collect and use data to improve decision-making.

This 30-credit hour, 10-course program is offered on a 7.5-week calendar in fall and spring semesters (six weeks in summer). Students may enroll part time or full time.

Most courses are offered in a hybrid format with 50 percent of the content delivered face-to-face (weekday evenings) and 50 percent delivered through independent or technology-supported learning experiences and fieldwork.

This program culminates with the creation and presentation of an applied project that demonstrates a student's learning and development and is designed to promote this student's career advancement in higher education.

Degree Requirements:

Leadership and Innovation, EdD (TELINEDD)

Online Degree Search Title: Leadership and Innovation, EdD

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Online

Program Description:

The EdD in leadership and innovation prepares scholarly practitioners and is designed for practicing educator-leaders who work in a range of settings who want to transform their practice and create better learning opportunities for students of all ages.

Students in the program begin as accomplished teachers, teacher leaders, principals, superintendents, higher education professionals or leaders in other educational contexts. Through coursework, students deepen their abilities to lead change and implement innovation in their local educational organizations. The program is not designed to prepare students for academic research-oriented tenure-track positions.

The cohort-based program focuses on research in action and includes required coursework and several options for advanced professional studies with a research core that deepens students' abilities to reflectively and critically think about problems of practice in one of the following contexts: prekindergarten-Grade 12 change leadership; higher education change leadership; or systems, professional and reimagined change leadership.

Differentiation among these contexts and students' interests occurs within the required coursework.

Students conduct multiple cycles of inquiry throughout the program and learn research within their own workplace and share their research at the end of each academic-year semester through roundtables, posters and symposia in a public doctoral research forum.

Leader-scholar communities, formed at the end of the first year and consisting of five to seven students and one faculty member, meet regularly for the second and third years of the program to supply academic and personal support. Through LSCs, students support each other, under faculty guidance, in the conceptualization, implementation and study of change initiatives. Each student's LSC leader serves as the dissertation chair, along with two additional committee members who ultimately make up the faculty committee.

Successful graduates make a commitment to continuing systematic study of their professional practice and sustaining innovation and leadership by making a positive difference in their local settings. The program aims to enable more thoughtful, intentional and informed leaders who are willing and able to implement and study continuous improvement.

The program will make a difference in the way a student thinks and works as a leader in education, for the immediate and local benefit of school children, adult learners, schools or organizations and local communities.

Degree Requirements:

90 credit hours, a written comprehensive exam, an oral comprehensive exam, a prospectus and a dissertation.

Required Core (24 credit hours)

Research (9 credit hours)

Advanced Professional Studies (6 credit hours)

Directed Field-based Study (3 credit hours)

Learning, Literacies and Technologies, PHD (EDCIPHD)

Online Degree Search Title: Learning, Literacies and Technologies, PhD

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The PhD program in learning, literacies and technologies is designed to prepare scholars who will address socially significant educational programs and transform preK-20 educational programs through rigorous research and educational interventions. Graduates rely on transdisciplinary theoretical and methodological perspectives to engage, influence and transform educational institutions and their practices.

The program graduates educational researchers who serve as scholars, leaders and teacher educators engaged in the design, development and use of literacies and technologies that promote learning. Graduates are stewards of their educational field, working across disciplinary boundaries to address the learning challenges of the new millennium.

Students will begin researching during their first semester and continue throughout the four-year program. A transdisciplinary team of scholars led by distinguished faculty will collaborate with doctoral students, individually and in teams, to design powerful studies, implement them in authentic settings, collect and analyze data, write research reports, and present and publish the results.

Academic study and research in the learning, literacies and technologies program focuses on the nature of human learning and literacies across diverse learners and contexts, the use of technologies to support learning, the design of learning environments, and the conditions under which learning occurs.

As a future scholar, teacher educator or researcher, the student will develop areas of emphasis with their faculty advisor and doctoral committee members to work at the cutting edges of educational science, leading the way to innovation and exploration of new technologies and literacies for learning.

Students are expected to engage in the doctoral program full time and are supported by Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College with funding renewable for four years with continued progress.

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The MPE program offers three options for students interested in gaining knowledge of current curriculum and instructional and administrative practices and procedures in physical education. Emphasis is placed on improving instructional effectiveness and developing quality physical education programs in school settings as well as expanded physical activity programming beyond the physical education lessons within school environments. Students will learn about designing, implementing and assessing Comprehensive School Physical Activity Programs. This type of programming reflects current global trends in promoting physical activity for children, youth, school staff and families in communities surrounding school campuses. The Master of Physical Education degree program gives candidates the flexibility to design a plan of study that enhances their interests and professional specialization.

The Master of Physical Education pedagogy research track is appropriate for students interested in learning more about research on teaching in physical education settings. This track may be of interest to students who already have a teacher certificate in physical education and are interested in pursuing doctoral studies in the future.

The Master of Physical Education with a physical education endorsement (grades K-12) familiarizes students with the most current trends and issues in school physical education. Students can focus on numerous topics within elementary physical education, secondary physical education and adapted physical education. This track may be of interest to students with a teaching certificate in a different subject matter who are interested in a K-12 physical education endorsement.

The master's degree and Arizona certification in physical education program provides students with the coursework and practical experiences necessary to become certified to teach physical education in the public schools. The program provides participants an institutional recommendation for an Arizona secondary education (grades 6-12) certification with a physical education endorsement (grades K-12) and the Master of Physical Education degree.

Degree Requirements:

33 credit hours including the required applied project course (PPE 593) and a written comprehensive exam.

The Master of Physical Education degree program has three tracks.

Secondary Education (Teacher Certification), MEd (TESCERTMED)

Online Degree Search Title: Secondary Education (Teacher Certification), MEd

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

This program is for those who want to become certified to teach grades 6-12 in the public schools and already have a bachelor's degree in any field and at least 24 college credits in math, science, English, history, political science, fine arts or a foreign language.

ASU's secondary education program builds strong connections between theory and practice through quality classroom instruction paired with extensive clinical experiences.

Students gain a strong foundation in teaching and content knowledge from experts in the field of education. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty actively engage in the educational research community and embed this vital knowledge throughout the program. This connection further empowers our students to engage in their own research through the culminating action research applied project.

A series of clinical experiences or field placements are designed to assist our students in developing a thorough understanding of teaching and learning as they apply knowledge from their coursework in varied school settings. Individualized guidance through our clinical framework provides our students with the support they need to be successful in today's rapidly evolving educational environment.

The MEd program in secondary education with teacher certification offers three options for students to earn a master's degree and Arizona teacher certification.

In the Masters and Arizona Certification (MAC) program, students take classes at an ASU campus two nights a week and are required to do a field experience one day per week for at least two semesters. During the last semester of the program, students complete a full-time student teaching experience in their content area.

The Induction, Master of Education and Arizona Certification (InMAC) program provides an alternative pathway to teacher certification for full-time teachers on a Teaching Intern certificate. To qualify, individuals must secure a full-time teaching position. The InMAC program also features a partnership with Teach For America. Participants take classes one night per week.

The iTeachAZ Teacher Education for Arizona Math and Science program seeks to promote STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) learning within secondary schools. To apply, students must have at least 24 college credits in math, biology, chemistry, physics, or earth and space science. TEAMS students complete a year-long student teaching experience during the day and take coursework both at the ASU Polytechnic campus and the Mesa Unified School District in the afternoon and evening hours.

Accelerated Degrees:

This degree is also offered as an accelerated degree with:

- Engineering (Automotive Systems), BSE
- Engineering (Electrical Systems), BSE
- Engineering (Humanitarian Engineering), BSE
- Engineering (Mechanical Engineering Systems), BSE
- Engineering (Robotics), BSE

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior and senior years, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Degree Requirements:

33 credit hours including the required applied project course (SED 593).

Required Core (18 credit hours)

RDG 507 Content Area Literacy (3)

SED 501 Introduction to Effective Instruction (3)

SED 522 Secondary School Curriculum Development (3)

Special Education (Teacher Certification), MEd (TESECRTMED)

Online Degree Search Title: Special Education (Teacher Certification), MEd

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

This program is for those seeking Arizona teacher certification in special education. The special education program builds strong connections between theory and practice through quality classroom instruction paired with extensive clinical experiences.

Students gain a strong foundation in teaching and content knowledge from experts in the field of education. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty actively engage in the educational research community and embed this vital knowledge throughout the program. This connection further empowers our students to engage in their own research through the culminating action research applied project.

Individualized guidance through our clinical framework provides our students with the support they need to be successful in today's rapidly evolving educational environment.

The MEd program in special education with Arizona teacher certification offers two options for students to earn a master's degree and Arizona teacher certification: a mild-moderate track and a severe-profound track.

In the Master of Education and Arizona Certification (MAC) program, students take classes at an ASU campus two nights a week and are required to complete daytime field experiences for at least two semesters. During the last semester of the program, students complete a full-time split student teaching experience: half the semester in a special education classroom and the other half in an elementary classroom. Students in the MAC program receive dual Arizona teacher certification in the following teaching certificates: Mild-Moderate Disabilities Special Education, K-12 and Elementary Education, grades 1-8. The mild to moderate areas include forms of emotional, behavioral, learning, and orthopedic disabilities as well as intellectual disabilities and other health impairments.

The Induction, Master of Education and Arizona Certification (InMAC) program provides an alternative pathway to the Arizona teacher certification Mild-Moderate Disabilities Special Education, K-12, for full-time teachers on the teaching intern certificate. To qualify, individuals must secure a full-time teaching position. The InMAC program also features a partnership with Teach For America. Participants take classes one night per week.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Please contact the department for more information.

Anthropology Minor (LAASBMIN)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Description:

The minor program in anthropology provides students with a great deal of flexibility in selecting courses. The program has been designed to allow students to focus on areas within the discipline that articulate well with their major. All students interested in the anthropology minor are encouraged to discuss the options available with a School of Human Evolution and Social Change undergraduate advisor.

Program Requirements:

The anthropology minor requires a minimum of 18 credit hours, at least 12 of which must be upper division. Only courses completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) can be used to fulfill minor requirements.

Required Introductory Courses (choose two):

ASB 102: Culture in a Globalizing World (SB & G) (3)

ASB 222: Buried Cities and Lost Tribes ((HU or SB) & H) or ASB 223: Aztecs, Incas and Mayas ((HU or SB) & G & H) (3)

ASM 104: Bones, Stones, and Human Evolution (SB or SG) (4)

Upper Division Subfield Courses (12 hours)

Students choose 12 upper division credit hours from the subfields of archaeology, evolutionary anthropology and sociocultural anthropology (including linguistics). The particular required introductory courses selected may limit the courses available for use as subfield courses. At least two of the three subfields must be represented.

Archaeology Subfield

ASB 301: Global History of Health (SB & G & H) (3)

ASB 335: Ancient Ruins of the Southwest (SB & H & C) (3)

ASB 337: Pyramids and Hieroglyphs: Life in Ancient Mesoamerica ((HU or SB) & G & H) (3)

Applied Biological Sciences Minor (TSABSMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

Applied biological sciences offers rigorous and practical programs in applications of the biological sciences. Consistent with a polytechnic vision, this minor involves extensive student interaction with faculty through experience-based learning activities, including:

- ☐ • faculty-guided research and service-learning projects
- ☐ • field trips
- ☐ • internships
- ☐ • laboratories

Mastery of fundamental biological principles is emphasized through quality learning in the classroom and hands-on activities in laboratories and in outdoor settings that include the Sonoran Desert, surrounding ecosystems and the landscape of the greater Phoenix area.

Program Requirements:

The applied biological sciences minor consists of 23 credit hours.

Required Courses

BIO 181: General Biology I (SQ) (4)

BIO 182: General Biology II (SG) (4)

Electives (15 credit hours; minimum nine upper-division)

Applied Mathematics Minor (LSAPMMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The minor in applied mathematics in the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts at the Polytechnic campus is designed to enable students to understand and apply mathematics most commonly used in the fields of business, economics, engineering, physics, computer sciences, life sciences, social sciences and sustainability. The minor is recommended for students who plan to major in these diverse fields or for those who are preparing for further graduate study or who wish for increased employment options. The coursework explores the study of advanced applied mathematical topics with an emphasis on applied sciences. Students with a minor in applied mathematics will learn to use theories and techniques, such as mathematical modeling, computational methods, and statistics, to resolve practical real-world problems.

Program Requirements:

The applied mathematics minor consists of 21 credit hours, including:

Required Courses (9 credit hours)

MAT 265: Calculus for Engineers I (MA) or MAT 270: Calculus with Analytic Geometry I (MA) (3-4)

MAT 266: Calculus for Engineers II (MA) or MAT 271: Calculus with Analytic Geometry II (MA) (3-4)

MAT 275: Modern Differential Equations (MA) (3)

Electives (12 credit hours; choose four courses from the list below)

MAT 267: Calculus for Engineers III (MA) or MAT 272: Calculus with Analytic Geometry III (MA) (3-4)

MAT 300: Mathematical Structures (L) (3)

MAT 310: Introduction to Geometry (3)

MAT 343: Applied Linear Algebra (3)

MAT 499: Individualized Instruction (3)

STP 420: Introductory Applied Statistics (CS) (3)

At least six upper-division credit hours in elective courses must be taken in residence at the Polytechnic campus.

A minimum of 12 credit hours of the minor must be ASU credit.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add this Minor: None

Other Enrollment Requirements: MAT 170 or 171 with a "C" or better, OR Mathematics Placement Test with a score of 60% or higher and the Advanced Math Placement Test with a score of 38 or higher, OR ALEKS score of 76 or higher

The minor in applied mathematics is open to all ASU undergraduate majors. Students should consult an advisor in the department of their major to determine if the minor is consistent with their educational goals and to be recognized in their particular major. A student wishing to pursue this minor at the Polytechnic campus should also consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure enrollment in an appropriate set of courses.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Applied Psychology Minor (ECPSYMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

Americans spend more than 54 percent of their waking hours at work. As a result, students who want to make a real impact on peoples' lives are beginning to use industrial and organizational psychology to focus on the psychology of work. Industrial and organizational psychology helps employers identify the right job candidates to hire, determine the best job fit for each worker, and design enjoyable and effective workplaces, taking into account work-life balance. Finally, one specialty, human factors, focuses on designing tools and products that are easy to use and that reduce human error.

In addition to a strong educational foundation in human learning, memory, emotion, judgment and social psychology that prepares students for employment or graduate school, students can choose to focus in two of the following five focus areas:

- ☐ • consumer psychology
- ☐ • human resources and organizational behavior
- ☐ • human systems engineering
- ☐ • learning technology
- ☐ • user experience

Program Requirements:

This minor in applied psychology consists of 22 credit hours, including at least 12 upper-division courses. The following are required courses that must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00) or higher:

Required Courses:

PSY 101: Introduction to Psychology (SB) (3)

PSY 437: Human Factors (L) or HSE 325: Human-Computer Interaction or PSY 440: Industrial/Organizational Psychology (3)

PSY 230: Introduction to Statistics (CS) (3)

PSY 290: Research Methods (L or SG) (4)

General Electives:

PSY Upper Division Elective (9)

A maximum of three credit hours from PSY 399, PSY 499 or PSY 492 may be used toward the minor requirements.

A minimum of three classes, including two at the upper-division level, must be taken in residence at ASU.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: Students will need to have a minimum GPA of 2.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") and have at least junior status.

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Students currently enrolled in the human systems engineering BS degree program are not eligible to pursue the applied psychology minor.

Other Enrollment Requirements: Interested students should consult with a Polytechnic School advisor to verify eligibility and to review all courses required for the minor. To schedule an advising appointment, go to <https://fultonapps.asu.edu/advising> (<https://fultonapps.asu.edu/advising>).

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Please contact the department for more information.

Arabic Studies Minor (LAARBMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor in Arabic studies provides students with instruction in Modern Standard Arabic as well as Arabic culture and literature. Students who successfully complete the prescribed coursework of the Arabic minor are expected to be able to communicate effectively in Arabic and interact with native speakers of Arabic.

Students will be able to communicate in Arabic in the other two areas of language acquisition as well: reading and writing through reading authentic material in Arabic and writing paragraphs in Modern Standard Arabic.

Literature courses expand students' knowledge in Arabic, Middle East, and Islamic culture and civilization. Students of all academic disciplines doing research or seeking employment in areas related to the Middle East or parts of the Arab world will find the minor in Arabic highly beneficial.

Students are encouraged to participate in a study abroad program to enhance their education and overall minor experience. Go to <https://mystudyabroad.asu.edu/> (<https://mystudyabroad.asu.edu/>) for more information.

Program Requirements:

The minor in Arabic studies requires 26 credit hours of courses detailed below. A minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in each course. Course substitutions are allowed for heritage and advanced speakers of the language.

Required Courses

Art History Minor (FAARTHMIN)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Description:

The art history minor is designed for students who are interested in a broad introduction to the study of the history of art. In giving a broad chronological exposure to the history of art from diverse cultures, the minor strengthens academic preparation and provides students with many options to select courses based on their individual interests.

Program Requirements:

The School of Art offers a minor in art history consisting of 18 credit hours of course work, including 12 upper-division electives. A minimum grade of "C" (2.00) is required in all classes for the minor. For those pursuing a minor, a minimum overall GPA of "C" (2.00) is required. Courses may not be double counted in a major and the minor, and a minimum of 12 credit hours of resident credit at ASU are required.

ARS 100 and ARS 300 may not be used toward an art history minor if the student has credit in ARS 101 and ARS 102. If a student has completed ARS 100 or ARS 300, then they must complete ARS 201 and ARS 202 instead of ARS 101 and 102.

Lower Division Courses:

ARS 101: Art from Prehistory Through Middle Ages (HU & H) (3)

ARS 102: Art from Renaissance to Present (HU & H) (3)

Upper Division Courses

ARS Upper Division Elective (12)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: BA in art (art history)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Astrophysics Minor (LAASTPHMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The astrophysics minor is designed for students interested in developing a background in the theoretical modeling and observational techniques of galactic and stellar astronomy, extragalactic astronomy, and cosmology. Students completing the minor will be able to think critically about scientific problems, reducing complex problems to their most important attributes, and to design experiments, observations and theoretical models that address those attributes. Students pursuing an astrophysics minor are expected to have a strong background in physics and mathematics.

Program Requirements:

The minor in astrophysics consists of a minimum of 20 credit hours. At least 12 credit hours must be upper division. All courses must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Required Courses

AST 321: Introduction to Planetary and Stellar Astrophysics (SQ) (3)

AST 322: Introduction to Galactic and Extragalactic Astrophysics (SQ) (3)

Biochemistry Minor (LABCHMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The biochemistry minor is designed to give students majoring in other disciplines a solid grounding in the basics of biochemistry to complement their major degree program. It is especially appropriate for students whose majors are in the various disciplines of life sciences, physics, engineering and geology and for students planning careers in the fields of medicine and health.

Program Requirements:

The minor in biochemistry comprises 28 credit hours of required courses including 12 at the upper-division level. All courses must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Required Courses

BCH 341: Physical Chemistry with a Biological Focus (3)

Notes: Prerequisites for BCH 341 include CHM 114, 116 or 118 with "C" or better; CHM 231, 233 or 333 with "C" or better; MAT 251, 265 or 270 with "C" or better; and PHY 101, 112 or 131 with "C" or better.

BCH 461: General Biochemistry (3)

BCH 462: General Biochemistry (3)

BCH 467: Analytical Biochemistry Laboratory (L) (3)

CHM 113: General Chemistry I (SQ) OR CHM 117: General Chemistry for Majors I (SQ) AND CHM 111: General Chemistry Laboratory for Majors I (SQ) (4)

CHM 116: General Chemistry II (SQ) OR CHM 118: General Chemistry for Majors II (SQ) AND CHM 112: General Chemistry Laboratory for Majors II (SQ) (4)

CHM 233: General Organic Chemistry I (3)

CHM 234: General Organic Chemistry II (3)

CHM 237: General Organic Chemistry Laboratory I (1)

CHM 238: General Organic Chemistry Laboratory II (1)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Biochemistry (Medicinal Chemistry) BS; Biochemistry BA; Biochemistry BS; Chemistry (Environmental Chemistry) BS; Chemistry BA; Chemistry BS; Applied Biological Sciences BS degrees (all concentrations)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult with an academic advisor in the college or department of his or her major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Biological Sciences Minor (LABIOMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Biological science encompasses the study of all living things and includes the study of basic organization and function, how organisms evolve, their roles in the natural environment, how hereditary information is transferred and the development of biotechnology. The biological sciences minor is designed to provide students interested in the field with a flexible curriculum that can be tailored to their interests.

Program Requirements:

The minor in biological sciences requires a minimum of 24 credit hours, of which at least 12 credit hours must be upper-division. At least 6 of the upper-division credit hours must be from courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Students choose one of two options. The remaining elective credit hours may be chosen from those courses in the life sciences that can be used toward the majors offered by the school. Internship courses cannot be used.

Option 1

BIO 281: Conceptual Approaches to Biology for Majors I (SQ) (4)
BIO 282: Conceptual Approaches to Biology for Majors II (4)
BIO 340: General Genetics (4)
BIO 345: Evolution (3)

Option 2

BIO 282: Conceptual Approaches to Biology for Majors II (4)
MIC 220: Biology of Microorganisms AND MIC 206: Microbiology Laboratory (SG) (4)
BIO 281: Conceptual Approaches to Biology for Majors I (SQ) (4)
BIO 340: General Genetics (4)

The remaining hours are met by BIO OR MIC electives:

BIO OR MIC Elective (3-4)
BIO OR MIC Upper Division Elective (5-6)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Biology Minor (ASLSCMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

A minor in biology, offered by the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences, can be a valuable asset particularly when paired with an appropriate major. For instance, a minor in biology paired with a major in political science would provide a good background for someone who wanted to practice environmental law.

Program Requirements:

The minor in biology consists of 28 credit hours. A minimum of six upper division credit hours must be completed through courses offered by the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Required Courses

BIO 181: General Biology I (SQ) (4)
BIO 182: General Biology II (SG) (4)
BIO 320: Fundamentals of Ecology AND LSC 322: Fundamentals of Ecology Laboratory (4)
BIO 353: Cell Biology AND BIO 354: Cell Biology Laboratory (4)
CHM 113: General Chemistry I (SQ) (4)
CHM 116: General Chemistry II (SQ) (4)
LSC 347: Fundamentals of Genetics AND LSC 348: Fundamentals of Genetics Laboratory (4)

Business Minor (BABUSMIN)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Description:

A minor in business is available to students throughout the university who are interested in business courses but wish to pursue majors in other colleges. The courses available for the minor are designed to appeal to and inform the nonbusiness student while covering a broad range of topics that are important to managers, such as:

- ☐ • accounting
- ☐ • computer information systems
- ☐ • economics
- ☐ • finance
- ☐ • management
- ☐ • marketing
- ☐ • supply chain management

Program Requirements:

Students must complete 18 credit hours (12 of which must be upper division) of the specified business courses with a grade of "C" (2.00) or higher in each course. At least 12 credit hours must be taken at ASU.

No more than 6 credit hours can share between the minor and other business certificates and minors.

The upper-division courses specified for the minor will be restricted to students with 56 earned credit hours and a minimum 2.00 ASU cumulative GPA.

Business students are not eligible to apply for the minor. Economics majors must use ECN 212 in their degree and will take an additional elective to replace ECN 212 in the minor.

Required Courses:

ACC 382: Accounting and Financial Analysis (3)

ECN 211: Macroeconomic Principles (SB) or ECN 212: Microeconomic Principles (SB) (3)

FIN 380: Personal Financial Management (3)

MGT 380: Management and Strategy for Nonmajors (3)

MKT 390: Essentials of Marketing (3)

*ACC 231 will substitute for ACC 382.

Electives: (select one)

CIS 300: Web Design and Development (3)

ECN 211: Macroeconomic Principles (SB) or ECN 212: Microeconomic Principles (SB) (3)

CIS 308: Advanced Excel in Business (3)

FIN 331: Financial Markets and Institutions (3)

LES 380: Consumer Perspective of Business Law (3)

MKT 391: Essentials of Selling (3)

MKT 395: Essentials of Advertising and Marketing Communication (3)

REA 380: Real Estate Fundamentals (3)

Note: If a student has taken one of the approved courses above and it is not showing in the DARS audit, please email wpcareyug@asu.edu for assistance.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Business, BA

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

This minor is open to non-W. P. Carey majors. Students wishing to pursue the business minor should consult an advisor in their major to request to have the minor added to the student's degree plan.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Chemistry Minor (ASCHMMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor in chemistry, offered by the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences, gives students expanded proficiency in the area of chemistry. Many of the growing career fields, such as forensics, medicine and environmental quality, require a greater degree of chemistry than in the past. Therefore, students with a greater chemistry background will have a competitive advantage in these fields. The chemistry minor gives students more experience in the advanced and integrative fields of chemistry through additional biochemistry and analytical chemistry courses. The awarding of the chemistry minor highlights the students' expanded chemistry knowledge to future schools and employers.

Program Requirements:

The minor in chemistry consists of 25 credit hours. A minimum of nine credit hours must be taken through the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00).

Required Courses

BCH 371: Modern Concepts in Biochemistry AND BCH 372: Modern Concepts in Biochemistry Laboratory (4)
CHM 113: General Chemistry I (SQ) (4)
CHM 116: General Chemistry II (SQ) (4)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Students wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. Students should also consult with an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information and see <https://math.asu.edu/degrees/undergrad> (<https://math.asu.edu/degrees/undergrad>).

Criminology and Criminal Justice Minor (PPCRJMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Online

Description:

The minor in criminology and criminal justice allows students in other undergraduate programs at ASU to explore issues of crime, law and the criminal justice system. The minor provides students with the tools to analyze complex issues and policies within the criminal justice system, enhancing students' ability to understand the nature of crime and the system response to law breaking. In addition to the three required courses which provide a solid understanding of the field, each student will be able to select electives to meet his or her specific interests. Criminal justice majors cannot earn a minor in criminal justice.

Program Requirements:

Program Requirements

1. at minimum, be in junior standing to take upper-division courses.
2. complete CRJ 100 as the prerequisite for all upper-division CRJ courses.
3. complete a minimum of 18 credit hours of graded classroom and online course work (internship or independent study not applicable).
4. complete a minimum of 12 credit hours of CRJ resident credit at ASU.
5. earn a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher for all classes in the minor.
6. meet with a criminal justice advisor prior to registration.

Required core courses: (6 credit hours)
CRJ 100: Introduction to Criminal Justice (SB) (3)
CRJ 225: Introduction to Criminology (SB) (3)

Choose one of the following: (3 credit hours)
CRJ 203: Courts and Sentencing (3)
CRJ 230: Introduction to Policing (3)
CRJ 240: Introduction to Corrections (3)

Choose one of the following: (3 credit hours)
CRJ 305: Gender, Crime, and Criminal Justice (C) (3)
CRJ 306: Race, Ethnicity, Crime, and Criminal Justice (C) (3)

Electives: (6 credit hours)
CRJ Upper Division Elective (6)
Notes: Choose any two CRJ courses at the 300- or higher level.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: minimum 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: BS in criminology and criminal justice majors and BS in public service and public policy majors with the following concentrations: criminology, law and policy, or emergency management and homeland security

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Applicants are asked to please meet with a criminal justice advisor prior to registration.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Design Studies Minor (ARDSNMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Students interested in design can earn a minor in design studies. This minor is a nonstudio-based program of study in design that focuses on the design disciplines offered in the ASU Herberger Institute:

- ☐ • architectural studies
- ☐ • graphic design
- ☐ • industrial design
- ☐ • interior design
- ☐ • landscape architecture

The courses may also appeal to students who wish to pursue the study of design within the BA in interdisciplinary studies.

Program Requirements:

Courses selected must satisfy the minimum requirement of 18 credit hours for the minor. Twelve of the credit hours must be in 300-level or 400-level course work; the 18 credits may be chosen from any of the categories. To enhance understanding of the subject matter, some of the designated courses are sequential in nature and require certain prerequisites. Consequently, students should carefully note the semester in which these particular courses are offered. All designated courses for the minor in design studies are lecture courses. To pursue the minor in design studies, students must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50.

Digital Culture Minor (HIDGCMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The digital culture minor in the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts focuses on the creative exploration of how new media is influencing our culture, or rather the way we live, learn, create and communicate. The digital culture minor allows students to enhance their program of study with integrated, transdisciplinary training in creative processes and technical skills in new media with cultural applications.

The curriculum is outcomes-based rather than course sequence-based. The curriculum uses an innovative proficiency-based network to connect courses across academic disciplines, instead of traditional methods such as course prerequisites. Proficiencies in the curriculum identify common generalized learning outcomes across disciplines participating in the initiative.

Digital Culture alumni have received job opportunities in the following fields:

- ☐ • audio and video
- ☐ • engineering
- ☐ • graphic design
- ☐ • illustration
- ☐ • iOS development
- ☐ • journalism
- ☐ • programming
- ☐ • software engineering
- ☐ • special effects
- ☐ • 3D modeling and fabrication
- ☐ • visual media

Program Requirements:

The digital culture minor requires 21 credit hours (12 upper-division) in four areas.

There is no special application process for the digital culture minor.

Students add the minor by meeting with the academic advisor for their major. Students are also required to meet with the digital culture academic success coordinator to develop the digital culture pathway that best meets the proficiencies for the work they are interested in pursuing.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Early Childhood Education Minor (TEECEDMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Description:

A minor in early childhood education will allow students to combine their knowledge of their major discipline with an understanding of educational practices and issues. The ultimate goal of this minor is to produce graduates who are educated in their major field of study and who understand and appreciate education that positively impacts the community. The service learning experience embedded in this minor will enable students to apply their knowledge and skills to meaningful service experiences in the community.

Program Requirements:

The minor in early childhood education requires the following courses, for 18 credit hours:

ECD 211: The Developing Child: Theory into Practice, Prenatal-Grade 3 (SB) (3)

ECD 220: Introduction to Nutrition, Health and Safety (2)

ECS 312: Social and Emotional Development of the Young Child (SB) (3)

ECS 431: Family, Community and Professional Support Systems (3)

EDP 310: Educational Psychology for Non-Teachers (SB) (4)

Notes: four one-hour electives in Educational Psychology for Non-Teachers, SB (4)

USL 210: Service Learning: Intro to Diverse Community Issues (L & C) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: All education majors

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Engineering Management Minor (ESENMMIN)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Description:

The minor program in engineering management is designed to provide the student with the skills for effective management and leadership of engineering-driven enterprises. The minor curriculum supplements the student's major by adding to the breadth of engineering science and design, and it equips the student with additional management and design skills. This knowledge is augmented with an understanding of business practices, organizational behavior, and management skills to enable the graduate to succeed in the management of a scientific or engineering enterprise. Topics such as project and resource management, financial engineering, risk management, configuration management, service plans, product liability, entrepreneurship and operations management are covered, in addition to product design and process development.

Program Requirements:

Prior to enrolling in the minor, students must have completed MAT 265 and MAT 266 (or an equivalent calculus sequence) with a grade of C or better in each.

The program of study for a minor in engineering management requires a minimum of 18 credit hours. Note that industrial engineering or engineering management majors will NOT be eligible for the minor.

The minor requires completion of four core courses (12 credit hours) and two elective courses (six credit hours) for a total of 18 credit hours. All courses must be passed with a "C" or better. At least 12 credit hours must be completed in residency at ASU or through ASU Online. The required core courses include:

Core Courses (12 Credit Hours):

IEE 300: Economic Analysis for Engineers (3)
IEE 431: Engineering Administration (L) (3)

IEE 220: Business and Industrial Engineering or IEE 380: Probability and Statistics for Engineering Problem Solving (CS) (3)

Notes: Students whose major requires IEE 380 Probability and Statistics for Engineering Problem Solving (3) will need to take IEE 220 Business and Industrial Engineering (3) for the engineering management minor.

IEE 458: Project Management or CEE 481: Civil Engineering Project Management (3)

Notes: CEE 481 may not be used for both the civil engineering degree (major) and the engineering management minor.

Elective Courses (6 Credit Hours):

IEE 369: Work Analysis and Design (L) (3)

IEE 376: Operations Research Deterministic Techniques/Applications (3)

IEE 381: Lean Six Sigma Methodology (3)

IEE 412: Introduction to Financial Engineering (3)

IEE 454: Risk Management (3)

IEE 456: Introduction to Systems Engineering (3)

IEE 474: Quality Control (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: Prior to enrolling in the minor, students must have completed MAT 265 and MAT 266 (or an equivalent calculus sequence) with a grade of "C" or better in each.

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: engineering management and industrial engineering

Interested students should consult with a School of Computing, Informatics and Decision Systems Engineering advisor to verify eligibility and to review all courses required for the minor. To schedule a CIDSE advising appointment, go to <https://fultonapps.asu.edu/advising> (<https://fultonapps.asu.edu/advising>). Students interested in the engineering management minor should also consult with the advisor of the major to ensure recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in a fully online format-no face-to-face sessions required. The minor in English is open to all ASU undergraduate majors. Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college, school, or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met, and the college, school, or department of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the major to make sure the minor is recognized and to have the minor added to the program of study.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college, school, or department of the major or minor. Students should contact an academic advisor for more information. The Academic Affairs Manual (ACD 305-12) regulates undergraduate academic minors and expressly forbids double-counting of courses between majors and minors.

ENG Elective (3)

Notes: 200 level or above

ENG Upper Division Elective (9)

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: English, BA (all concentrations); Secondary Education (English), BAE

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the college or department of his or her major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Environmental and Resource Management Minor (ESERMMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The minor in environmental and resource management provides students with a thorough introduction to environmental regulations and key environmental management issues such as the provision of clean, potable water, wastewater treatment, solid and hazardous waste management, as well as remediation technologies for polluted soils, groundwater and air. Students learn to apply basic science and engineering principles to solving problems that significantly impact human health and ecosystems.

The environmental and resource management minor provides a valuable option to other majors that focus on environmental issues whether from a technical or policy perspective. The courses form a coherent whole and demonstrate the connection between science, engineering, public policy and the law.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires completion of four core courses (12 credit hours) and one elective course (three credit hours) for a total of 15 credit hours. At least 12 credit hours must be completed in residency at ASU.

The following are required courses that must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher:

Core Courses (12 Credit Hours):

ERM 201: Environmental Management (3)

ERM 203: Environmental Regulations (3)

ERM 302: Water and Wastewater Treatment Technology (3)

ERM 402: Unit Treatment Technologies (3)

Elective Course (3 Credit Hours):

ERM 401: Hazardous Waste Management (3)

ERM 406: Environmental Chemistry (3)

ERM 407: Occupational Hygiene (3)

ERM 428: International Environmental Management (G) (3)

ERM 432: Sustainable Solid Waste Management (3)

ERM 494: Environmental Management Leadership (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: Students will need to have a minimum GPA of 2.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") and have at least sophomore status.

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Students currently enrolled in the environmental and resource management BS degree program are not eligible to pursue the environmental and resource management minor.

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Interested students should consult with a Polytechnic School advisor to verify eligibility and to review all courses required for the minor. To schedule an advising appointment, go to <https://fultonapps.asu.edu/advising> (<https://fultonapps.asu.edu/advising>).

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

The minor in ethnic studies is open to all ASU undergraduate majors. Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college, school, or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met, and the college, school, or department of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the major to make sure the minor is recognized and to have the minor added to the student's program of study.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college, school, or department of the major or minor. Please contact an academic advisor for more information. The Academic Affairs Manual (ACD 305-12) regulates undergraduate academic minors and expressly forbids double-counting of courses between majors and minors.

Fashion Minor (HIFSHMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Students in the minor program receive grounding in the history, social context and economics of the contemporary fashion industry. They also have the option of pursuing more focused classes designed to introduce students to a variety of roles in this important industry: fashion history, fashion industry business practices, and fashion design and production. Among the subjects that may be related to the students' majors are marketing and merchandising, costuming, wearable technology, sustainability, management and leadership, international experience, and fashion and culture. Due to the relationship of these subjects to a wide variety of on-campus disciplines, students from many parts of the university will be able to supplement their major with closely related classes in a fashion minor, creating a strong foundation for a variety of careers. Opportunities for internships and study abroad could further advance students' professional goals. Through the leadership of well-known fashion industry professionals, the minor in fashion at ASU will be connected globally to leaders in the industry.

Description:

The minor in geography enables students to be as broad or specific in their geographic education as they wish. Beyond the two required lower-division courses, at least four upper-division courses in geography must be completed.

Program Requirements:

The minor in geography requires a minimum of 18 credit hours, of which at least 12 credit hours must be upper-division. All courses must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Lower Division Core

GPH 111: Introduction to Physical Geography (SQ) AND GPH 112: Introduction to Physical Geography Lab (SQ) or GPH 211: Landform Processes (SQ) (4)

GCU 102: Introduction to Human Geography (SB & G) or GCU 121: World Geography (SB & G) (3)

Electives

GPH OR GCU OR GIS Upper Division Elective (12)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Geography, BA; Geography, BS; Geography (Urban Studies), BS; Geography (Meteorology-Climatology), BS

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

The minor in geography is open to all students at ASU, except for those majoring in geography.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

ASU Online Elective (3 hours)

HST Upper Division Elective (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: history; history (secondary education); secondary education (history)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

To declare the minor, students must make an appointment with an academic advisor in the School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation providing the college (and in certain colleges, the academic unit) of their major allows the official recognition of the minor and the academic unit of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met.

Students wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. Students should also consult with an academic advisor in the college or department of their majors to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in a fully online format-no face-to-face sessions required. We offer six enrollment sessions throughout the year, and you learn in accelerated, 7.5-week classes. View the program description and request more information here.

History of Science, Ideas and Innovation Minor (LSHSIIMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

Science and technology shape every facet of modern human life, but all too frequently, underlying histories and ideas go unexamined. The minor program in the history of science, ideas and innovation helps students understand how society reached this point (and helps them reflect on what the future might hold) by providing a foundation in the social and intellectual issues central to understanding the intertwined histories of science, technology and ideas.

Program Requirements:

The minor of history of science, ideas and innovation requires 15 credit hours, as follows:

1. A minimum of six upper-division credit hours in the minor must be taken in courses offered through the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts.
2. Courses that count toward the minor must have a grade of "C" (2.00 on a scale of 4.00) or higher.
3. Twelve credit hours of upper-division history courses are required.

Required Minor Course (3 credit hours)

HST 280: History of Science, Ideas and Innovation (3)

Elective Minor Courses (12 credit hours minimum; choose four):

HST 309: Exploration and Empire ((L or HU) & H) (3)

HST 318: History of Engineering ((L or SB) & G) (3)

HST 319: History of Aviation (3)

HST 345: Environmental History (L) (3)

HST 380: Studies in the History of Science (3)

HST 381: Studies in the History of Ideas (3)

HST 382: Studies in the History of Innovation and Technology (3)

HST 482: Writing and the History of Science, Ideas and Technology (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00 cumulative GPA

Human Systems Engineering Minor (ESHSEMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The minor in human systems engineering in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering provides students with an understanding of the science of human performance and with experience, using methods and tools that will enable them to apply their understanding to design and problem-solving in a wide variety of domains, such as product usability, learning design, sports performance, and workplace and hospital safety.

A broad range of professions need experts in human factors to work on problems that involve an understanding of human performance. Interest areas include user experience, aviation human factors, cognitive performance, consumer psychology, transportation human factors, patient safety, effective teamwork, health psychology, learning optimization, social cognition, threat detection, and sports psychology.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires 21 credit hours. All required minor courses must be passed with a "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Required Courses (18 Credit Hours):

HSE 101: Introduction to Human Systems Engineering (SB) (3)
HSE 225: Human Systems Integration (3)
HSE 230: Statistics for Human Systems Research I (CS) (3)
HSE 290: Experimental Methods for Human Systems Research (L) (3)
HSE 323: Perceptual Systems (SB) or HSE 324: Applied Cognitive Science (SB) (3)
HSE 325: Human-Computer Interaction (3)

Elective Course (3 Credit Hours):

HSE 422: Human Factors in Sport (3)
HSE 423: Human Factors in Transportation (3)
HSE 424: Human Automation Interaction (3)
HSE 425: Human Factors in Medical Systems (3)
HSE 426: Training and Expertise (3)
HSE 427: Designing for Learning (3)
HSE 428: Judgment and Decision Making (3)
HSE 429: Product Design and Evaluation (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

To add the minor in human systems engineering, a student must be in junior status and have at least a 2.00 cumulative GPA.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: Students will need to have a minimum GPA of 2.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") and have at least junior status.

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Students currently enrolled in the human systems engineering BS degree program are not eligible to pursue the human systems engineering minor.

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Interested students should consult with a Polytechnic School advisor to verify eligibility and to review all courses required for the minor. To schedule an advising appointment, students should go to <https://fultonapps.asu.edu/advising> (<https://fultonapps.asu.edu/advising>).

Innovation in Society Minor (FIFISMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor in innovation in society equips students with the tools needed to analyze how science, technology and other social forces shape our present and future. Students will cultivate the critical-thinking skills needed to develop creative strategies that steer innovation towards the needs and values of society. Students will be trained to synthesize research and theory from the social sciences, humanities, natural sciences and engineering so they can develop proposals for how to build better futures. It will enable students to understand the broader context of their major and help them to bridge those studies with other disciplines to develop more encompassing solutions to important problems.

Integrative Social Science Minor (LSISSMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The minor program in integrative social science is designed to provide general education in the social sciences for individuals who desire exposure to the variety of theories and methods of social scientists. The minor is useful to engineers, technologists and other professionals whose specialized education may not have given them access to social science research theories and methodologies, although their professional activities demand knowledge of those tools. The minor may also be taken by any individual for general knowledge.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires 18 credit hours. All students must complete the 15 credit hours of required courses and 3 credits from the list of electives. Because of their specific design for this particular minor, required courses for the 15 credit hours cannot be substituted. All courses used to meet the three-credit hour elective component must be upper-division (numbered 300- to 400-level). Transfer hours cannot be used to meet the requirements for the 15 credit hours of courses required.

Required Courses (15 credit hours)

ISS 301: Integrated Social Science Research Methods (SB) (3)
ISS 302: Scope of Social Science (SB) (3)
ISS 304: Integrated Theories of Social Science (SB) (3)
ISS 401: Statistics for Integrated Social Science (3)
STS 304: Science, Technology, and Society (SB) (3)

Elective Courses (3 credit hours; select one course)

POS 325: Public Policy Development (SB) (3)
POS 485: Political Economy (SB) (3)
SOC 332: The Modern City (G) (3)

SOC 352: Social Change (SB & G & H) (3)
SOC 420: Sociology of Religion (L or SB) (3)
SOC 421: Education and Society (SB) (3)
STS 306: Social Effects of Science and Technology (SB) (3)

Interdisciplinary Organizational Studies Minor (ASIOSMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor in interdisciplinary organizational studies, offered by the School of Social and Behavioral Studies, is designed to increase understanding of the behavior and the dynamics of individual, group and organizational processes in the workplace. It incorporates perspectives from the behavioral and social sciences, communication studies and management. The minor is learner-centered and allows students to select course work that matches their career and educational goals.

Program Requirements:

The minor in interdisciplinary organizational studies consists of 21 credit hours, of which 18 credit hours must be upper division course work. The research methods course must be approved by an academic advisor prior to enrollment. Students will complete 12 credit hours in courses focused on organizations and three credit hours from courses focused on diversity within organizations. The internship site must be approved by the SBS Internship Advisor prior to enrollment. All courses used to satisfy the requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Core Requirements (6 credit hours)

PSY 453: Organizational Behavior (SB) (3)

Research Methods course must be chosen in consultation with an academic advisor in the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences from the following:

COM 308: Advanced Research Methods in Communication (L) (3)

PSY 230: Introduction to Statistics (CS) (3)

SBS 304: Social Statistics I (CS) (3)

Cluster 1: Courses Focused on Organizations

Choose four courses from the following list, for a total of 12 credit hours:

The minor in interdisciplinary organizational studies is open to all ASU undergraduate majors. Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college, school, or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met, and the college, school, or department of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the major to make sure the minor is recognized and to have the minor added to the student's program of study.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college, school, or department of the major or minor. Students should contact an academic advisor for more information. The Academic Affairs Manual (ACD 305-12) regulates undergraduate academic minors and expressly forbids double-counting of courses between majors and minors.

Interior Design History Minor (ARINTMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor in interior design history is available to students interested in design and culture. The courses designated for the minor are part of the professional studies in interior design environments and serve to inform students about the evolution of interiors, furnishings and decorative arts from ancient Egypt to the present. They introduce theories informing the profession of interior design. They examine cultures from around the globe, as they influence human needs and behaviors in the living and working environment.

Program Requirements:

A minimum of 18 credit hours (12 credit hours of which must be from the 300 or 400 level) are required for the minor. A minimum grade of "C" (2.00) is required in all classes for the minor. To enhance the understanding of the subject matter, the selected courses are sequential in nature and require certain prerequisites. Consequently, students should carefully note the semester in which any of these courses are offered.

Required Courses

DSC 101: Design Awareness (HU & G) (3)

INT 111: Interior Design Issues and Theories (HU) (3)

INT 310: History of Interior Design I (HU & H) (3)

Notes: INT 310 requires a prerequisite of ARS 102 Art from Renaissance to Present with a C or better.

INT 311: History of Interior Design II (HU & H) (3)

Choose two Interior Design History Courses

INT 412: History of Decorative Arts in Interiors (HU) (3)

INT 413: History of Textiles in Interior Design (3)

INT 415: Latin American Design (3)

INT 494: Contemporary Design Issues in Europe (3)

INT 494: Design and Context (3)

INT 494 Contemporary Design Issues in Europe and INT 494 Design and Context are offered as part of a summer study abroad program only.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

A minimum GPA of 2.50 in minor courses is required to earn the minor in Interior Design History.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.50

Kinesiology Minor (NHKINMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Lake Havasu

Description:

The minor program in kinesiology will introduce students to the concepts, theories, research and careers related to the four major subdisciplines of kinesiology (motor behavior, exercise and health psychology, biomechanics, and exercise physiology). Students in the minor will then select one of these four subdisciplinary areas as the area of emphasis on which to focus in the upper-division requirements for the minor.

Program Requirements:

18 credit hours are required for the minor. Depending upon a student's program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor. There are course prerequisites for a number of courses in the minor.

Students will begin by taking KIN 101 Introduction to Kinesiology and KIN 290 Introduction to Evidence-Based Practice. After this students will select a track in one of the four subdisciplines.

*All track courses must come from a single track.

Required Core Courses for all Tracks (6 credit hours)

KIN 101: Introduction to Kinesiology (3)

KIN 290: Introduction to Evidence-Based Practice (L) (3)

Biomechanics Track

Biomechanics Required Course (3 credit hours)

KIN 335: Biomechanics (3)

Biomechanics Track Elective Courses (9 credit hours; choose three courses)

KIN 334: Functional Anatomy and Kinesiology (3)

KIN 412: Biomechanics of the Skeletal System (3)

KIN 418: Experimental Neuromechanics (3)

Exercise Physiology Track

Exercise Physiology Track Required Course (3 credit hours)

KIN 340: Physiology of Exercise (3)

Latin American Studies Minor (ASLASMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor in Latin American studies, offered by the School of Humanities, Arts and Cultural Studies, is designed for students who have an interest in becoming proficient in Spanish and who wish to carry out work and research in areas not related exclusively to literature. This minor offers a learner-driven model in which the student's specific interests are deepened through the study of Latin America. It is transdisciplinary and allows for flexibility in course selection, while also instilling a breadth and depth of knowledge about issues surrounding Latin America. This minor allows students to be more widely marketable upon graduation for fields as diverse as business, arts administration, teaching, nonprofit organizations, health care and the sciences.

Program Requirements:

The minor in Latin American studies consists of 18 credit hours, of which 12 credit hours must be upper division. A minimum of six upper division courses must be taken from the School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies and a minimum of 12 credit hours must be completed at ASU. Students must demonstrate Spanish language proficiency by meeting the prerequisites of the upper division Latin American elective track, one of which must be taught in Spanish, or by taking Spanish language classes up through SPA 325. All courses used to satisfy the requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Core Requirements (9 credit hours)

LAS 205: Deep Roots: Latin America (HU & G) (3)

LAS 206: Locating Latin America: Interdisciplinary Methods (3)

LAS 330: From the Inside: The Latin American Journey (HU) (3)

Latin American Studies Electives (9 credit hours)

Choose three upper-division courses from any Latin American Emphasis track below, one of which must be taught in Spanish (courses with a SPA prefix are taught in Spanish).

Track 1: Arts

HST 494: Special Topics (3)
IAP 305: 20th and 21st Century Art, Performance, and Media (L or HU) (3)

The minor in Latin American studies is open to all ASU undergraduate majors. Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college, school, or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met, and the college, school, or department of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the major to make sure the minor is recognized and to have the minor added to the student's program of study.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college, school, or department of the major or minor. Students should contact an academic advisor for more information. The Academic Affairs Manual (ACD 305-12) regulates undergraduate academic minors and expressly forbids double-counting of courses between majors and minors.

Materials Science and Engineering Minor (ESMSEMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The materials science and engineering minor is designed to give other science and engineering majors an in-depth understanding of materials, including their structure, processing, properties and performance.

Program Requirements:

Students are required to take five courses and one lab (minimum of 16 credits), listed below:

Required Courses:

MSE 250: Structure and Properties of Materials (3)

MSE 355: Structure and Defects (3)

MSE 356: Structures, Properties, and Defects Lab (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/catalog/courselist?s=MSE&l=300-399&t=2177&hon=F>) > MSE 3 Elective or MSE 4 Elective (6)

Materials-related lab course:

MSE 421: Physical Metallurgy Laboratory or MSE 451: Introduction to Materials Characterization Lab (1)

Materials-related course:

BME 318: Biomaterials (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/catalog/courselist?s=MSE&l=300-399&t=2177&hon=F>) > MSE 3 Elective or MSE 4 Elective or CEE 353: Civil Engineering Materials or CHM 471: Solid-State Chemistry or EEE 352: Properties of Electronic Materials or EEE 436: Fundamentals of Solid-State Devices or PHY 481: Materials Physics I (3-4)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.75 ASU and transfer GPA

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: BA in interdisciplinary studies materials science and engineering concentration

Other Enrollment Requirements: Students need sophomore status and a minimum of a 2.75 ASU and transfer GPA to enroll in the materials science and engineering minor. To receive the minor, students must receive a 2.50 GPA in all minor courses. Students adding the minor will also need to complete MAT 265 (MAT 270), MAT 242 (MAT 342 or 343), and CHM 114 or CHM 113 and 116.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Interested students should consult with a School for Engineering of Matter, Transport and Energy advisor to verify eligibility and to review all courses required for the minor. To schedule an advising appointment, please contact the SEMTE advising office at 480-965-2335 or semte@asu.edu (<mailto:semte@asu.edu>).

Students interested in the materials minor should also consult with their major advisor to ensure recognition of the minor and to have their minor added to their DARS.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Mathematics Minor (ASMATHMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor in mathematics, offered by the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences, explores the study of higher mathematics. It is designed to enable the student to understand the mathematics most commonly used in business, economics and science. It is expected that students in the minor will be able to reason and to find creative solutions to problems that were either presented to them or meaningfully formulated by them. The minor is recommended for students who plan to major in interdisciplinary arts and sciences, biology or business and for those who are preparing for further graduate study.

Program Requirements:

The minor in mathematics consists of a minimum of 27 credit hours. A minimum of nine credit hours must be taken from the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences. Elective courses not on list should be approved by an academic advisor prior to enrollment. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Required Courses (18 credit hours)

MAT 270: Calculus with Analytic Geometry I (MA) (4)

MAT 271: Calculus with Analytic Geometry II (MA) (4)

MAT 272: Calculus with Analytic Geometry III (MA) (4)

MAT 300: Mathematical Structures (L) (3)

MAT 342: Linear Algebra or MAT 343: Applied Linear Algebra (3)

Elective Courses

Choose three electives from the following, for a total of nine credits.

MAT 310: Introduction to Geometry (3)

MAT 371: Advanced Calculus I (3)

MAT 411: History and Philosophy of Mathematics (HU & H) (3)

MAT 443: Introduction to Abstract Algebra (3)

MAT 445: Theory of Numbers (3)

STP 420: Introductory Applied Statistics (CS) (3)

STP 421: Probability (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: None

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

The minor in mathematics is open to all ASU undergraduate majors. Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college, school, or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met, and the college, school, or department of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the major to make sure the minor is recognized and to have the minor added to the student's program of study.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college, school, or department of the major or minor. Students should contact an academic advisor for more information. The Academic Affairs Manual (ACD 305-12) regulates undergraduate academic minors and expressly forbids double-counting of courses between majors and minors.

Mathematics Minor (LAMATMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor in mathematics is designed for students who want to further their knowledge of mathematics. It is beneficial for students majoring in such disciplines as physics, engineering, business, economics, the life and social sciences or any field where there is a need for quantification in the analysis of phenomena.

Program Requirements:

The minor in mathematics consists of a minimum of 18 credit hours, of which at least twelve must be upper-division. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required for courses used in the minor.

Required Courses

MAT 271: Calculus with Analytic Geometry II (MA) or MAT 266: Calculus for Engineers II (MA) (3-4)

MAT 272: Calculus with Analytic Geometry III (MA) or MAT 267: Calculus for Engineers III (MA) (3-4)

MAT 342: Linear Algebra or MAT 343: Applied Linear Algebra (3)

Elective

MAT OR STP OR ACT Upper Division Elective (9)

Students may not apply ACT 491, MAT 411 or MAT 485 or any course not offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences to the minor, unless otherwise approved by an academic advisor in the School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Actuarial Science, BS; Applied Mathematics, BS degrees; Computational Mathematical Science, BS; Mathematics, BA; Mathematics, BS (all concentrations); Secondary Education (Mathematics), BAE; Statistics, BS

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Media Analysis Minor (CSCMOMINA)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Online

Description:

The mass media, more than ever before, play vital roles in how information is disseminated and how societies are shaped and function. As traditional forms of media and information dissemination change rapidly in an increasingly technological world, it is more important than ever for students to understand the way that media work as well as learn to evaluate the messages that are sent. All students can benefit from the study of mass communications institutions, functions and techniques. In this minor, students will learn to understand the roles that media play, how they are changing and their impact. They will be given the tools they need to critically evaluate, analyze and interpret media messages in order to become wise consumers of media themselves.

Program Requirements:

The minor of media analysis consists of 18 credit hours of course work. This is a requirement consistent with many other minor programs at Arizona State University and at other colleges and universities. The focus of the program is on media analysis. Students in the minor will concentrate on evaluating the impact of information dissemination rather than on topics that focus on the practice of gathering and distributing messages. Students in the minor may not register for courses in the professional journalism major.

To take upper-division courses, students must be at least sophomores (25 credit hours). To pursue the minor in media analysis, they must maintain a minimum 2.00 overall GPA, obtain a minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) in each course in the minor and have a major other than journalism and mass communication, sports journalism, or mass communication and media studies.

Required Courses

MCO 120: Media and Society (SB) (3)

MCO 240: Media Issues in American Pop Culture (3)

MCO 418: History of Mass Communication (SB & H) (3)

Elective Courses - 9 Hours

MCO 302: Media Research Methods (3)

MCO 430: International Mass Communication (G) (3)

MCO 435: Social Media (3)

MCO 450: Visual Communication (HU) (3)

MCO 455: War and Mass Media (3)

MCO 456: Political Communication (SB) (3)

MCO 460: Race, Gender, and Media (C) (3)

MCO 465: Sports and Media (3)

MCO 473: Sex, Love, and Romance in the Mass Media (SB) (3)

MCO 494: Special Topics (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Journalism and Mass Communication, Sports Journalism, and Mass Communication and Media Studies

Medical Studies Minor (NHMESTMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, West

Description:

The minor in medical studies focuses on preparing students for work in clinical medicine, to include both direct and indirect patient care. Students take coursework in historical aspects of medicine and in the impact of violence upon health, health disparities, as well as leadership and professionalism. Students have the option of selecting an internship course that will enhance application of core concepts. The School for the Science of Health Care Delivery serves as a connection between the business of medicine and clinical practice.

Program Requirements:

Required Courses (15 credit hours)

HCD 330: Health Care Systems in the U.S. (3)

MED 300: Historical and Contemporary Issues in Health (L) (3)

MED 417: Impact of Violence on Health (3)

MED 445: Science of Helping in Health (3)

MED 450: Leadership and Professionalism (3)

Elective Course (3 credit hours; choose one course)

HCD 303: Global Health Care Systems (G) (3)

IBC 420: Population Health Management (3)

MED 484: Internship (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00 minimum in all courses in the minor

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Medical Studies, BS; Science of Health Care Delivery, BS; Health Sciences, BS

Other Enrollment Requirements: Students must complete a minimum of 30 credit hours prior to adding the minor.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Music Performance Minor (HIMUSPMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor or BIS concentration in music performance allows students who have a background playing an instrument or in singing to continue their studies in music. The coursework develops these skills through individual instrumental or vocal instruction and performance opportunities through various ensemble experiences. The program also includes the study of theoretical and historical elements of music. An audition is required for entrance into the minor or Bachelor of Independent Studies concentration in music performance, which includes private instruction in one primary instrument. Students interested in pursuing the minor in music performance should contact the Office of Academic Affairs in the School of Music for audition information and to schedule the audition.

Program Requirements:

The minor or BIS concentration requires 21 hours (12 upper division) in performance, history, theory and electives.

Admission requirement: An audition is required for entrance into the minor or BIS concentration and MUP 121 study. Audition criteria are determined by area faculty and will be similar to the MUP 111 and MUP 311 criteria found in the Audition Requirements section on this webpage:
MUP 121: Studio Instruction (<http://music.asu.edu/admissions/auditions/>." ><http://music.asu.edu/admissions/auditions/>).

Required Courses

MUP 321: Studio Instruction (1)

MUS 131: Bach to Bebop (3)

Ensembles - Three semesters of ensembles related to the primary instrument studied in the minor

MUP 442: Orchestra Strings , Wind Ensemble , Wind Orchestra or MUP 443: Chamber Singers , Concert Choir or MUP 450: Choral Union or MUP 455: Men's Chorus or MUP 457: Women's Chorus or MUP 459: Barrett Choir or MUP 486: Concert Jazz Band , Jazz Repertory Band , Latin Jazz Ensemble or MUP 494: ASU Gospel Choir , Concert Band (3)

Ensemble - Fourth semester of ensemble (may be unrelated to the primary instrument studied in the minor)

MUS 494: Urban Dance Music Ensemble or MUS 294: Rock Band (1)

Music History (select 6 hours)

MUS 340: Music for the Concert Hall, Stage, and Screen (HU & H) (3)

MUS 356: Broadway and the American Musical (HU) (3)

MUS 362: Rap Music and Hip Hop Culture (HU & C) (3)

MUS 410: History of Women in Music (HU & C & H) (3)

MHL courses may be accepted if the appropriate prerequisites are met or with instructor approval.

Music Theory

MUS 100: Fundamentals of Music Notation or MTC 125: Basic Music Theory (3)

Students will take a theory diagnostic exam to determine placement in either MUS 100 or MTC 125.

Electives

MHL OR MUE OR MUP OR MUS OR MTC Upper Division Elective (2)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: All music majors

Other Enrollment Requirements: Prospective students must successfully complete an audition before the faculty in the applicable instrument area. Audition criteria are determined by area faculty and will be similar to the MUP 111 and MUP 311 enrollment criteria for each instrument posted at <https://music.asu.edu/admissions/undergraduate-auditions> (<https://music.asu.edu/admissions/undergraduate-auditions>). Students who wish to add the performance minor or BIS concentration should email musicadmissions@asu.edu (<mailto:musicadmissions@asu.edu>). The School of Music Academic Affairs Office will direct them to the appropriate faculty member with whom to schedule an audition.

Advisors should not add the minor until the student presents a letter from the School of Music Academic Affairs Office confirming that the student has successfully passed the audition.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Nonprofit Leadership and Management Minor (PPNLMMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The minor in nonprofit leadership and management empowers students to positively impact the community in which they work. Coursework introduces students to knowledge and skills for successful professional careers with nonprofit, social sector organizations that exist to improve the quality of life of communities. The nonprofit sector in the U.S. is unique in form and function, with more than 1.6 million organizations in the U.S.

The minor is ideal for students enrolled in other degrees or majors at ASU who wish to earn a minor that concentrates on the management of nonprofit organizations. Students from such various disciplines as business, communication, education, global studies, museum studies, nursing, public affairs, religious studies, social work, sustainability and others find this program a beneficial supplement to their existing program as many find their career pathways from their degree occur within nonprofit organization forms.

This program affords students the opportunity to start their pursuit of the National Certified Nonprofit Professional credential awarded through the Nonprofit Leadership Alliance (formerly American Humanics, Inc.). Students seeking more information about completing the CNP credential and requirements should see the school website.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires 18 credit hours: 12 credit hours of required core courses and six credit hours of elective courses.

Required Core Courses

NLM 220: Introduction to Nonprofit Organizations (3)
NLM 300: Fund Raising and Resource Development (3)
NLM 310: Volunteer Management (3)
NLM 430: Managing Nonprofit Organizations (L) (3)

Elective Courses: (choose six elective credit hours from one of two blocks)

Block A - choose this block if interested in the CNP credential:

NLM 320: Professional Development Seminar (4)
Notes: This seminar is for one credit hour for four semesters.
NLM 420: Nonprofit Leadership Alliance Institute (2)

Block B - choose two courses if interested in minor only, without CNP credential:

NLM 160: Voluntary Action and Community Leadership (SB) (3)
NLM 380: Financial Management for Nonprofit Organizations (3)
NLM 435: Service Learning for Community Development (3)
PRM 486: Special Events Management (3)

Standards

1. minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) required for all classes in the minor.
2. minimum GPA of 2.00 for those pursuing the minor; a major or premajor, other than BS in nonprofit leadership and management.
3. must meet the curricular and cocurricular requirements (if also pursuing the CNP credential).
4. 15 hours of graded classroom course work (no internship, no independent study).
5. students should be a junior to take 400-level classes.
6. no double counting of courses for both a major and the minor.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Students pursuing a bachelor's degree in nonprofit leadership and management are not eligible to complete this minor. Students pursuing the nonprofit leadership and management bachelor's degree, however, may earn the certified nonprofit professional credential along with their major upon successfully completing both curricular and cocurricular requirements. (Students should see an advisor for details.)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Students wishing to pursue the nonprofit leadership and management minor should consult an academic advisor in the college or department of their majors to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a university minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Nutrition and Healthy Living Minor (NUNHLMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The nutrition and healthy living minor will provide students with a greater understanding of how nutrition contributes to healthy lifestyles and disease prevention.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires completion of a minimum of 18 nutrition credit hours. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required for each course in the minor.

Many courses in this minor require CHM 101 (or CHM 113) or BIO 201 and BIO 202 as a prerequisite. Please ensure all prerequisites are met when planning this minor. Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, additional prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Not all courses in the minor's electives are available to ASU Online students.

Students pursuing the BS in Nutrition (Food and Nutrition) are not eligible to add this minor.

Required Courses:

NTR 241: Human Nutrition (3)

NTR 341: Medical Nutrition Therapy I or NTR 345: Development of Healthy Cuisines (3)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Organizational Leadership Minor (LSORGLMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic, Online

Description:

The minor in organizational leadership uses interdisciplinary methods that prepare students to become leaders in organizations. Students develop skills and knowledge that leaders need to solve problems, communicate effectively, assess programs, manage resources and use emerging technologies in organizations. Students in the program will be prepared for a range of positions in government, health care administration, nonprofit agencies and the service industry.

Program Requirements:

The minor in organizational leadership requires 18 credit hours to complete, including 12 upper-division and six lower-division credit hours.

Required Courses

BIS 340: Organizational Skills (6)

OGL 200: Introduction to Organizational Leadership (SB) (3)

Students may choose any three of the following elective courses as long as two courses are upper-division.

BIS 340: Organizational Skills (3)

BIS 343: Social Processes in Organizations (L or SB) (3)

BIS 345: Organizational Ethics (L or HU) (3)

BIS 357: Assessment in Organizations (3)

BIS 360: Organizational Contexts (SB) (3)

OGL 220: Behavioral Dynamics in Organizations (SB) (3)

OGL 260: Resource Allocation in Organizations (3)

OGL 300: Theory and Practice of Leadership (3)

OGL 320: Foundations of Project Management (3)

OGL 321: Project Leadership, Strategy and Scope (3)

OGL 350: Diversity and Organizations (L & C) (3)

OGL 355: Leading Organizational Innovation and Change (L) (3)

OGL 360: Assessment of Leadership Effectiveness (3)

Any topics can be utilized for BIS 340 and BIS 360 credits.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00 or higher (on a 4.00 scale)

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Organizational Leadership

Parks and Protected Area Management Minor (PPPRMMINT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

As the Southwest continues to develop and urbanize, the demands and pressures on public lands and natural resources continue to grow. The interplay between society and natural resources is key to understanding modernity and continues to be at the center of policy issues and quality of life debates in the West.

The minor in parks and protected area management introduces students to the role of parks and protected areas, with a focus on the unique issues faced by urban-proximate natural area managers. The minor allows students enrolled in other undergraduate programs at ASU to broaden their educational experiences. Students from such various disciplines as business, education, nursing, public affairs, social work and many others might find this program a beneficial supplement to their existing program. Students interested in the parks and protected area management minor may also be interested in therapeutic recreation, available through the parks and recreation management program.

Program Requirements:

Completion of a parks and protected area management minor in the School of Community Resources and Development requires the following:

Required Core Courses

PRM 120: Leisure and the Quality of Life (SB) (3)

PRM 370: Public Lands Management (3)

PRM 380: Wilderness and Parks in America (SB & H) (3)

TDM 480: Sustainable Tourism (3)

Elective Course (choose one from the following list):

CRD 301: Sustainable Communities (3)

PRM 340: Outdoor Survival (3)
PRM 470: Environmental Communication (3)
TDM 448: Heritage and Cultural Tourism (3)
TDM 494: Special Topics (3)

Standards

1. 15 hours of graded classroom course work (no internship, no independent study)
2. 12 hours of course work at the upper-division level, from the approved list
3. minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) required for all classes in the minor
4. no double counting of courses for a major and the minor
5. minimum GPA of 2.00 for those pursuing the minor, a major or premajor, other than a bachelor's degree in parks and recreation management.
6. should be a junior to take 400-level courses

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: parks and recreation management

Personal Health Minor (NPHLMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Online

Description:

This minor will allow students with academic interests that lie outside the realm of medical and health sciences to explore and learn the latest information related to healthy lifestyles, including the attainment and retention of a high quality of personal health. Students will gain the knowledge and skills necessary to optimize their personal health and assume increased responsibility for their own personal health and well-being. The minor reflects the transdisciplinary nature of personal health by including courses from the nutrition, exercise and wellness and health sciences disciplines.

Program Requirements:

A minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) is required for all courses.

Required Courses:

EXW 325: Fitness for Life (3)
EXW 380: Body Image and Wellness (3)
NTR 100: Introductory Nutrition (3)

NTR 355: Eating for Lifelong Health (SB) (3)

Elective Minor Courses (6 hours):

EXW 303: Human Sexuality for Health Education (3)

EXW 312: HIV/AIDS Prevention (1)

EXW 321: Consumer Health (1)

EXW 331: Violence Prevention (1)

EXW 341: Injury Prevention (1)

EXW 351: Substance Abuse Prevention (1)

EXW 361: Social Media and Marketing in Health Education (1)

EXW 371: Conflict Management and Mediation (1)

NTR 345: Development of Healthy Cuisines (3)

NTR 348: Cultural Aspects of Food (SB & C & G) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Philosophy Minor (ASPHIMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor in philosophy, offered by the School of Humanities, Arts and Cultural Studies, provides students with an understanding of central philosophical issues, problems and ideas; a capacity for critical thinking and analytic reasoning; and the ability to present one's positions effectively through oral and written communication.

Program Requirements:

The minor in philosophy consists of 18 credit hours. A minimum of 12 credit hours must be upper division. A minimum of six credit hours must be completed through courses offered by the School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies. Students pursuing this minor will work with an academic advisor to choose and complete six courses from the list below or from the PHI prefix. Credit hours may not be shared between major and minor requirements. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Courses are selected from the following list (18 credits; minimum 12 upper-division)

ENG 401: Topics in Critical Theory (3)
IAS 340: Bioethics (HU) or PHI 320: Bioethics (HU) (3)
IAS 406: Moral Dilemmas (L or HU) or PHI 406: Moral Dilemmas (L or HU) (3)

Philosophy Minor (LAPHIMIN)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Description:

The minor in philosophy provides students with an understanding of philosophical inquiry and method. The minor program offers an introduction to central themes both in the history of philosophy and in the current literature. Students in this minor have the opportunity to sharpen their critical reasoning skills while addressing profound questions regarding the nature of:

- ☐ • existence
- ☐ • knowledge
- ☐ • law
- ☐ • morality
- ☐ • politics
- ☐ • science

Program Requirements:

A minor in philosophy consists of 18 credit hours, of which at least 12 must be upper-division. At least six upper-division hours must be in courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Each course must be completed with a minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Subdisciplinary Electives

Available subdisciplines are epistemology, ethics and political philosophy, history of philosophy, logic and metaphysics. Students choose courses from the philosophical subdiscipline lists, with no more than two courses from any single track. Courses in the "other" list cover multiple subdisciplines and students may apply these courses within the minor without limit. Students should consult with an academic advisor in the School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies about a proposed selection of courses before enrolling.

Epistemology

Physics Minor (LSPHYMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The physics minor in the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts at the Polytechnic campus provides a rigorous foundation in physics with an emphasis on fundamental concepts and applied hands-on experience. It broadens and deepens a student's understanding of their major and increases their options for graduate study and employment. The primary emphasis of the physics minor is to give students experience through applied and computational physics projects. The projects will be guided by faculty with expertise in the physics of semiconductors and graphene, quantum nano-optics, laser physics and materials science.

Program Requirements:

The minor in physics requires 23 credit hours, as follows:

1. A Minimum of six upper-division credit hours in the minor must be taken in courses offered through the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts.
2. Courses that count toward the minor must have a grade of "C" (2.00 on a scale of 4.00) or higher.
3. Twelve credit hours of upper-division physics courses are required.

Required Minor Courses: (14 credit hours minimum)

PHY 121: University Physics I: Mechanics (SQ) (3)

PHY 122: University Physics Laboratory I (SQ) (1)

PHY 131: University Physics II: Electricity and Magnetism (SQ) (3)

PHY 132: University Physics Laboratory II (SQ) (1)

PHY 361: Introductory Modern Physics (3)

PHY 460: Numerical Methods in Modern Physics (3)

Elective Minor Courses: (6 credit hours minimum)

PHY 201: Mathematical Methods in Physics I (CS) (3)

PHY 302: Mathematical Methods in Physics II (3)

PHY 321: Vector Mechanics and Vibration (3)

PHY 331: Principles of Modern Electromagnetism (3)

Required Project Research

PHY 495: Project Research (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Political Science Minor (ASPOLMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor in political science, offered by the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, is designed to help students gain an understanding of theory, practice and policy underlying political processes locally, nationally and internationally and to train students with the research skills necessary for the analysis of complex sociopolitical issues locally and globally.

The program strives to meet these goals by offering students learner-centered coursework in political theory, American political institutions, and international relations and world affairs. These goals are accomplished by offering a flexible program of coursework focusing on international urban, race or ethnic sociopolitical areas, internships, and service-learning or action research opportunities. Under the direction of faculty, students focus on intellectual and concrete policy issues in the greater Phoenix metropolitan area, Arizona, the Arizona-Mexico borderlands, the Americas and the world.

Program Requirements:

The minor in political science consists of 18 credit hours. A minimum of 12 upper division credit hours are required. A minimum of six upper division credit hours must be completed through courses offered by the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences. A maximum of three credit hours of internship and three credit hours of individualized instruction may be used to fulfill requirements. Students wishing to pursue the minor must meet with an academic advisor to construct a set of courses that reflect a particular area of specialty and interest. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Required Courses

Select two from the following:

POS 110: Government and Politics (SB) or POS 310: American National Government (SB) (3)

POS 150: Comparative Government (SB & G) (3)

POS 160: Global Politics (SB & G) (3)

POS 210: Political Ideologies (SB) (3)

Electives (12 credit hours)

The minor program in political science offers students exposure to the skills and knowledge that help them participate effectively as citizens in a democratic political system and flourish in the rapidly developing globalization of the world's political institutions, cultures and economies. The program aims to provide students with an introduction to the tools and skills necessary to link theory with real-world problems and issues.

Program Requirements:

The minor in political science consists of 18 credit hours in political science courses, 12 credit hours of which must be upper-division courses. A minimum of six upper-division credit hours must be taken in courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Only courses completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a scale of 4.00) or better can be used to satisfy minor requirements.

Required courses (Complete two)

POS 110: Government and Politics (SB) or POS 310: American National Government (SB) (3)

POS 150: Comparative Government (SB & G) (3)

POS 160: Global Politics (SB & G) (3)

POS 210: Political Ideologies (SB) (3)

Electives

POS Upper Division Elective (12)

Minimum 2.00 GPA ASU Cumulative.

No more than three credit hours of POS 484 Internship and three credit hours of POS 499 Individualized Instruction may be applied to the minor. Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Political Science, BA; Political Science, BS

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students who wish to pursue a minor in political science may do so with the permission of the department, school or college of their major as well as the advisor in the School of Politics and Global Studies. An ASU student who is pursuing a degree at any ASU campus may elect to add a minor offered at any other ASU campus.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in a fully online format-no face-to-face sessions required. We offer six enrollment sessions throughout the year, and you learn in accelerated, 7.5-week classes. View the program description and request more information here.

Psychology Minor (LAPGSMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor in psychology focuses on appreciating and understanding the human condition from a scientific, psychological point of view.

Students completing the minor in psychology should possess breadth of knowledge pertaining to the major principles, theoretical approaches and findings in psychology. Students should also understand and be able to use basic research and quantitative methods in psychology and be able to gather and synthesize psychological findings. Finally, students should be able to understand the relevance and applicability of psychological principles, approaches and findings to individual, group and social issues. In so doing, they will be prepared as educated citizens to pursue productive careers and engage on a daily basis with their increasingly complex, information-rich world.

Program Requirements:

The minor in psychology consists of completing 22 credit hours of course work in the foundations of psychology and the breadth within psychology categories described below. Six credit hours of upper-division (300 to 499 level) psychology course work must be completed in courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Department of Psychology. All courses for the minor must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better

The minor in religious studies is open to all ASU undergraduate majors. Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college, school, or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met, and the college, school, or department of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the major to make sure the minor is recognized and to have the minor added to the student's program of study.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college, school, or department of the major or minor. Students should contact an academic advisor for more information. The Academic Affairs Manual (ACD 305-12) regulates undergraduate academic minors and expressly forbids double-counting of courses between majors and minors.

Sociocultural Anthropology Minor (ASASBMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor in sociocultural anthropology, offered by the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, is designed to provide students with a substantive understanding of the theoretical assumptions and methodological techniques underlying the field of sociocultural anthropology. Courses provide students with knowledge about and theoretical approaches to cross-cultural studies and transnational research, emphasizing culture and political economy in historical context. Specifically, students minoring in sociocultural anthropology will be expected to demonstrate knowledge and skill in the following areas:

- ☐ • anthropological approaches to and explanatory frameworks for the study of social issues in culture and political economy
- ☐ • application of theoretical knowledge to understanding sociocultural practices across local and global contexts
- ☐ • awareness of cultural, ethnic, gender, sexual, class and age differences and commonalities across world social formations
- ☐ • critical thinking and analytical reasoning
- ☐ • development of their own anthropological perspective for use in their everyday lives and future studies or employment
- ☐ • effective oral presentation and written communication
- ☐ • interpretation of cultural practices, social theory and social texts
- ☐ • qualitative research methods in anthropology and other social sciences and interpretive humanities, including ethnographic field research and library research

Program Requirements:

The minor in Sociocultural Anthropology requires 18 semester hours, at least 12 hours of which must be in upper division courses taken in the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences. Sociology Minor (ASSOCMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor in sociology, offered by the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, provides students with an understanding of the theory, practice and policy underlying issues of social change, inequality and diversity. These issues are approached from multiple perspectives, including race or ethnicity, gender, economic position, age, geographic location and position in the global political economy.

The student minoring in sociology will learn how it enhances one's understanding of social realities and institutions at local, national and international levels, and how sociology contributes to the other social sciences and to the humanities.

Students gain a basic understanding of the assumptions underlying the discipline of sociology and develop the research skills necessary for analysis of complex social issues. These objectives are met by offering a flexible program and by providing the student with individual and group experiences in working with faculty members on concrete intellectual and policy issues.

Program Requirements:

The minor in sociology consists of 18 credit hours, of which 12 hours must be upper division course work. Students wishing to pursue the minor must meet with an academic advisor in the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences to construct a minor that reflects a particular area of specialty and interest. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" or better.

Foundation Requirement

SOC 101: Introductory Sociology (SB) (3)

Select one course from the following:

SBS 303: Quantitative Methods (3)

SBS 304: Social Statistics I (CS) (3)

SOC 483: History of Social Thought (SB) (3)

SOC 486: Contemporary Theory (SB) (3)

Special Events Management Minor (HSEVNMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The minor in special events management is designed to offer students a solid understanding of special events programming and management. In addition to the two-tiered special events course, which provides basic and advanced instruction as well as experiential learning opportunities through event production, students will be able to select electives to meet their interests.

The minor allows students enrolled in other undergraduate programs at ASU to broaden their educational experiences. Students from such various disciplines as business, communication and many others find this program a beneficial supplement to their existing program.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires 15 credit hours: six credit hours of required courses and nine credit hours of elective courses.

Required Core Courses

PRM 486: Special Events Management (3)

PRM 487: Advanced Special Events Management or CSM 485: Sports Events (3)

Electives: (choose three courses from the following list)

NLM 300: Fund Raising and Resource Development (3)
PRM 203: Program Planning (3)
PRM 304: Recreation Planning and Facility Development (L) (3)
PRM 475: Entrepreneurial Recreation and Tourism (3)
PRM 484: Internship (1-12)
TDM 205: Introduction to Travel and Tourism (G) (3)
TDM 345: Meeting and Convention Planning (3)
TDM 350: Tourism, Recreation and Sports Marketing (3)
TDM 458: International Tourism (G) (3)

Standards

1. 15 credit hours of graded course work (no independent study)
2. minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) required for all classes in the minor
3. minimum GPA of 2.00 for those pursuing the minor
4. a major other than parks and recreation management or tourism development and management
5. should be a junior to take 400-level courses
6. no double counting of courses for a major and the minor

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: parks and recreation management; tourism development and management; tourism development and management (sustainable tourism); tourism development and management (resort and hotel leadership)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Students wishing to pursue the special events management minor should consult an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a university minor may not count toward the major degree and the minor. For example, students pursuing a BS degree in either parks and recreation management or tourism development and management are not eligible to complete this minor.

Speech and Hearing Science Minor (LASHSMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The Department of Speech and Hearing Science offers an undergraduate minor in speech and hearing science. This is an academic program with emphasis on normal aspects of speech, language and hearing. The focus is on how motor, cognitive and sensory systems interact with, and influence, hearing, speech and language in children and adults.

Program Requirements:

The minor in speech and hearing science consists of 24 credit hours, and though the following classes are required, students are strongly encouraged to visit an advisor from the Department of Speech and Hearing Science at ASU.

Required Courses:

SHS 105: Survey of Communication Disorders (3)
SHS 250: Introduction to Phonetics (3)
SHS 310: Anatomical and Physiological Bases of Speech (3)
SHS 311: Hearing Science (3)
SHS 367: Language Science (SB) or SHS 375: Speech Science (3)

Upper Division Minor Electives (9 hours)

SHS 401: Principles of Audiology (3)
SHS 402: Clinical Methods and Treatment of Communication Disorders (3)
SHS 465: Speech and Language Acquisition (SB) (3)
SHS 470: Developmental Speech and Language Disorders (3)
SHS 485: Acquired Speech and Language Disorders (3)
SHS 496: Aural Rehabilitation (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: speech and hearing science BS

Other Enrollment Requirements: None.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult with an academic advisor in the college or department of his or her major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Upper-Division Sustainability-Related Electives

Upper Division courses that are sustainability-related and ideally make a connection between the student's major and the minor (#trackgroup) (6)
Students should consult with their major advisor for upper division sustainability-related elective course selection. Possible courses for these electives can be explored at <https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/degrees/undergraduate-courses>, but still need to be approved by the student's major academic advisor.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: BA in Business (Sustainability); BA in Interdisciplinary Studies with a concentration in sustainability

Other Enrollment Requirements: Students interested in adding a minor in sustainability should work with their major academic advisor. A student's major advisor will approve the two upper-division electives required for the minor in sustainability.

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the major advisor for more information.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in a fully online format-no face-to-face sessions required. We offer six enrollment sessions throughout the year, and you learn in accelerated, 7.5-week classes. View the program description and request more information here.

Sustainable Tourism Minor (PPTDMSMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

As sustainability expands in popularity as a discipline, students are looking to find ways to better understand how they can apply the principles of sustainability to specific areas of interest. A minor in sustainable tourism will allow students from any major to learn the basic concepts and theories of tourism development and management and will help them identify ways in which tourism can contribute to sustainable development, locally and globally.

The minor allows students enrolled in other undergraduate programs at ASU to broaden their educational experiences. Students from such various disciplines as sustainability, business and many others will find this program a beneficial supplement to their existing program. Students may also choose to complete a study abroad program.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires a total of 15 credit hours, 12 credit hours of required courses and one three-credit-hour course from the list of electives.

Required Core Courses

TDM 205: Introduction to Travel and Tourism (G) (3)
TDM 372: Tourism Planning (L) (3)
TDM 458: International Tourism (G) (3)
TDM 480: Sustainable Tourism (3)

Electives (choose three courses from the following list)

PRM 475: Entrepreneurial Recreation and Tourism (3)

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: Urban Planning, BSP

The minor in urban planning is open to all students at ASU except for those majoring in urban planning. Urban planning courses may be used for the minor or the major, but not for both.

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students in most majors may pursue at least one minor and, upon successful completion of the prescribed coursework, have that accomplishment officially recognized on the ASU transcript at graduation if the college or department of the minor officially certifies, through established verification procedures, that all requirements for the minor have been met and the college (and in certain colleges, the department) of the student's major allows the official recognition of the minor.

A student wishing to pursue a specific minor should consult an academic advisor in the unit offering that minor to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. The student should also consult an academic advisor in the college or department of the major to make sure the college or department of the major allows the recognition of the minor.

Note: Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate either by the college or department of the major or minor. Courses taken as part of a minor may not count toward both the major degree and the minor. Students should contact the department for more information.

Urban and Metropolitan Studies Minor (PPURBMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The minor in urban and metropolitan studies offers students interested in the urban environment the opportunity to explore the wide variety of issues that influence the quality of life in urban communities. Students are encouraged to learn about cities as historical, social, cultural, economic and political phenomena in order to gain a strong understanding of the complex relationships that contribute to the problems and opportunities of urban living.

The program allows students enrolled in other undergraduate programs at ASU to broaden their educational experiences. Students from various disciplines such as planning, business, political science, nonprofit management and leadership, communication, social work, geography and many others might find this program a beneficial supplement to their existing program.

As the population in the state's urban areas continues to grow, so will the demand for leaders who are skilled in new and innovative ways with which to address the challenges such growth generates.

Program Requirements:

1. 12 hours of residence credit at ASU
 2. 15 hours of course work with a "C" (2.00 on a scale of 4.00) or better in each course
 3. nine hours of upper-division course work from the approved list.
- Eligibility to pursue the minor requires a major other than urban and metropolitan studies.

Required Courses

URB 300: Urban and Metropolitan Studies (3)

URB 305: Urban Governance (3)

Core Courses (choose two of the following)

PAF 302: Public Service Research Methods (3)

Undergraduate Certificates (Program Descriptions and Requirements)

Actuarial Science Certificate (LAACTCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Actuarial science is an area of mathematical and statistical science that requires expertise in specializations of probability and interest theory, coupled with a strong foundation in accounting, finance and economics. This certificate provides students with preparation for professional actuarial credentialing exams offered by the Society of Actuaries and the Casualty Actuarial Society.

Program Requirements:

Students must complete a minimum of 15 credit hours from the courses listed below. At least twelve hours must be upper-division work. A course grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all upper-division coursework. At least 6 hours must be chosen from courses with the ACT prefix. In order to enroll in ACT courses, a minimum grade of "B" (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) is required for all prerequisite math, statistics and computer programming or applications course work.

Required Courses

ACT 201: Introduction to Elements and Techniques of Actuarial Science (3)

Electives (12 hours from the following list, with at least 6 hours of ACT courses)

ACT 310: Mathematics of Finance (4)

ACT 415: Probability for Risk Management (3)

ACT 430: Mathematics of Financial Derivatives (3)

ACT 435: Actuarial Business Forecasting (3)

ACT 440: Life Contingencies I (3)

ACT 450: Actuarial Models and Modeling I (3)

ACT 451: Actuarial Models and Modeling II (3)

CIS 308: Advanced Excel in Business (3)

CIS 355: Business Data Warehouses and Dimensional Modeling (3)

STP 425: Stochastic Processes (3)

STP 427: Mathematical Statistics (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Although no specific degree is required for admission to the actuarial science certificate, a strong mathematical background is essential (found in majors such as mathematics, statistics, engineering and natural sciences). Students with a major or degree other than those listed will require additional preparation beyond the certificate. Students are required to have a minimum 3.00 cumulative GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") and grades of "B" or better in courses of multivariate calculus, linear algebra and introductory statistics at ASU or an equivalent institution.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Applied Business Data Analytics Certificate (BABDACERT)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Description:

The certificate in applied business data analytics is for students who are interested in practical uses for computer-based tool suites that are capable of managing vast amounts of data; providing sophisticated but easy-to-use means to manage and analyze that data; and to leverage those tools for making good decisions about projects, process designs and fundamental decision-making tasks. Exposure to predictive analytics and modeling, big data techniques, and visualization provides significant insight into the advanced uses of the computer-based tools. Critical thinking is an important skill and mindset that is required to establish and evaluate evidence-based benchmarks for making good decisions leading to high-quality outcomes.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in applied business data analytics requires 18 credit hours to complete and is available to all majors. At least 12 credit hours must be upper division.

Required courses include:

CIS 105: Computer Applications and Information Technology (CS) (3)

CIS 308: Advanced Excel in Business (3)

CIS 309: Business Process Management (3)

CIS 311: Business Project Management (3)

CIS 405: Business Intelligence (3)

Any Statistics Course (3)

To earn the certificate, students must complete all courses with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a scale of 4.00) or higher.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The applied business data analytics certificate is open to all ASU students. The certificate application is accessed and submitted through Advising SOS: <https://wpcarey.asu.edu/SOS> (<https://wpcarey.asu.edu/SOS>).

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Applied Social Sciences Certificate (ASAPSSCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The certificate program in applied social sciences in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences' School of Social and Behavioral Sciences at the West campus prepares students to apply social science tools to real-world problems.

Students collaborate to develop case studies, engage in fieldwork and learn both how to apply expert knowledge and how to communicate evidence. Working with stakeholders, students identify and solve problems, reform managerial structures and organizational systems, and drive social change. The certificate program is recommended for students with academic or career interests in human resources, administration, journalism, social work, business, community and civic work, as well as politics, organizing and advocacy, public policy, education and sustainability.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in applied social sciences requires a minimum of 15 credit hours (at least 12 must be upper division). Students are encouraged to take courses that develop breadth rather than limiting their selection to courses in one particular discipline.

All 15 credit hours must be completed through the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences. A maximum of six credit hours may be shared between the certificate and a New College major.

The certificate requires six core credit hours and nine credit hours of electives. Electives are not limited to the certificate elective list; see academic advisor prior to enrollment. A maximum of three credit hours of individualized instruction or internship may be applied toward the certificate.

Only courses in which a student received a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet the certificate requirements.

Required Core Courses (6 credit hours)

POS 350: Comparative Politics (SB & G) or SOC 331: Environmental Sociology (SB & G) (3)

SBS 304: Social Statistics I (CS) or SBS 404: Social Statistics II: Multivariate Analysis (CS) (3)

Elective Courses (9 credit hours; minimum 6 upper-division)

Students will select nine credit hours from courses where an applied project is assigned within a specific context. Selected courses must come from at least two of the following prefixes: ASB, POS, SBS or SOC.

ASB 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or SBS 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or POS 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or SOC 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) (3)

Arabic Studies Certificate (LAARBCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in Arabic studies provides students with skills that will enable and qualify them to communicate effectively in Arabic in the four areas of language acquisition: listening, reading, speaking and writing.

Simultaneously, students gain broad knowledge and understanding of the culture, literature and traditions of the vast Arabic-speaking world.

The program provides critically needed educational and cultural diversity that will enrich students' undergraduate experiences and prepare them for life as employees and employers.

Graduate students in the liberal arts, social sciences and humanities seeking academic or professional careers in any of the three disciplines or thematic concentrations will also benefit from this certificate because of the added advantage the program gives them in the job market, given the demonstrably high need for graduates with knowledge of the Arabic language.

Program Requirements:

The Arabic studies certificate requires students to complete 18 credit hours of upper-division course work. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required for each course. Students must also demonstrate proficiency in Arabic language by completing ARB 202 or above with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better or by taking a language proficiency test.

Arabic Core Courses (9 hours)

ARB 311: Advanced Arabic Skills I (3)
 ARB 321: Arabic Conversation I (3)
 ARB 331: Arabic/Islamic Culture and Literature (HU & H & G) (3)
 ARB 335: Arabic Culture and Islam (G) (3)
 ARB 341: Quran Text and Women (HU & H) (3)
 ARB 351: Classical Arabic Literature (3)

Elective Courses (9 hours)

ARB 336: Introduction to the Qur'an (3)
ARB 337: Hadith and Prophetic Tradition (3)
ARB 352: Modern Arabic Literature in Translation (3)
ARB 422: Advanced Arabic Media (3)
GCU 325: Geography of Europe (SB & G) (3)
HST 307: Studies in African History (H) (3)
REL 365: Islamic Civilization (HU & H) (3)
REL 366: Islam in the Modern World (HU & G) (3)
REL 369: Women in Islam (3)
REL 460: Studies in Islamic Religion (HU & G) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Any student accepted into an appropriate degree program at ASU can declare the certificate in Arabic studies. Students should contact an academic advisor in the School of International Letters and Cultures for more information.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Asian Studies Certificate (LAASNCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The Asian studies certificate supplements a bachelor's degree and demonstrates knowledge of an Asian language as well as general knowledge of Asian history, art, culture and society. Students may also pursue the certificate as a stand-alone program. The certificate provides students with official transcript recognition of specialization in Asian studies.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 24 credit hours of approved course work. Fifteen credit hours of upper-division area studies course work must be chosen from at least four different disciplines, e.g., language and cultures, history, religious studies, anthropology, geography, political science, global studies, art, and music. Courses from other disciplines may be used by approval. The remaining nine credit hours may be chosen in any combination. At least six upper-division hours in the certificate must be in courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. A minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) is required for each course that is used to fulfill the certificate requirements.

Language Requirement

Students must demonstrate proficiency in an Asian language by completing the 201 and 202 course sequence, one year of study abroad at the intermediate level or satisfactory performance on a proficiency exam. Asian languages include Chinese, Hindi, Indonesian, Japanese, Korean, Thai, Vietnamese.

Disciplinary Electives (24 credit hours; minimum 15 upper-division)

At least four different disciplines must be represented within the upper-division disciplinary electives (e.g., history, religious studies, global studies, anthropology). Cross-listed courses will only apply to the certificate under one discipline; students may choose the discipline that is most advantageous.

Biomedical Research Certificate (ASBMRCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The biomedical research certificate program offered by ASU's New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences at the West campus combines authentic research experience conducted in laboratories of practicing academic scientists with upper-division coursework, including laboratory courses, that allow for specialization in given subject areas. The program is intended to serve students seeking competency in addressing scientific questions in the laboratory and prepares them to be highly competitive for careers in the research sector or to pursue graduate and professional schools, such as medical school.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in Biomedical Research requires a minimum of 15 credit hours (at least 12 must be upper division). Twelve credit hours must be taken at ASU. The certificate requires three core credit hours, 8 credit hours of electives, and four hours of LSC 388 Research Fundamentals or LSC 499 Individualized Instruction. Students who select LSC 499 will register for two consecutive semesters for two credit hours each. Nine credit hours must be counted toward the certificate alone and may not be shared with a student's major requirements. Only courses in which a student received a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet certificate requirements.

Required Course

STP 280: Probability and Statistics for Researchers (CS) (3)

Elective Courses (8 credit hours)

BCH 371: Modern Concepts in Biochemistry AND BCH 372: Modern Concepts in Biochemistry Laboratory (4)

BIO 353: Cell Biology AND BIO 354: Cell Biology Laboratory (4)

BIO 360: Animal Physiology AND LSC 359: Animal Physiology Laboratory (4)

BIO 443: Applied Molecular Genetics and Genomics AND LSC 447: Molecular Genetics Laboratory (4)

MIC 443: The Microbial Universe AND MIC 444: The Microbial Universe Laboratory (4)

Other Certificate Requirements (4 credit hours; choose one option below)

Option A

LSC 388: Research Fundamentals for the Natural Sciences (L) AND LSC 499: Individualized Instruction (4)

Notes: Students complete LSC 388 (3 credit hours) and LSC 499 (1 credit hour)

Option B

LSC 499: Individualized Instruction (4)

Notes: Students who select LSC 499 will register for two consecutive semesters for two credit hours each.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

This certificate requires a 3.00 cumulative GPA in ASU coursework and upper-division standing or graduate student status.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Communication Sciences and Disorders Certificate (NHCSDCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The postbaccalaureate certificate in communication sciences and disorders is designed for students who have already received a bachelor's degree in another discipline but wish to pursue a master's degree in speech-language pathology or communication disorders. This coursework will provide students with the prerequisite background and knowledge necessary to perform at the master's degree level in the field. Completion of the postbaccalaureate certificate will allow students to meet the American Speech Language and Hearing Association requirements to enter master's degree programs in speech-language pathology or communication disorders.

Program Requirements:

There are 27 required credit hours in the certificate in communication sciences and disorders. A "C" minimum is required for all courses in the certificate, although students must maintain a 3.00 GPA in the certificate program.

SHS 250: Introduction to Phonetics (3)
SHS 310: Anatomical and Physiological Bases of Speech (3)
SHS 311: Hearing Science (3)
SHS 367: Language Science (SB) (3)
SHS 375: Speech Science (3)
SHS 401: Principles of Audiology (3)
SHS 402: Clinical Methods and Treatment of Communication Disorders (3)
SHS 465: Speech and Language Acquisition (SB) (3)
SHS 496: Aural Rehabilitation (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Prospective students must have earned a bachelor's degree in a field outside of speech and hearing science with a minimum GPA of 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Students interested in this certificate should apply for university admission as nondegree-seeking graduate students and see an advisor in Speech and Hearing Science to add this certificate. Students should see <https://students.asu.edu/graduate/nondegree> (<https://students.asu.edu/graduate/nondegree>) for more information.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Computer Gaming Certificate (ESSCICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The computer gaming certificate program is designed to provide a game development skill set that the student can apply to domain-specific applications in the student's major. The skill set includes architecture of game engines, art design and computer graphics for gaming, and game software development.

In this certificate program, students will learn to apply gaming technology to the rapidly growing video game industry and to business, medicine, geography, biotechnology and education. Examples of projects include:

- ☐ • building a game that teaches linear algebra by incorporating trigonometric rules into the game design
- ☐ • creating a game that teaches correct sentence construction to beginning learners of English
- ☐ • creating a game to help patients with physical therapy
- ☐ • creating an interactive virtual world for corporate training
- ☐ • designing a game platform incorporating geographic information systems
- ☐ • inventing a surgical simulation to educate medical students

Program Requirements:

Students will complete nine credit hours of core courses, including a final capstone project and nine credit hours of elective courses. The certificate requires 12 credit hours of upper-division course work. Students need to allow at least two years to complete the certificate program due to the prerequisite structure.

Core Courses (9 Credit Hours):

CPI 111: Game Development I (CS) (3)
CPI 211: Game Development II (3)
CPI 441: Gaming Capstone (3)

Elective Courses (9 Credit Hours):

CPI 321: Fundamentals of Game Art (3)
CPI 411: Graphics for Games or SER 432: Game Engine Architecture (3)
CPI 311: Game Engine Development or SER 332: Introduction to Graphics and Game Development (3)
CPI 421: 3-D Modeling and Texturing (3)
CPI 462: Design for Learning in Virtual Worlds (3)
CPI 484: Internship (3)
EDT 310: Games for Impact: The Full Life Cycle (3)
EDT 329: Games, Simulations, and Virtual Environments (3)
EDT 340: Designing Games for Impact (3)
EDT 460: Games, Technology and Society (3)
EDT 463: Games for Impact: The Full Life Cycle (3)
SER 431: Advanced Graphics (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The computer gaming certificate is open to any student admitted to an undergraduate degree program at ASU and in good academic standing. This certificate can also be used by interdisciplinary studies BA students as part of their degree program.

All students are eligible to take CPI courses. Students who want to declare the certificate need to complete the Undergraduate Certificate form on the registrar's website and submit it to the School of Computing, Informatics and Decision Systems Engineering Academic Advising Center located in BYENG, Room 225. Interdisciplinary studies students need to contact their advisor to add the computer gaming concentration to their degree program.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Convention Sales and Meeting Planning Certificate (PPTDMCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The U.S. meetings, conventions and exhibitions industry generates more than $120 billion a year, supporting nearly two million jobs. Students can explore this exciting growth industry with the convention sales and meeting planning certificate. The demand for professionals is strong, and this program provides an excellent foundation for enhancing career opportunities nationally, regionally and locally. Phoenix is a major convention and meeting destination.

There is a need for qualified professionals to service conventions and meetings, due in large part to the $600 million investment in the Phoenix Convention Center expansion; development of new hotels and other visitor-related products; and the steady influx of corporate headquarters relocating to the greater Phoenix area. The certificate, which has been endorsed by the Greater Phoenix Convention and Visitors Bureau and the Arizona Sunbelt Chapter of Meeting Professionals International, will enhance a graduate's career opportunities as a tourism professional.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 15 credit hours: four required core courses (12 credits) and one elective course (3 credits). Courses taken as part of a university major may count toward that degree and the certificate. Requirements can be met online. All core classes and some elective classes are taught online at least once a year. To earn the certificate, students must complete a minimum of 12 upper-division credit hours. An application to the program is required.

Required Core Courses

TDM 205: Introduction to Travel and Tourism (G) (3)

TDM 345: Meeting and Convention Planning (3)

Notes: Prerequisite: TDM 205, grade of "C" (2.00) or better

TDM 350: Tourism, Recreation and Sports Marketing (3)

Notes: Prerequisite: TDM 205, grade of "C" (2.00) or better

TDM 386: Convention Sales and Management (3)

Elective: (choose one)

TDM 225: Introduction to Resort and Hotel Management (3)

TDM 458: International Tourism (G) (3)

PRM 486: Special Events Management (3)

Standards

1. Fifteen credit hours of graded classroom course work are required (no internship, no independent study).
2. A minimum "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) grade is required for all classes in the certificate.
3. A minimum GPA of 2.00 is required for those pursuing the certificate.
4. A student should be a junior to take 400-level courses.

Creative City Certificate (PPURBCERC)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The creative city certificate prepares students to engage effectively in revitalizing cities and communities by tapping their inherent potential for cultural innovation, place-making, and social and economic entrepreneurship. Exploring best practices in a global context, students develop asset-based proposals for specific locales including implementation plans. The creative city certificate adds value to other majors as well as work and life experience for students aspiring to assume leadership roles in improving quality of life, specifically by enhancing quality of place.

Cities are centers of human creativity and cultural innovation; they both attract and breed these. Such creativity and innovation are apparent in the vitality of the arts as well as that of businesses (large and small), research (basic and applied) and the everyday life unique to any given locale. These are the ingredients that make our places sustainable, economically, socially and environmentally, by endowing a sense of place along with a sense of community.

This certificate also serves professionals in the community working in the areas of:

- ☐ • community development
- ☐ • land-use law
- ☐ • parks and recreation
- ☐ • philanthropy
- ☐ • planning
- ☐ • public art
- ☐ • urban governance and others

Flexible class times and locations make the certificate a viable option for those unable to attend classes during the day.

Program Requirements:

The five-course sequence comprising the certificate will enable students to build upon their own strengths in order to help cities and communities creatively build upon their capacities. The creative city certificate consists of a maximum of 15 credit hours of course work. All courses must be taken at ASU.

Required Core Courses

URB 405: Citizen Engagement and Community Building (3)
URB 406: Public Administration & Community Development (3)

Elective Courses

GRA 401: Creative Environment (3)
NLM 160: Voluntary Action and Community Leadership (SB) (3)
NLM 220: Introduction to Nonprofit Organizations (3)
NLM 300: Fund Raising and Resource Development (3)
NLM 402: Assessment and Evaluation of Community Services (3)
PAF 420: Public Leadership (3)

PRM 120: Leisure and the Quality of Life (SB) (3)
PRM 210: Leisure Delivery Systems (3)
PRM 301: Sustainable Communities (3)
PRM 302: Inclusive Community Development (C) (3)
TDM 448: Heritage and Cultural Tourism (3)
URB 220: Introduction to Urban America (3)

A "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all upper-division course work.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Criminal Investigations Certificate (PPCRICERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, West

Description:

The certificate program in criminal investigations educates students about a variety of aspects of criminal investigations and criminalistics. It is designed to provide students of the social sciences, natural sciences, humanities and public services with an understanding of the nature of criminal evidence; the language of forensic science; the scope, probative value and limitations of a variety of investigative specializations and their techniques; and an appreciation of how forensic investigative methods are used in the quest for justice. The certificate program allows students to satisfy at least two of their General Studies requirements (SQ and SB) in a thematic manner, but it is not designed to prepare students to work in a crime laboratory.

Program Requirements:

Required Courses

CRJ 100: Introduction to Criminal Justice (SB) (3)
CRJ 210: Introduction to Criminal Investigations (3)
CRJ 211: Documenting the Crime Scene (3)
CRJ 410: Procedural Criminal Law (3)

Choose at least three courses from the following (at least 9 credit hours must be upper-division):

CRJ 321: Imperatives of Proof (3)
CRJ 433: Death Investigations: Principles of Forensic Medicine (3)
CRJ 434: Drugs of Abuse (3)
CRJ 435: Crime and Forensic Mental Health (3)
CRJ 450: Crime Analysis (3)
CRJ 484: Internship (1-6)
CRJ 494: Special Topics (3)

Notes: only in approved investigations-related topics

FOR 350: Computer Forensics (3)
FOR 410: Professional Practices in Forensic Science (L) (3)
FOR 394: Special Topics (3)

Notes: only in approved investigations-related topics

FOR 484: Internship (1-6)

1. It is the student's responsibility to check the prerequisites required by courses in their discipline. Depending upon a student's program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed to complete the requirements of this certificate.

2. Special Topics courses (FOR 394 and CRJ 494) will be designated and approved by departments and schools. Students will need to work with an advisor in order to select appropriate special topics courses that are approved for credit in the criminal investigations certificate program.

3. At least 12 credit hours must be taken in-residence at ASU.

4. A "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all core and elective course work required for the certificate.

5. Upper-division course work may not be used to satisfy the requirements of both a major and the certificate. Thus, if any elective courses in the certificate program are being used to satisfy the requirements of a major, different elective courses must be taken to satisfy the requirements of the certificate program. For example, students majoring in criminology and criminal justice may not use CRJ 433, CRJ 434, CRJ 435, CRJ 484 or CRJ 494 to satisfy the requirements of the major and the certificate in criminal investigations. Similarly, students majoring in forensic science may not use FOR 350, FOR 410 or FOR 484 to satisfy the requirements of the major and the certificate in criminal investigations.

Prerequisite Information

CRJ 100 Introduction to Criminal Justice, SB (3) is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in CRJ 210, CRJ 211, CRJ 433, CRJ 434, CRJ 435, CRJ 484 and CRJ 494.

ACO 100 All About Data: Design, Query, and Visualization, CS (3) is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in FOR 350 Computer Forensics.

Either FOR 286 Principles of Forensic Science (3) or the two semester sequence in FOR 105 and FOR 106 is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in FOR 410 Professional Practices in Forensic Science, L (3). ENG 102 or 105 or 108 are also prerequisites for FOR 410.

CRJ 284 Professional Growth in Criminal Justice (3) is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in CRJ 484 Internship.

The completion of at least 45 credit hours is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in FOR 484 Internship.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students must complete the following prerequisite courses with a grade of "C" or higher (scale is 4.00 = "A") in order to be admitted to the certificate program. These courses may be taken in-residence at ASU or may be transferred in from other institutions, including community colleges.

The following prerequisite courses are required for admission to the certificate program:

For students majoring in the social sciences, humanities or the arts:*

FOR 105 Physical Evidence and the Crime Scene, SQ (4) and

FOR 106 Biology Behind the Crime Scene, SQ (4)

For students majoring in the natural sciences:*

FOR 286 Principles of Forensic Science (4)

* Neither FOR 105 nor FOR 106 have any prerequisites. These courses are designed for students majoring in the social sciences, humanities or arts to meet the natural science requirement of ASU's General Studies program. Thus, students not majoring in the natural sciences who wish to declare the certificate program in criminal investigations must complete the two-course sequence in FOR 105 and FOR 106. In contrast, students majoring in the natural sciences (including forensic science) should not take FOR 105 and FOR 106; they need only complete FOR 286: Principles of Forensic Science, which has prerequisite requirements of BIO 181, BIO 182, CHM 113 and CHM 116.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Cryptology Certificate (LACRYCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in cryptology is designed to provide a strong foundation in the mathematical topics that are most applicable to modern cryptosystems. It also provides specialized knowledge required to understand and work in the field of mathematical cryptology.

Program Requirements:

This certificate requires 18 credit hours. Grades of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required for all courses.

Required Courses

MAT 440: Group Theory or MAT 444: Intermediate Abstract Algebra (3)

MAT 445: Theory of Numbers (3)

MAT 447: Cryptography I (3)

MAT 448: Cryptography II (3)

Electives (6 credit hours; select two courses*):

MAT 415: Introduction to Combinatorics (3)

MAT 416: Introduction to Graph Theory (3)

MAT 441: Ring Theory (3)

STP 421: Probability (3)

STP 427: Mathematical Statistics (3)

*Students may substitute an approved cryptography-related internship for 3 credit hours of elective work.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

This program has additional admission requirements; students should see a college advisor for details. Applicants should be in good academic standing with "B" or better (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) in MAT 300 Mathematical Structures (3) or the equivalent.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The certificate program in desert food production equips students interested in producing foods locally with the knowledge and skills necessary to grow edible plants and to navigate the challenges unique to desert climates. Coursework in the program emphasizes organic food production, sustainable horticultural technologies, green waste reduction, water conservation, maintaining biodiversity and biological cycles and enhancing soil quality. Students will gain marketable skills that will enable them to participate in the growing trend of producing and supporting the consumption of local foods.

Program Requirements:

The desert food production certificate requires a minimum of 18 credit hours.

Additional certificate requirements:

Only courses in which a student receives a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet the certificate requirements.

No more than two credit hours of ABS 484 Internship may be counted toward the certificate requirements.

Four credit hours of certificate electives must be from upper-division courses.

Required Courses: (12 credit hours)

ABS 260: Fundamentals of Sustainable Horticulture (SG) (4)

ABS 368: Plant Propagation (3)

ABS 460: Organic Gardening (2)

ABS 464: Desert Horticulture (3)

Elective Course Options: (6 credit hours)

ABS 225: Soils (SQ) (3)

ABS 226: Soils Laboratory (SQ) (1)

ABS 360: Southwest Home Gardening (2)

ABS 462: Greenhouse/Nursery Management (4)
ABS 484: Internship (2)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Majors Ineligible to Add this Certificate: None

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

This certificate is open to students in any major. Students should contact an advisor in the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts for more information.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Digital Culture Certificate (HIDGCCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The digital culture certificate program in the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts focuses on the creative exploration of how new media is influencing our culture, or rather the way we live, learn, create and communicate. Pursuing the digital culture certificate will allow students to enhance their program of study with integrated, transdisciplinary training in creative processes and technical skills in new media with cultural applications.

The digital culture curriculum is outcomes-based rather than course sequence-based. The curriculum uses an innovative proficiency-based network to connect courses across academic disciplines, instead of traditional methods such as course prerequisites. Proficiencies in the curriculum identify common generalized learning outcomes across disciplines participating in the initiative.

Program Requirements:

The digital culture certificate requires 18 credit hours (12 upper-division) in three areas.

A minimum grade of a "C" (2.00) and an overall GPA of 3.00 is required in all classes in the certificate program. Courses in the certificate program may not be used as part of a major. All upper-division certificate course work must be taken at ASU.

Required Courses

AME 111: Introduction to Digital Culture (CS) (3)
AME 230: Programming for the Media Arts (CS) (3)

Digital Culture Studies (Choose 3 credit hours from this list.)

AME 310: Media Literacies and Composition (3)
AME 320: Motion Capture for Integrative Systems (3)
AME 330: Digital-Physical Systems (3)
AME 340: Compositional and Computational Principles for Media Arts (3)
AME 394: Media Theatre (3)
AME 410: Interactive Materials (3)
AME 430: Mac Development for Media Arts (3)
AME 435: Mobile Development (3)

AME 444: Media Installations (3)
AME 470: Programming for Social and Interactive Media (3)
AME 494: Animating Virtual Worlds (3)
AME 494: Rapid Prototyping through Somatic Research (3)
ANP 394: Digital Modeling and Fabrication (3)
PSY 324: Memory and Cognition (3)

Digital Media - Media Arts and Design (Choose 6 credit hours from this list.)

ART 494: Visual Prototyping (3)
CSE 394: Data Struct, Analysis & Ret for Digital Culture (3)
EEE 307: Signal Processing for Digital Culture (3)
FMP 394: Non-Linear Editing for Film and Media (3)
MDC 311: Composing and Performing for Hybrid Ensembles (3)

Capstone

AME 485: Digital Culture Capstone I (3)

Generous substitution rules allow for course flexibility. Students receiving the digital culture certificate can petition to substitute up to six credit hours. Three credit hours can come from any course related to digital culture through courses offered by any ASU unit on any ASU campus, including the interdisciplinary arts and performance program on the West campus and the film and media studies program on the Tempe campus. Courses may include any on the list of related subjects and substitutions (shown below) or courses with comparable content.

The other three substitution hours can be achieved through the following path:

The three-hour media arts and design course requirement may be substituted with a three-hour course in the digital culture-related category.

Depending upon a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

For current ASU students, there is no special application process for the digital culture certificate. Students add the certificate by meeting with the academic advisor for their major and the digital culture education coordinator to develop the digital culture pathway that best meets the proficiencies for the work they are interested in pursuing. This pathway will be contingent upon the student's academic performance in 100-level coursework.

Students must meet with the digital culture academic success coordinator before enrolling in the certificate program. The coordinator and student will develop a pathway that best meets the proficiencies for the work he or she is interested in pursuing. The coordinator will review the student's previous academic work to determine which proficiencies the student has completed.

Digital culture certificate students will work with the digital culture academic success coordinator and successfully complete the required sequence of courses and proficiencies for a digital culture certificate. The digital culture academic success coordinator and the digital culture faculty committee in the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts will help to craft the best path for the student.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Diversity and Equity Studies Certificate (ASDESCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The certificate program in diversity and equity studies in the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences at the West campus, prepares students to understand diversity. Possessing skills to work effectively with diverse colleagues, clients and leaders is fundamental to competitiveness in the increasingly diverse and transnational labor market. This certificate program develops intercultural competence through gaining knowledge related to the histories, practices and perspectives of diverse groups, both local and global. Reflecting on this knowledge permits students to develop strategies to work with and through differences of gender, race, ethnicity, sexuality, age, religion and class. Integrative social sciences perspectives enable bridge-building within and across differences to redress inequalities. This certificate is valuable to those pursuing careers in medicine, law, business and management, public policy, human resources, media, government and community advocacy.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in diversity and equity studies requires a minimum of 15 credit hours (at least 12 must be upper division).

Students are encouraged to take courses that develop breadth rather than limiting their selection to courses in one particular discipline.

All 15 credit hours must be completed through the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences. A maximum of six credit hours may be shared between the certificate and a New College major.

The certificate requires three core credit hours and 12 credit hours of electives. Electives are not limited to the certificate elective list; see academic advisor prior to enrollment. A maximum of three credit hours of internship or individualized instructions may be applied toward the certificate.

Only courses in which a student received a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet certificate requirements.

Required Core Course (3 credit hours)

SBS 301: Cultural Diversity ((L or SB) & C) (3)

Elective Courses (12 credits hours; minimum 9 upper-division)

Students will select 12 elective credit hours from course work related to diversity and equity studies. Selected courses must come from at least two of the following prefixes: ASB, POS, SBS or SOC.

ASB 211: Women in Other Cultures ((HU or SB) & G) (3)

ASB 311: Principles of Social Anthropology (SB & G & H) (3)

ASB 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or POS 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or SBS 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or SOC 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) (3)

East Asian Studies Certificate (LAEASCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate in East Asian studies, which can supplement a bachelor's degree or act as a stand-alone program, demonstrates a student's knowledge of an Asian language as well as Asian history, art, culture and society. The certificate program helps prepare students for admission to graduate programs in Asian area studies, an academic discipline with an Asian focus, or professional programs in international law or business. Recent Asian studies graduates have gone on to enter medical school, law school, MBA programs or PhD programs.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in East Asian studies requires 24 credit hours of course work, in addition to proficiency in an East Asian language. At least 15 credit hours must be upper-division. At least six upper-division hours must be in courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. A minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) is required for each course that is used to fulfill the certificate requirements.

Language Requirement

CHI 201: Second-Year Chinese I (G) AND CHI 202: Second-Year Chinese II (G) or JPN 201: Second-Year Japanese I (G) AND JPN 202: Second-Year Japanese II (G) or KOR 201: Second-Year Korean I (G) AND KOR 202: Second-Year Korean II (G) (10)

Students must demonstrate proficiency in Chinese, Japanese or Korean at the intermediate level by course work or exam. Students may also satisfy the language requirement with one year of study abroad at the intermediate level.

Approved ElectivesEast Asia Electives (9)

Students choose East Asia electives from any of the course lists below. A maximum of six credit hours of East Asia electives may be from languages and literature.

Upper Division Disciplinary Electives (15)

The upper division disciplinary electives must be in disciplines outside of languages and literature. At least three different disciplines must be represented. Available disciplines are art history, cultural geography, global studies, history, political science and religious studies. Cross-listed courses will only apply to the certificate under one discipline; students may choose the discipline that is most advantageous.

Energy and Sustainability Certificate (SUESUCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe

Description:

The transdisciplinary certificate examines current energy systems and what would be required to create a sustainable energy future. Students begin with an overview of how energy affects peoples' lives, the basic science and methods of energy production, and a full overview of energy policy options. Students then select additional energy courses from across many disciplines, depending on their specific interests.

An understanding of energy is increasingly important for jobs related to environmental quality, national security and the efficient functioning of cities. This certificate helps students enhance their understanding of the methods by which energy is generated and distributed as well as the associated sustainability issues. Students analyze social and policy dimensions of energy systems and infrastructure, and they may tailor the certificate around their unique interests in energy with a variety of electives, representing a broad array of academic disciplines. The breadth of their energy knowledge is enriched by taking courses outside their primary area of study.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in Energy and Sustainability consists of 15 credit hours, at least 12 of which must be upper division.

Required Core Courses

SOS 171: The Thread of Energy (SB & G) or GCU 171: The Thread of Energy (SB & G) (3)
SOS 314: Basic Energy Science (3)
SOS 315: Energy Policy (3)

Energy Elective Courses (6 credit hours)

ALT 360: Renewable Energy Technologies: Fundamentals and Integration (3)
ALT 412: Village Energy Systems (3)
CHM 394: Chemistry, Energy, and Society (3)
EGR 371: Best Practices for Humanitarian Engineering (3)
EGR 476: Energy Infrastructures (3)
ERM 494: Energy Economics (3)
FIS 494: Climate Change, Energy, and Social Justice (3)
GCU 364: Energy in the Global Arena (SB & G) (3)
GCU 442: Geographical Analysis of Transportation (SB) (3)
GLG 304: Minerals, Energy, and Society (3)
GPH 405: Energy and Environment (3)
HST 306: Energy History ((HU or SB) & H) (3)
JUS 332: Politics of Energy Policy and Justice (3)
JUS 444: Environment and Justice (L & C) (3)

PHY 498: The Science of Sustainable Energy (3)
POS 394: Global Environmental Politics (3)
PUP 430: Transportation Planning and the Environment (3)

SOS 394: Introduction to Solar Energy for Non-Engineers (3)
SOS 394: Sustainability in Organizations and Public Policy (3)
SOS 435: U.S. Energy: Pathways to Sustainability (3)
SOS 494: Creating Living Buildings (3)
SOS 494: GHG Emissions Inventory (3)
SOS 494: Renewable Energy (3)
STS 317: Science, Technology, and Global Engagement (SB & G) (3)
STS 329: Cultivating Technology in Newly Industrializing Countries (SB & G) (3)
STS 332: Global Issues in Science and Technology (SB) (3)
TEM 450: Design for the Developing World (3)

HST 306 and any 394, 494 or 498 courses must be taken with the specific course title/topic indicated above.

Some energy elective courses have prerequisites. Any and all prerequisites must be met in order to select and enroll in those courses.

Some energy elective courses are more technical in nature, which may require additional math and science knowledge or prerequisites.

Energy elective courses are not limited to courses from this list only. Other courses on energy may be offered (special topics, etc.). Students may request to have those approved as an elective for this certificate by submitting a School of Sustainability standards petition:

https://students.asu.edu/College_Standards_Petitions. Completed petitions may be submitted directly to sosadvising@asu.edu.

Students must earn a grade of "C" or better in all upper-division courses.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students who wish to declare a certificate in energy and sustainability should make an appointment with a School of Sustainability advisor. To be eligible, students must have a 3.00 cumulative GPA.

Advising is by appointment only, scheduled through the following website: https://webapp4.asu.edu/advsched/?acad_org=CSS (https://webapp4.asu.edu/advsched/?acad_org=CSS).

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Entrepreneurship and Innovation Certificate (BAKEICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program is comprised of three university-wide core courses followed by two courses within a student's disciplinary college. Individual colleges will be encouraged to offer a capstone course as part of the program. Beyond topics related specifically to entrepreneurial business practices, courses include such topics as social entrepreneurship, arts entrepreneurship, idea generation and storytelling as additional perspectives for the student entrepreneur.

Students completing the certificate in entrepreneurship and innovation have their achievements recognized on their transcripts. Career services markets the certificate to potential employers, highlighting the innovative skills that students with this designation can offer.

Program Requirements:

Required Core Courses

ENT 305: Principles of Entrepreneurship (3)

ENT 340: Creativity and Innovation (L or HU) or TEM 230: Creativity and Business Innovation (3)

ENT 360: Entrepreneurship and Value Creation or TEM 400: Technology Entrepreneurship (3)

Capstone Experience: (at least 6 credit hours)

Upper Division Capstone Experience Course (#trackgroup) (6)

1. It is the student's responsibility to check the prerequisites required by courses in their discipline.
2. Capstone courses will be designated and approved by individual disciplinary colleges.
3. Capstone courses will consist of existing courses or new courses created by departments.

Students must earn a "B" (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better in each course to accumulate 15 credit hours for the certificate.

Film and Video Studies Certificate (ASVIDCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The certificate program in film and video studies, offered by the School of Humanities, Arts and Cultural Studies, explores film theory and the practice of the moving image. Through this interdisciplinary program, students have an opportunity to develop their interests, skills and understanding of the forms, channels, technologies and histories of the media arts. Coursework helps students become more astute critics of film and media arts. Students learn about the history of film, television and video arts as well as their place in social, cultural and political expression. This program also helps students strengthen their critical-thinking skills through an analysis of the ongoing philosophical, aesthetic, political and technological debates about film, media and video. Through this program, students will gain valuable skills for future careers or graduate study in areas such as video and film production, film studies, media studies or digital design.

The project should reflect the integration of course work with creative initiative to generate a product that stands alone as a piece of original work. For the Film Studies Emphasis, the project will focus on an intellectual analysis of some dimension of film products, reception, institutions, economics, and so forth.

For the Media and Video Studies Emphasis, the project may be intellectual or creative (performance or production) in nature. Projects will be examined and evaluated by at least one faculty member involved in the film and video studies certificate.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The certificate in film and video studies is open to all ASU undergraduate majors. Students wishing to pursue this certificate should consult an academic advisor in the School of Humanities, Arts and Cultural Studies to ensure the appropriate set of courses is taken and the required paperwork is submitted.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Food System Sustainability Certificate (SUFSUCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Food systems are particularly important for human societies to sustain; however, these systems are particularly vulnerable to multiple threats. Many students from a wide variety of disciplines are interested in food systems, especially as food and sustainability become increasingly relevant issues to employers in fields across the public and private sectors.

This certificate allows ASU students to take advantage of the diversity of courses offered that address challenges to food system sustainability. The certificate encourages students to cover a breadth of topics and perspectives related to food system issues while providing the opportunity to focus on particular skills and approaches suitable for their career paths. Career paths can range from agriculture to marketing and retail to policy or ethics. This certificate offers an innovative and exciting approach to the challenges of food system sustainability. Due to the transdisciplinary nature of the certificate, many courses may be found across all four ASU campuses, allowing students to choose both the focus area and location of study that best fits their needs.

The knowledge, competencies and skills students will have upon completion of this certificate include the ability to identify food system drivers, activities, actors and outcomes at different spatial scales and the capacity to assess the primary social, economic and environmental drivers and outcomes associated with food system sustainability challenges.

Students will also acquire the ability to apply one or more of the following analytical skills or approaches to the development of food system sustainability solutions: cultural and social analysis, alternative agricultural design and practice, analysis of biophysical processes and environmental services, urban planning and policy, marketing and entrepreneurial development, sustainability assessment, and consumer preference and behavior.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in Food System Sustainability consists of 15 credit hours, at least 12 of which must be upper-division.

There are no prerequisites for SOS 117; however, depending upon a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Required Course

Games and Impact Certificate (TEGIMCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in games and impact is intended for undergraduates with a desire to become change agents in their current and future areas of interest, study and training. The certificate provides a solid grounding in the theory, design and use of games as tools for effecting change in education, health and social justice, among other fields. For this reason, it is appropriate for students in a wide range of majors, including students interested in design and programming.

Students will study the ethics of design and its consequences, both intended and unintended; how games can lead to social change by improving understanding of complex global systems; and, transforming conflict and building skills in problem recognition and creative solution design. Certificate students will work on real games, alongside experts and clients, and learn how to design, test and evaluate their impact in real-world environments.

Program Requirements:

A minimum of 15 credit hours is required. A grade of "C" or higher is required in all courses taken for the certificate.

Required Courses

EDT 210: Games, Technology and Society (3)

EDT 461: Understanding Games for Impact (3)

EDT 462: Designing Games for Impact (3)

Notes: *Students may opt to complete an equivalent upper-division course on game design that is selected in consultation with an advisor.

EDT 463: Games for Impact: The Full Life Cycle (3)

EDT 494: Capstone Project (3)

Notes: The capstone project will be designed in consultation with the certificate coordinator.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

History and Philosophy of Science Certificate (LAHPSCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The School of Life Sciences offers an undergraduate certificate in the history and philosophy of science. This program is designed to give students an understanding of both traditional philosophical issues surrounding science and the historical development of concrete scientific theories and ideas.

Philosophical questions about how we understand nature through science and how scientific claims gain authority are enriched when they are considered in a historical context. Such philosophical and historical study also often includes the examination of contemporary sciences and their place within the larger society, including the study of bioethics, policy and law.

This certificate is a valuable addition for students in the sciences or the humanities. It crosses disciplines to help students engage in unfamiliar and familiar paths of inquiry in new and interesting ways.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 18 credit hours from the HPS and PHI prefixes. All courses counting toward the certificate must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Required Course

PHI 314: Philosophy of Science (HU) (3)

Electives (15 hours) from the following:

At least nine credit hours must be taken in HPS courses.

PHI 328: History of Ancient Philosophy (HU & H) (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/catalog/courselist?s=HPS&l=upperdivision&t=2177&hon=F>) > HPS Upper Division Elective (9)

PHI 329: History of Modern Philosophy (HU & H) (3)

PHI 330: Theory of Knowledge (HU) (3)

PHI 403: Contemporary Analytic Philosophy (HU) (3)

Consult with an academic advisor in the School of Life Sciences for additional elective options.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Satisfactory completion of the human rights certificate requires students to participate in either a for-credit internship with a human rights organization in the U.S. or abroad, or in a Research Experience with Undergraduates (REU).

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students who have attained 30 credit hours in any undergraduate degree program in any field at ASU are eligible for admission to the certificate in human rights. There are no formal admission procedures to begin certificate coursework, but students should contact an academic advisor in the School of Social Transformation as soon as they decide to begin pursuing the certificate.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Informatics Certificate (ESCPICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in informatics teaches students to use computer technology to gather, synthesize, store, visualize and interpret information. These skills are critical to a broad range of disciplines. This program provides students with an understanding of the capabilities and technologies of informatics as it applies to domain-specific problems in their field of study.

Students completing this program are able to understand and use methods for the basic computational principles behind the operation of:

- ☐ • communication, networking and interaction
- ☐ • decision-making and problem-solving
- ☐ • modeling, inference and visualization
- ☐ • representing, creating and running routine activities
- ☐ • storing, indexing and retrieving information

Graduates should be in high demand within the software industry, but also in government, education, science, medicine and other fields that make use of computer technology. Students with the applied and user-oriented focus of the certificate will be attractive to such employers.

Program Requirements:

This program requires 21 credit hours of course work. Students will take 15 credit hours of required courses and will select six credit hours of elective course work. The certificate requires at least 12 credit hours of upper-division course work.

Required Courses:

CPI 101: Introduction to Informatics (CS) (3)

CPI 200: Mathematical Foundations of Informatics (MA) (3)

CPI 220: Applied Data Structures and Algorithms (3)

CPI 350: Evaluation of Informatics Systems (3)

IEE 380: Probability and Statistics for Engineering Problem Solving (CS) or STP 420: Introductory Applied Statistics (CS) (3)

Elective Courses (6 Credit Hours):

ART 435: Foundry Research Methods (3)

BIO 355: Introduction to Computational Molecular Biology (CS) (3)

CIS 300: Web Design and Development (3)

CPI 460: Intelligent Interactive Instructional Systems (3)

CPI 494: Special Topics (3)

ENG 374: Technical Editing (3)

SOC 334: Technology and Society (L or SB) (3)

STS 306: Social Effects of Science and Technology (SB) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The undergraduate certificate in informatics is available to all students who are in good standing at ASU and may be used by interdisciplinary studies BA students as part of their degree program. Students need to submit an undergraduate certificate form to the School of Computing, Informatics and Decision Systems Engineering Academic Advising Center located in BYENG, room 225. This form is available on the registrar's website. Interdisciplinary studies students need to contact their advisor to add the informatics concentration to their degree program.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Innovation for Impact Certificate (FIIFICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

This certificate program will enable students to cultivate the knowledge, skills and critical dispositions necessary to leverage the power of innovation to achieve personally meaningful and socially significant impact. It is grounded in the belief that each of us can do great things. This program will provide tools and concepts to synthesize research from courses across disciplines in social sciences, humanities, natural sciences and engineering — from across the university as well as across the globe. Students will identify a problematic condition or aspirational future and work with peers, mentors and the community to produce innovations that cultivate a better future for society.

Program Requirements:

FIS 201: Innovation in Society (H) (3)

FIS 305: Ways of Knowing (L) (3)

FIS 307: Navigating Futures (SB) (3)

FIS 371: Innovation for Impact: Impact Journey (1)

FIS 372: Innovation for Impact: Inquiry Journey (1)

FIS 373: Innovation for Impact: Innovation Journey (1)

FIS 481: Innovation for Impact: Application Journey (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Any student admitted to study at ASU may complete a certificate. To apply to the university, please complete the Admission Services online application. Students should contact the School for Innovation in Society for more information about completing the certificate program.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. International Business Certificate (BAIBSCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Students can expand their horizons and opportunities by learning about the global economy. The certificate program is designed to:

- ☐ • develop competence in a foreign language
- ☐ • develop sensitivity to foreign cultures
- ☐ • provide an awareness of global social processes
- ☐ • provide an understanding of international business environments, principles and operations

The W. P. Carey School of Business has partnerships with universities all over the world, so students can experience new cultures, visit new places, and build intercultural and language skills. International internships also are offered in conjunction with the ASU Study Abroad Office.

Program Requirements:

This certificate program requires a minimum of 18 credit hours (at least 12 credit hours must be upper division).

All business course work must be completed through the W. P. Carey School of Business or through an approved ASU international study program.

Only courses in which a student receives a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet the certificate requirements, and an overall certificate GPA of at least 2.50 must be earned.

Students must meet all course prerequisites and requirements as listed in the ASU catalog. Requirements must be met within one year after degree conferral date. Depending upon a student's undergraduate program of study, additional courses may need to be completed as prerequisites in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

International Business Core Course (3 credit hrs)

MGT 302: Principles of International Business (G) or ECN 306: Survey of International Economics (SB & G) (3)

A. International Business Electives (6 credit hrs)

ECN 331: Economics of the European Economic Union (SB & G) (3)

ECN 335: South Asia and the World Economy (SB & G) (3)

ECN 360: Economic Development (SB & G) (3)

ECN 365: Economics of Russia and Eastern Europe (SB & G) (3)

ECN 436: International Trade Theory (SB & G) (3)

ECN 438: International Monetary Economics (SB & G) (3)

MKT 425: Global Marketing Management (G) (3)

MGT 459: International Management (G) (3)

MGT 425: Global Human Resources (3)

SCM 463: Global Supply Chain Management (G) (3)

*300+ level WPC-prefixed courses earned on a sponsored ASU Study Abroad program may be applied toward the IBC elective area, per approval of the international programs coordinator. Courses applied toward the W. P. Carey business core cannot be used toward the IBC elective area.

B. Nonbusiness Global Awareness Course Work (9 credit hrs)

Nonbusiness Global Awareness Course Work (#trackgroup) (9)

Notes: These hours may be satisfied by any combination of the following:

1. Students can choose any of the university-designated nonbusiness global awareness ("G") courses.

2. One course must be upper-division to meet the 12 upper-division hours requirement.

3. Recommended: It is recommended to choose courses related to the area of study abroad experience. Additional courses may be approved by the international program coordinator.

4. Nonbusiness global awareness hours may also be satisfied by:

* An ASU or W. P. Carey School of Business education abroad program earning six credit hours or more fulfills six of the credit hours of nonbusiness global requirements.

* An ASU or W. P. Carey School of Business education abroad program earning three credit hours fulfills three of the credit hours of nonbusiness global requirements.

C. Foreign Language Proficiency

Completion of one year (two semesters) of the same foreign language at the college level.

Completion of one semester of the equivalent of 101- and 102-level course work.

Completion of two years of the same foreign language in high school with a minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale).

Documentation of a proficiency test confirming preparedness to start at least the second year of a foreign language (201 level or above).

A student whose native language is not English may have this requirement waived.

D. International Study Experience

The certificate program requires students to participate in an ASU Study Abroad Office sponsored program. Students cannot use independent non-sponsored programs to fulfill this requirement. Sponsored programs can be found on the Study Abroad Office website at <https://mystudyabroad.asu.edu/>.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The certificate application is accessed and submitted through Advising SOS: <https://wpcarey.asu.edu/SOS> (<https://wpcarey.asu.edu/SOS>).

Students should contact the department for more information.

For disclosure information on the U.S. Department of Education Gainful Employment Program, students should see

International Cinema Certificate (LAICINCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The power of international cinema lies in its ability to underscore national differences and engage diverse viewpoints.

The certificate program in international cinema provides undergraduates with the means to explore and understand the role that international film plays in highlighting cultural diversity, reflecting the sociocultural, political and economic currents of the period and cultural setting depicted and calling into question an accepted idea of the dominance of Hollywood film.

The certificate provides an integrated pathway through the variety of international film courses already offered in the School of International Letters and Cultures. It explores facets of international film history and production often not covered by American programs in film studies and allows students majoring in a second language the opportunity to explore a particular culture's filmic heritage and avenues for comparative analysis between the filmic heritage of two or more cultures. Students majoring in other areas can encounter visual narratives different from their own and connect international cinema to their own respective experiences.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 18 credit hours of upper-division course work. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Required Core Course (3 credit hours):

SLC 440: Film Theory and Criticism (HU) (3)

Elective Courses (15 credit hours)

CHI 345: Chinese Film and Civilization (3)

FMS 426: Films of India (3)

FMS 427: Identity and World Film (3)

FMS 430: Artists in Film: Artists' Biopics (3)

FMS 441: Global Cinema (HU & G) (3)

FRE 325: French Language and Culture Through Film (3)

GER 445: The Holocaust in German-Mediated Memory (3)

GER 446: Weimar-Era German Film (3)

ITA 420: Italian Cinema (3)

KOR 347: Korean Film and Literature (HU) (3)

RUS 424: Tolstoy and War and Peace in Russian Literature and Cinema (L or HU) (3)

SLC 450: Experimental Narrative (3)

THE 404: World Cinema (G) (3)

THE 422: Latina and Latino Theatre and Film (HU & C) (3)

Additional upper-division elective courses may be approved by the coordinator of the certificate program.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Degree students: ASU students in sophomore standing or above, with at least a 2.50 GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in any degree program will be eligible for the international cinema certificate program. Admission to the certificate program will be approved by the certificate coordinator in consultation with advisors.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Korean Studies Certificate (LAKORCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate in Korean studies aims to train and produce students who are linguistically able and culturally informed. The program consists of two major components. The first is to build students' Korean language proficiency in the areas of speaking, listening, reading and writing. The second is to offer students a broad range of knowledge of the culture, literature, history, art and religions of Korea. The certificate allows students to focus on Korean studies.

The program will enrich students' perspectives on different cultures and societies at the intellectual level and also equip them with practical knowledge of Korea that will benefit careers in various professions, including academia, government work, international trade, nongovernmental organizations and translation.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in Korean studies requires a minimum of 22 credit hours, at least 12 of which must be completed at the upper-division level. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Required Courses

KOR 101: First-Year Korean I AND KOR 102: First-Year Korean II or KOR 201: Second-Year Korean I (G) AND KOR 202: Second-Year Korean II (G) (10)

Course substitutions may be permitted for heritage speakers and other advanced speakers of the Korean language based on their Korean language proficiency level as determined by the Korean Placement Test.

KOR 321: Korean Literature in Translation (3)

KOR 347: Korean Film and Literature (HU) (3)

KOR 350: Women of Korea (H) (3)

KOR 354: Religions of Korea (HU) (3)

Additional courses may be approved in consultation with an academic advisor in the School of International Letters and Cultures or the coordinator of the certificate. The completion of the requirements will be reviewed both by the students' designated advisors and the coordinator of the program.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

ASU students admitted to a degree program in any field of study would be eligible for the Korean studies certificate program. Students should contact the School of International Letters and Cultures for more information about completing the certificate.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Latin American Studies Certificate (LALASCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The Latin American studies certificate program is designed to give students an understanding of the culture, economies, political structures and history of Latin American nations. The program combines six courses across disciplinary boundaries to provide a diverse perspective of the Latin American experience. The Department of Economics, the School of Geographical Sciences and Urban Planning, the School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies, the School of Politics and Global Studies, the School of Human Evolution and Social Change, the School of International Letters and Cultures (Spanish and Portuguese) and the School of Transborder Studies offer courses that comprise the transdisciplinary certificate.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires a minimum of 18 credit hours of Latin American Studies content coursework. At least 12 upper-division credit hours must be completed from course work offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Language Requirement

Language instruction courses dealing with Spanish and Portuguese conversation and composition cannot be used to satisfy the content course requirement. While students are encouraged to enroll in language instruction courses (i.e., conversation and composition) above the 313 level, they cannot apply such course work to the Latin American studies certificate course requirements.

Students must demonstrate Spanish or Portuguese proficiency through the 313 level of conversation and composition. The language proficiency requirement may be waived for native speakers or those with in-field experience equivalent to SPA 313 or POR 313.

Latin American Content Course Requirements

Students will take 18 upper-division credit hours (six courses) from the list of undergraduate Latin American content courses. Students are required to select nine credit hours (three courses) from within their major and nine credit hours (three courses) outside their major.

Leadership and Ethics Certificate (PPLDECERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The certificate in leadership and ethics is designed for undergraduate students who are interested in developing leadership skills or wish to enhance their degree in an existing major at ASU or BA in interdisciplinary students who seek to combine certificates with their degree, and it is also for working adults who may wish to further their education yet may not be looking for a degree program.

The certificate program provides a catalyst for students to become ethical leaders of organizational and community change. This certificate is designed to explore the relationship between leadership and the capacity for individuals to assume responsibility for their actions and to act with a sense of ethics and integrity. It focuses on understanding the broad transdisciplinary field of leadership and its application to various elements of society and community, and it prepares individuals for positions of leadership and responsibility in the university, in student organizations, in their communities and throughout their careers in business, government and society.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in leadership and ethics requires four core courses (12 credit hours), including a leadership capstone experience, plus one elective discipline-based course in leadership or ethics (3 credit hours). The three credit hours of elective course work may be selected from an approved list of elective classes or upon the recommendation of the department.

All courses applied to the certificate must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Core Courses

PAF 311: Leadership and Change (SB) (3)
 PAF 410: Building Leadership Skills (SB) (3)
 PAF 421: Leadership Capstone (3)
 PAF 460: Public Service Ethics (3)

All core courses and the leadership capstone must be taken at Arizona State University. Any course substitutions for the certificate are at the discretion of the School of Public Affairs.

Elective Course (choose one from the following list):

BUS 497: Honors Colloquium or HON 497: Honors Colloquium (3)

COM 430: Leadership in Group Communication (3)

MGT 300: Organization and Management Leadership (3)

NLM 430: Managing Nonprofit Organizations (L) (3)

PAF 420: Public Leadership (3)

POS 314: The American Presidency (SB) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students are also encouraged to schedule an appointment with the undergraduate academic advisor in the School of Public Affairs.

Undergraduate Students Currently Enrolled at ASU

Current students interested in earning the certificate must complete a request to add an undergraduate certificate and return it to the undergraduate academic advisor in the School of Public Affairs at the University Center on the Downtown Phoenix campus. Students may begin taking courses before they formally register for the certificate; however, they are encouraged to complete the paperwork as soon as possible.

Download the request to add an undergraduate certificate at <https://students.asu.edu/forms/undergraduate-certificate> (<https://students.asu.edu/forms/undergraduate-certificate>).

Individuals Not Currently Enrolled at ASU

Once students have been admitted, they are eligible to enroll in courses to complete the certificate program.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Certificate (PPLGBTCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The undergraduate certificate in lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender studies is offered by the Committee on Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Studies, administered through the College of Public Service and Community Solutions. Advising is provided through the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts. Lesbians, gay men, bisexuals and transgendered people play important roles as colleagues, clients, parents, children, siblings, neighbors, employees, employers, religious leaders and friends. Given the increasing visibility and changing political climate for LGBTQ people in the United States, all students, not only those who identify themselves as gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender, are served well by learning about the histories, communities and contemporary social issues regarding people from LGBTQ backgrounds.

The educational experience is enhanced when students are introduced to complex intersections between and among sexual, racial, ethnic, religious, geographic and national identities. The philosophy of this certificate program is to promote intellectual and pedagogical diversity as one of the university's greatest assets, and this is done, in part, by instilling in students a sensitivity to cultures different from their own and through careful analysis of the self in historical, artistic and sociocultural contexts.

The goals of the certificate program are to give students:

- ☐ • knowledge about the history, evolution of and current issues facing the LGBTQ community
- ☐ • practical experience utilizing coursework knowledge in the community through an internship or community service project
- ☐ • theoretical perspectives on heterosexuality as a presumptive sexual identity
- ☐ • an understanding of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender studies as an academic area of inquiry
- ☐ • an understanding of community politics, dynamics and conflicts
- ☐ • use-inspired education that culminates in a public presentation

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 15 credit hours; a minimum of 12 must be upper-division.

Power and Society Certificate (ASPWSOCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The certificate program in power and society in the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences at the West campus prepares students to think critically and practically about the relationship between power and society. Courses in the program use multiple perspectives to explore the sources, exercise and consequences of power across a variety of social and historical settings. The certificate program is recommended for students with academic or career interests in politics, government, economics, organizing and advocacy, public affairs and public policy, journalism, social work, human rights, social justice, education and sustainability.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in power and society requires a minimum of 15 credit hours (at least 12 must be upper division). Students are encouraged to take courses that develop breadth rather than limiting their selection to courses in one particular discipline.

All 15 credit hours must be completed through the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences. A maximum of six credit hours may be shared between the certificate and a New College major.

The certificate requires three core credit hours and 12 credit hours of electives. Electives are not limited to the certificate elective list; see academic advisor prior to enrollment. A maximum of three credit hours of individualized instruction or internship may be applied toward the certificate.

Only courses in which a student received a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet the certificate requirements.

Required Core Course (3 credit hours; select one course)

POS 335: Power and American Democracy or SBS 335: Power and American Democracy (3)

SOC 456: Political Sociology (3)

Elective Courses (12 credits hours; minimum 9 upper-division)

Students will select 12 credit hours from relevant courses on power and society. Selected courses must come from at least two of the following prefixes to develop breadth across disciplines: ASB, POS, SBS or SOC.

ASB 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or POS 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or SBS 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) or SOC 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) (3)

Religion and Conflict Certificate (LARELCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate will be of particular interest to students pursuing careers in journalism, law, policy work, diplomacy, the military, public advocacy, publishing, education, ministry or other fields in which an enhanced understanding of religion and conflict is becoming increasingly vital. A regional component provides students specific regional knowledge of how religion has been implicated in human conflict. Required coursework in at least two different regions fosters a comparative understanding of the dynamics of religion and conflict in historical and global contexts. A political component explores how religion influences or is influenced by matters of state, law, government or other dimensions of political life. A cultural component provides students with an understanding of how religion operates as a powerful force that impacts and intersects with expressions of human identity, thought and culture.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires a minimum of 18 credit hours. At least 12 credit hours must be completed in upper-division course work and at least 12 credit hours must be completed at ASU. At least six upper-division hours in the certificate must be completed in courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher is required for each course used to fulfill a certificate requirement.

Required Courses

Students must complete courses from two different geographic regions. Available regions are Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America, Middle East and United States. (6 credit hours)

Students complete one course from the cultural component list. (3 credit hours)

Students complete one course from the political component list. (3 credit hours)

Electives (6 credit hours)

Students select upper-division electives from any of the course lists below.

If a course is used to meet more than one component requirement above, additional electives may be required to meet the 18 credit hour minimum.

Humanities and Social Sciences Requirement

At least six of the 18 credit hours must be fulfilled with courses from the humanities and at least three credit hours from the social sciences.

Complete 6 credit hours from ARB OR FMS OR HEB OR HST OR REL OR SLC courses to fulfill the humanities requirement.

Complete 3 credit hours from COM OR GCU OR JUS OR POS OR SGS OR SOC OR WST courses to fulfill the social sciences requirement.

Risk Communication Certificate (ASRCMCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The certificate program in risk communication combines the strengths of the three schools within the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences: the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences; the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences; and the School of Humanities, Arts and Cultural Studies. The rising importance of the field of risk communication stems from the need to name, understand and manage physical and social risks as we are faced with increasingly challenging decisions concerning stressed social and environmental infrastructures. Proficiency in risk communication requires understanding the complex interfaces of physical, biological, psychological and social systems. The program will prepare students for a range of diverse careers in risk management, crisis communications and environmental public affairs. Specifically, students will develop expertise suited to work as risk management specialists and environmental advocates, preparing them to translate complex scientific ideas and analyses into information that can be evaluated meaningfully by all members of society.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in risk communication requires 15 credit hours. A minimum of 12 credit hours must be upper division. Eight credit hours must be unique credit hours not already being counted toward the students' bachelor degree requirements in communication or environmental science. Other electives can be chosen in consultation with an academic advisor. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the certificate must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Core Requirements

BIO 130: Introduction to Environmental Science (SQ) or ENV 201: Fundamentals of Environmental Science (3-4)

Notes: ENV 201 is required by Biology or Environmental Science majors.

COM 415: Risk Communication (3)

Elective Courses (9 credit hours; choose three courses)

COM 414: Crisis Communication (3)

COM 454: Rhetorical and Critical Approaches to Public Relations (3)

IAS 340: Bioethics (HU) or PHI 320: Bioethics (HU) (3)

IAS 407: Environmental Philosophy and Policy (L or HU) or PHI 407: Environmental Philosophy and Policy (L or HU) (3)

IAS 409: Eco-Community Ethics (HU) or PHI 409: Eco-Community Ethics (HU) (3)

LSC 362: The Human Environment (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students wishing to pursue this certificate should consult an academic advisor in the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences or the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences to ensure the appropriate set of courses is taken and the required paperwork is submitted.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Secondary Education Certificate (TESEDCERT)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West, The Gila Valley

Description:

The secondary education certificate program prepares students who wish to teach students enrolled in grades 6-12. While students develop a strong content background, the secondary education certification focuses on developing the requisite teaching knowledge and abilities to successfully teach middle or high school students. In order to integrate teacher preparation with the academic specialization, the Teachers College collaborates and communicates with academic departments throughout the university. Clinical experience and student teaching are required components of this certificate. Students who complete this certificate program will be issued an institutional recommendation for certification in Arizona. Students desiring to teach in a public school must also pass the appropriate Arizona educator exams (either the National Evaluation Series or the Arizona Educator Proficiency Assessments) in both content area and professional knowledge to be certified to teach in the state of Arizona.

The secondary education undergraduate certificate is also available for students who have earned a bachelor's degree; this will be considered a nondegree graduate pathway.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires a minimum of 30 hours.

Program Requirements

BLE 220: Foundations of Structured English Immersion (3)

SED 496: Clinical Experience III (1)

Notes: Students are required to complete a minimum of one semester of field experience which includes one full day per week in a grade 6-12 classroom.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students interested in pursuing the secondary education certificate should be enrolled as a degree-seeking undergraduate student. This program is also available to students in the Phoenix area or Gila Valley area (Morenci) who have already completed a bachelor's degree and want to be certified to teach. Students interested in this option will apply to ASU as a non-degree seeking graduate student.

Students interested in this program should have content knowledge in one of the following areas, demonstrated by having a minimum of 24 credit hours in coursework for the major or a passing score on appropriate teacher certification exam: biology, business, chemistry, Chinese (Mandarin), earth and space science, economics, English, French, general science, geography, German, history, mathematics, physics, political science or Spanish.

Students should have a valid Arizona DPS Identity Verified Print (IVP) fingerprint clearance card.

A 2.50 GPA is required to progress into the final semester of student teaching. Students should contact the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College for more information.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Description:

This undergraduate certificate program consists of a coherent set of courses that provides students with the skills necessary to teach English as a foreign language. This certificate is useful for students interested in careers in this increasingly important field. It also serves as excellent preparation for students wishing to pursue graduate studies in the Master's of Teaching English as a Second Language program at ASU or in a similar program at another institution. Note that this certificate does not certify students to teach in Arizona public schools (K-12).

Program Requirements:

The certificate program in teaching English as a second language requires a minimum of 18 credit hours, 12 of which must be completed at the upper-division level. At least 6 credit hours must be completed from courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Core

ENG 213: Introduction to the Study of Language (3)

ENG 404: Studies in Second Language Acquisition (6)

Students complete two ENG 404 courses, one in second language acquisition and one in TESOL methods.

ENG 484: TESOL Internship (3)

Electives

ENG 404: Studies in Second Language Acquisition or ENG 414: Studies in Linguistics (3)

Notes: ENG 404 must be a topic not used to satisfy required courses.

Choose one of the following:

ENG 214: English Grammar and Usage (3)

ENG 312: English in its Social Setting (L or HU or SB) (3)

ENG 313: Phonology and Morphology (3)

ENG 314: Modern Grammar (3)

ENG 413: History of English Language (HU) (3)

Course substitutions may be used with approval of an academic advisor in the Department of English before enrollment.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

For more information about the TESOL certificate, students should contact an advisor in the Department of English.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Technology Entrepreneurship Certificate (ESTNECERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Engineers and scientists around the globe launch high-tech companies to move their ideas to the market. Studies show that the majority of innovative products and services in the economy evolve from entrepreneurial ventures. By providing knowledge and skills important to the creation and leadership of such startups, the certificate program in technology entrepreneurship aims to train the founders and leaders of tomorrow's high-tech ventures. The certificate program is designed specifically for engineers. Courses are approached from the perspective of the student whose primary interest is in technological innovation, whose primary concentration is engineering and who has little or no prior business education.

Program Requirements:

Enrollment Requirements:

The qualifications for admission to the certificate program in technology entrepreneurship are having junior standing in a bachelor's degree program in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering and successful completion of the selection interview process.

The selection interview process consists of two parts: a letter of intent written by the student to the selection committee and a live interview with the selection committee, which consists of at least one faculty member, one entrepreneurship program advisory board member and one member of the regular engineering faculty.

Each selection interview is conducted according to a fixed format, with each certificate program candidate having the opportunity to respond to the same set of questions. Students are asked to contact the department for more information.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Translation Certificate (LASPACERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The translation certificate program, which focuses on Spanish and English, is designed to provide advanced training required for professional translation in both public and private sectors, preparation for the rigorous examinations required by national and international agencies, and training as an ancillary skill for professional fields such as international business, public health, medicine and law, in accordance with guidelines recommended by the American Translators Association.

Program Requirements:

The certificate program requires a minimum of 15 credit hours. At least 12 credit hours must be completed at the upper-division level and a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher is required in all courses.

Students are expected to have completed prerequisite courses including SPA 313 and SPA 314, or SPA 315 and SPA 316; and ENG 301 or SPA 412. In some cases permission will be granted to complete ENG 301 or SPA 412 in the early semesters after admission to the program.

Required Course

SLC 401: Translation Theory and Practice (3)

Required Applied Translation Courses

SLC 481: Technical and Scientific Translation (3)

SLC 482: Business and Financial Translation (3)

SLC 485: Translation of Legal Texts or SLC 486: Medical Translation (3)

Only one applied translation course is taught in any semester. Each course is only offered once in any two-year period. Students should consult with an academic advisor in the School of International Letters and Cultures and plan their studies accordingly.

Internship Requirement

SLC 484: Internship (3)

Forty credit hours of work at an external site are required to earn three credit hours. Students must complete all required courses before enrolling for an internship.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Since entry into the field of professional translation is gained through work, cultural experience and examination, the entrance requirements to this certificate program include a written proficiency examination in both the source and receptor languages at the level of completion of an advanced composition course in Spanish (SPA 412) and English (ENG 301).

Extensive work experience using Spanish and English or demonstrated bilingual writing competence in English and Spanish is also required.

Students should contact an academic advisor in the school for more information.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Undergraduate Programs

Undergraduate Degrees (Program Descriptions)

Business, W. P. Carey School of Accountancy, BS (BAACCBS)

Campus: Tempe, West

Program Description:

The School of Accountancy's undergraduate program offers two tracks during the senior year. The accounting track is followed by most students and is designed to provide a rich educational experience. The accounting master's internship is the track designed for our most highly qualified students who wish to commit to the MAcc or MTax program during the second semester of the junior year.

The internship provides a particularly rich and individualized educational experience during the senior year. It includes a number of distinct advantages for students: a full-time paid internship for credit with a participating accountancy firm, early consideration for scholarships, and students may be eligible for a GMAT waiver and a graduate application fee waiver for the MAcc or MTax program (eligibility is determined by the GPA at the time of application).

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 210 - Brief Calculus

Program Math Intensity: Moderate

Accelerated Degrees:

This degree is also offered in an accelerated format with Taxation, MTax

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior and senior years, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Admission Requirements:

General University Admission Requirements:

All students are required to meet general university admission requirements.

Freshman (<https://students.asu.edu/freshman/requirements>)

Transfer (<https://transfer.asu.edu/index.php?q=transferrequirements>)

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

Freshmen admission requirements: 1160 (prior to March 2016) or 1230 SAT Reasoning (after March 2016) OR 25 ACT score, OR graduated in the top eight percent of high school class, OR an overall high school GPA of 3.60 in ASU competency courses (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Freshmen should select an additional major when applying for admission. Additional choices may include any of the W. P. Carey business BA programs or any other degree program outside W. P. Agribusiness (Global Agribusiness), BS (AGAGBGABS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The agribusiness industry is increasingly competitive, sophisticated and global, driving demand for innovative leaders who understand the industry's unique challenges and practices. The programs offered through the highly respected Morrison School of Agribusiness and Resource Management prepares graduates for success in graduate school or a wide range of careers.

The BS in agribusiness teaches students the business of agricultural production, finance, marketing and distribution. Through a technology-rich curriculum that focuses on real-world projects, students explore global agribusiness issues such as international trade, food safety and sustainability.

The concentration in global agribusiness is an applied, industry-oriented curriculum. This concentration is specifically designed to meet the needs of the students interested in studying the business aspects of agriculture in the domestic and global economy. Students learn to analyze and manage issues involved in food manufacturing, input and output supply activities, commodity trading and food distribution.

Change of Major Requirements:

A current ASU student has no additional requirements for changing majors. Students should refer to <https://students.asu.edu/changingmajors> (<https://students.asu.edu/changingmajors>) for information about how to change a major to this program. This program is not available to students who already hold a BA, BS or MS degree in accountancy.

Career Opportunities:

Career opportunities are generally substantive and in high demand. Senior management roles for corporate accountants include Chief Financial Officer positions. Currently, more than half the CFO's at larger corporations have formal accounting training. Projecting into the future, the longer term trend is for CFO's to have extensive corporate accounting training, particularly since CFO's at public U.S. corporations personally sign the financial statements.

Typical early to mid-career positions held by corporate accountants include controllers, treasurers and vice presidents in areas like financial planning, divisional controlling, cost accounting directing, senior financial analysis and senior accounting. These positions typically report to the CFO.

Business (Global Agribusiness), BA (BABUSGAGBA)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The agribusiness industry is increasingly competitive, sophisticated and global, driving demand for innovative leaders who understand the industry's unique challenges and practices. The BA in business with a concentration in global agribusiness teaches students the business of agricultural production, finance, marketing and distribution. Through a technology-rich curriculum that focuses on real-world projects, students explore global agribusiness issues such as international trade, food safety and sustainability. The concentration is an applied, industry-oriented curriculum. It is specifically designed to meet the needs of students interested in studying the business aspects of agriculture in the domestic and global economy. Students learn to analyze and manage issues involved in food manufacturing, input and output supply activities, commodity trading and food distribution.

Business (Global Logistics Management), BA (BABUSGLBA)

Campus: West, Online

Program Description:

Logistics management focuses on integration and partnerships necessary to meet customer needs on a timely basis, with relevant and high-quality products produced and delivered in a service-effective manner. This program will train students to be strategic thinkers, excellent analysts, effective communicators and team leaders who are focused on efficiency, effectiveness and increasing revenue.

An efficient logistics management system is critical to the success of global corporations, making sure the supply of goods and services flowing through the system closely matches the demand. Logistics management professionals manage, coordinate and transport products from raw materials to the finished goods sitting on a local store shelf or offered by an online retailer. Efficient logistics is a key reason consumers can buy an ever-increasing variety of goods and services at remarkably low prices. Not surprisingly, logistics also plays a major role in the health care industry where efficient, effective delivery systems are gaining significant traction.
