Human Systems Engineering Minor (ESHSEMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The minor in human systems engineering in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering provides students with an understanding of the science of human performance and with experience using methods and tools that will enable them to apply their understanding to design and problem-solving. These skills can be used in a wide variety of domains, such as product usability, learning design, sports performance, and workplace and hospital safety.

A broad range of professions need experts in human factors to work on problems that involve an understanding of human performance. Interest areas include user experience, aviation human factors, cognitive performance, consumer psychology, transportation human factors, patient safety, effective teamwork, health psychology, learning optimization, social cognition, threat detection and sports psychology.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires 21 credit hours. All required minor courses must be passed with a "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Required Courses -- 18 credit hours

HSE 101: Introduction to Human Systems Engineering (SB) (3)

HSE 225: Human Systems Integration (3)
HSE 230: Statistics for Human Systems Research I (CS) (3)
HSE 290: Experimental Methods for Human Systems Research (L) (3)
HSE 323: Perceptual Systems (SB) or HSE 324: Applied Cognitive Science (SB) (3)
HSE 325: Human-Computer Interaction (3)

Elective Course -- 3 credit hours

HSE 422: Human Factors in Sport (3)
HSE 423: Human Factors in Transportation (3)
HSE 424: Human Automation Interaction (3)
HSE 425: Human Factors in Medical Systems (3)
HSE 426: Training and Expertise (3)
HSE 427: Designing for Learning (3)
HSE 428: Judgment and Decision Making (3)
HSE 429: Product Design and Evaluation (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Incompatible Majors: BS in human systems engineering

Innovation in Society Minor (FIFISMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor program in innovation in society equips students with the tools needed to analyze how science, technology and other social forces shape our present and future.

Students cultivate the critical thinking skills needed to develop creative strategies that steer innovation toward the needs and values of society. Students are trained to synthesize research and theory from the social sciences, humanities, natural sciences and engineering so they can develop proposals for how to build better futures. This enables students to understand the broader context of their major and helps them mesh those studies with other disciplines to develop more encompassing solutions to important problems.

Program Requirements:

Required Courses -- 15 credit hours

Integrative Social Science Minor (LSISSMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The minor program in integrative social science is designed to provide general education in the social sciences to individuals who desire exposure to the variety of theories and methods of social scientists. Individuals seeking to expand their analytical, problem solving and strategic planning skill sets benefit from this minor.

The minor is useful to engineers, technologists and other professionals whose specialized education may not have given them access to social science research theories and methodologies, though their professional activities demand knowledge of those tools.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires 18 credit hours: 15 credit hours of required courses and three credits hours of electives.

Because of their specific design for this particular minor, the 15 credits hours of required courses may not be substituted, nor may transfer hours be used to satisfy the requirements.

Required Courses -- 15 credit hours

ISS 301: Integrated Social Science Research Methods (SB) or POS 301: Empirical Political Inquiry (SB) or STS 301: Research in Science and Technology Studies (SB) (3)

ISS 302: Scope of Social Science (SB) (3)

Interior Design History Minor (ARINTMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor in interior design history is available to students interested in studying design and culture across many time periods.

The courses designated for the minor are part of the professional studies in interior design environments. The coursework introduces theories informing the professions of architecture, decorative arts and interior design while also examining cultures and history from around the globe.

Program Requirements:

A minimum of 18 credit hours (12 credit hours of which must be from the 300 or 400 level) are required for the minor. A minimum grade of "C" (2.00) is required in all classes for the minor. To enhance the understanding of the subject matter, the selected courses are sequential in nature and require certain prerequisites. Consequently, students should carefully note the semester in which any of these courses are offered.

A minimum GPA of 2.50 in minor courses is required to earn the minor in interior design history.

Required Courses -- 12 credit hours

DSC 101: Design Awareness (HU & G) (3)

INT 111: Interior Design Issues and Theories (HU) (3)

INT 310: History of Interior Design I (HU & H) (3)

INT 311: History of Interior Design II (HU & H) (3)

Interior Design History Courses -- 6 credit hours

APH 300: World Architecture I/Western Cultures (HU & H & G) (3)

INT 415: Latin American Design or INT 494: Design and Culture in Latin America (3)

INT 494: Design and Context (3)

INT 494 "Contemporary Design Issues in Europe" and INT 494 "Design and Context" are offered as part of a summer study abroad program only.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.50

Incompatible Majors: BSD in interior design

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Latin American Studies Minor (ASLASMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor program in Latin American studies offers a learner-driven model in which the student's specific interests are deepened through the study of Latin America. It is interdisciplinary and allows for flexibility in course selection while also instilling a breadth and depth of knowledge about issues surrounding Latin America.

This minor encourages cross-cultural exploration and students who pursue it are prepared for a global-minded career path, in fields as diverse as business and finance, arts and arts administration, education, nonprofit organizations, health care, the sciences, psychology, social sciences, sports, journalism, diplomacy, law enforcement and forensic science, ministry, technology, architecture and library science.

Program Requirements:

The minor in Latin American studies consists of 18 credit hours, of which 12 credit hours must be upper-division. A minimum of six upper-division credit hours must be taken from the School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies and a minimum of 12 credit hours must be completed at ASU. All courses used to satisfy the requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Core Requirements -- 6 credit hours

Materials Science and Engineering Minor (ESMSEMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The materials science and engineering minor is a program designed to give science and engineering majors an in-depth understanding of materials, including their structure, processing, properties and performance.

Program Requirements:

Students are required to take five courses and one lab (minimum of 16 credits), listed below:

Required Courses -- 12 credit hours

MSE 250: Structure and Properties of Materials (3)

MSE 355: Structure and Defects (3)

MSE 356: Structures, Properties, and Defects Lab (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/catalog/courselist?s=MSE&l=300-399&t=2207&hon=F>) > MSE 3

Elective or MSE 4 Elective (6)

Materials-related Lab Course -- 1 credit hours

MSE 451: Introduction to Materials Characterization Lab (1)

Materials-related Course -- 3 credit hours

BME 318: Biomaterials (4)

CEE 353: Civil Engineering Materials (4)

CHM 471: Solid-State Chemistry (3)

EEE 352: Properties of Electronic Materials (4)

EEE 436: Fundamentals of Solid-State Devices (3)

minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.75

Incompatible Majors: BA in interdisciplinary studies with a concentration in materials science and engineering

Other Enrollment Requirements: Students must hold sophomore status to enroll in the materials science and engineering minor. To earn the minor, students must receive a 2.50 GPA in all minor courses. Students adding the minor will also need to complete MAT 265 (MAT 270), MAT 242 (MAT 342 or 343), and CHM 114 or CHM 113 and 116.

Interested students should consult with a School for Engineering of Matter, Transport and Energy advisor to verify eligibility and to review all courses required for the minor. To schedule an advising appointment, students should contact the SEMTE advising office at 480-965-2335 or semte@asu.edu (<mailto:semte@asu.edu>).

Mathematics Minor (ASMATHMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor program in mathematics explores the study of higher mathematics.

It is designed to enable the student to understand the mathematics most commonly used in business, economics and science. It is expected that students in the minor will be able to reason and to find creative solutions to problems that are either presented to them or meaningfully formulated by them.

The minor is recommended for students who plan to major in interdisciplinary arts and sciences, biology or business and for those who are preparing for further graduate study.

The program is offered by the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences.

Program Requirements:

The minor in mathematics consists of 20 credit hours (a minimum of 12 credit hours must be upper-division). A minimum of nine credit hours must be taken from the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences. Elective courses not on this list should be approved by an academic advisor prior to enrollment. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Required Courses -- 14 credit hours

MAT 271: Calculus with Analytic Geometry II (MA) (4)
MAT 272: Calculus with Analytic Geometry III (MA) (4)
MAT 300: Mathematical Structures (L) (3)
MAT 342: Linear Algebra or MAT 343: Applied Linear Algebra (3)

Elective Courses -- 6 credit hours

MAT 310: Introduction to Geometry (3)
MAT 371: Advanced Calculus I (3)
MAT 411: History and Philosophy of Mathematics (HU & H) (3)
MAT 421: Applied Computational Methods (CS) (3)

MAT 443: Introduction to Abstract Algebra (3)
MAT 445: Theory of Numbers (3)
MAT 452: Introduction to Chaos and Nonlinear Dynamics (3)
MAT 461: Applied Complex Analysis (3)
MAT 462: Applied Partial Differential Equations (3)
MAT 472: Intermediate Real Analysis I (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Incompatible Majors: BS in applied mathematics

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Mathematics Minor (LAMATMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor in mathematics is designed for students who want to further their knowledge of mathematics. It is beneficial for students majoring in any field where there is a need for quantification in the analysis of phenomena.

Program Requirements:

The minor in mathematics consists of a minimum of 18 credit hours, of which at least 12 must be upper-division. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required for courses used in the minor.

Required Courses -- 9 credit hours

A minimum of 9 credit hours is required. Students completing MAT 271 and MAT 272 will complete a total of 11 credit hours.

MAT 271: Calculus with Analytic Geometry II (MA) or MAT 266: Calculus for Engineers II (MA) (3-4)
MAT 272: Calculus with Analytic Geometry III (MA) or MAT 267: Calculus for Engineers III (MA) (3-4)
MAT 342: Linear Algebra or MAT 343: Applied Linear Algebra (3)

Electives -- 9 credit hours

In consultation with an academic advisor in the School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences, students choose nine credit hours of upper-division coursework in any combination from ACT, MAT and STP prefixes.

ACT OR MAT OR STP Upper Division Elective (9)

Students may not apply ACT 491, MAT 411 or MAT 485 or any course not offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences to the minor, unless approved by an academic advisor in the School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences prior to registration.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Incompatible Majors: BS in actuarial science; BS in applied mathematics; BS in computational mathematical science; BS in statistics; BA and BS in mathematics (including all concentrations); BAE in secondary education (mathematics)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students should confer with an academic advisor in the School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences before declaring the minor.

Military Leadership Minor (LAMISMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor in military leadership is a program designed to enhance students' learning experience by providing tools that prepare them for leadership roles in various organizations. Students complete courses that cover academic and practical skills in many areas, including:

- effective communication
- leadership ethos
- negotiation
- problem-solving
- staff motivation and empowerment
- team-building

Program Requirements:

The minor in military leadership requires a minimum of 18 credit hours, 12 of which must be at the 300- or 400-level. 12 credit hours must be taken in residence on an ASU campus. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Students choose the option befitting their chosen branch of the military. An option is also provided for non-ROTC students wishing to benefit from the skills and knowledge developed in the minor.

Branch Specific Options -- 18 credit hours

The branch-specific options for Army, Air Force, and Navy require a minimum of 12 credit hours specific to the option and six credit hours chosen from a list of approved electives. Students choosing the Marine option will complete nine credit hours within the branch option courses and nine credit hours from the list of approved electives.

Army Option

MIS 301: Training Management and the Warfighting Functions (L) (4)

MIS 302: Applied Leadership in Small-Unit Operations (L) (4)

MIS 401: The Army Officer (4)

MIS 402: Company Grade Leadership (4)

Choose two additional courses from the list of Approved Electives below.

Air Force Option

AES 301: Air Force Leadership Studies I (L) AND AES 302: Leadership Laboratory (3)

AES 303: Air Force Leadership Studies II (L) AND AES 304: Leadership Laboratory (3)

AES 401: National Security Affairs (L) AND AES 402: Leadership Laboratory (3)

AES 403: Preparation for Active Duty II AND AES 404: Leadership Lab (3)

Choose two additional courses from the list of Approved Electives below.

Navy Option

NAV 301: Naval Ship Systems I (3)

NAV 302: Naval Ship Systems: Weapons (3)

NAV 401: Naval Operations and Seamanship (3)

NAV 402: Leadership and Ethics (3)

Choose two additional courses from the list of Approved Electives below.

Marine Option

NAV 303: Evolution of Warfare (3)

NAV 402: Leadership and Ethics (3)

NAV 403: Fundamentals of Maneuver Warfare (3)

Choose three additional courses from the list of Approved Electives below.

Non-ROTC Option -- 18 credit hours

The minor also offers an option designed for non-ROTC students desiring the training provided by the minor. Student in the non-ROTC option complete three courses from this list of approved core courses and three courses selected from the list of Approved Electives.

Choose three courses from the following:

AES 301: Air Force Leadership Studies I (L) (3)

AES 303: Air Force Leadership Studies II (L) (3)

AES 401: National Security Affairs (L) (3)

AES 403: Preparation for Active Duty II (3)

MIS 301: Training Management and the Warfighting Functions (L) (4)

MIS 303: National Advanced Leadership Camp (4)

MIS 401: The Army Officer (4)

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Incompatible Majors: All music majors

Other Enrollment Requirements: Students must successfully complete an audition before the faculty in the applicable instrument area for entrance into the program. Audition criteria and specific audition requirements are determined by area faculty and will be similar to the MUP 111 and MUP 311 enrollment criteria for each instrument posted at <https://music.asu.edu/admissions/undergraduate-auditions> (<https://music.asu.edu/admissions/undergraduate-auditions>). Students interested in pursuing the performance minor should contact the Office of Academic Affairs in the School of Music, Dance and Theatre at musicadmissions@asu.edu (<mailto:musicadmissions@asu.edu>). They will be directed to the appropriate faculty member with whom to schedule an audition.

Advisors should not add the minor until the student presents a letter from the School of Music, Dance and Theatre Academic Affairs Office confirming that the student has successfully passed the audition.

Current ASU undergraduate students may pursue a minor and have it recognized on their ASU transcript at graduation. Students interested in pursuing a minor should consult their academic advisor to declare the minor and to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. Minor requirements appear on the degree audit once the minor is added. Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate by the college or department of either the major program or the minor. Courses taken for the minor may not count toward both the major and the minor. Students should contact their academic advisor for more information.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Incompatible Majors: BMUS in performance (music theatre)

Other Enrollment Requirements: An audition is required for entrance into the minor or BIS concentration and MUP 121 and MUP 170 study. Audition criteria are determined by area faculty.

Two songs (whole songs, not cuttings) total, to be performed with live piano accompaniment (accompanist provided, or students may choose to bring their own). Both songs must be from musicals, and they must contrast one another. One must demonstrate a "legitimate" style of singing utilizing legato line, and the other can be a contrasting style of your choosing (including pop, rock and belting).

Note: Students may elect to perform one classical selection (an art song or an aria from opera or oratorio) instead of two songs from musicals. The classical piece may be in English or in a foreign language. This could be in place of either piece.

- Monologue: One monologue from a musical or a play, not exceeding one minute in length, will be performed separately from the singing and dance audition.
- Dance Assessment: All applicants must perform a dance assessment separate from the singing audition. The purpose of the assessment is to gain a full picture of the complete musical theatre performer. Students should wear comfortable movement or dance attire and character shoes or shoes that are easy to move in. Students will be taught two brief combinations. There will be dressing rooms available in which to change before and after the dance audition. The dance and monologue audition will take place prior to the singing audition.

Advisors should not add the minor until the student presents an acceptance letter from the School of Music, Dance and Theatre Academic Affairs Office confirming that the student has successfully passed the audition.

Current ASU undergraduate students may pursue a minor and have it recognized on their ASU transcript at graduation. Students interested in pursuing a minor should consult their academic advisor to declare the minor and to ensure they take an appropriate set of courses. Minor requirements appear on the degree audit once the minor is added. Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate by the college or department of either the major or the minor. Nonprofit Leadership and Management Minor (PPNLMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The minor in nonprofit leadership and management empowers students to positively impact the community in which they work. The nonprofit sector in the U.S. is unique in form and function, with more than 1.6 million organizations in the U.S.

The minor is ideal for students enrolled in other majors at ASU who wish to earn a minor that concentrates on the management of nonprofit organizations. Students from various disciplines such as business, communication, education, global studies, museum studies, nursing, public affairs, religious studies, social work, and sustainability find this program a beneficial supplement to their existing program as many find that their career pathways from their degree occur within nonprofit organization forms. Coursework in the minor introduces students to the knowledge and skills for successful professional careers with nonprofit, social sector organizations that exist to improve the quality of life of communities.

This program affords students the opportunity to start their pursuit of the National Certified Nonprofit Professional credential awarded through the Nonprofit Leadership Alliance (formerly American Humanics, Inc.): <https://www.nonprofitleadershipalliance.org/credential/> (<https://www.nonprofitleadershipalliance.org/credential/>). Students seeking more information about completing the CNP credential and requirements should refer to the school website.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires 18 credit hours: 12 credit hours of required core courses and six credit hours of elective courses.

Required Core Courses -- 12 credit hours

- NLM 220: Introduction to Nonprofit Organizations (3)
- NLM 300: Fund Raising and Resource Development (3)
- NLM 310: Volunteer Management (3)
- NLM 430: Managing Nonprofit Organizations (L) (3)

Elective Courses (choose six credit hours from either Block A or Block B)

Block A - choose this block if interested in the CNP credential -- 6 credit hours

Choosing Block A will help you earn the CNP credential. Please review NLM 320: Professional Development Seminar (<https://www.certifiedtochangetheworld.org/> ><https://www.certifiedtochangetheworld.org/> for more information.

(4)

Notes: This seminar is one credit hour taken for four semesters.

NLM 420: Nonprofit Leadership Alliance Institute (2)

Notes: Offered fall semester only

Block B - choose two courses if interested in minor only, without CNP credential -- 6 credit hours

NLM 160: Voluntary Action and Community Leadership (SB) (3)

NLM 380: Financial Management for Nonprofit Organizations (3)

NLM 435: Service Learning for Community Development (3)

PRM 145: Special Events Management (3)

Standards

1. minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) required for all courses in the minor.
2. 15 credit hours of graded classroom course work (no internship, no independent study).
3. students should be a junior to take 400-level classes.
4. no double counting of courses for both a major and the minor.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Incompatible Majors: BS in nonprofit leadership and management

Students pursuing the nonprofit leadership and management bachelor's degree may earn the certified nonprofit professional credential along with their major upon successfully completing both curricular and cocurricular requirements. (Students should see an advisor for details.)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Current ASU undergraduate students may pursue a minor and have it recognized on their ASU transcript at graduation. Students interested in pursuing a minor should consult their academic advisor to declare the minor and to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. Parks and Protected Area Management Minor (PPPRMMINT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

As the Southwest continues to develop and urbanize, the demands and pressures on public lands and natural resources continue to grow, and the interplay between society and natural resources is key to understanding modernity and continues to be at the center of policy issues and quality of life debates in the West.

The minor program in parks and protected area management introduces students to the role of parks and protected areas, with a focus on the unique issues faced by managers of urban-proximate natural areas.

The minor allows students enrolled in other undergraduate programs at ASU to broaden their educational experiences; students from such various disciplines as business, education, nursing, public affairs, social work and many others might find this program a beneficial supplement to their existing program.

Students interested in this parks and protected area management minor may also be interested in therapeutic recreation, available through the Academic Catalog Archive 2020-2021 parks and recreation management program.

Pharmacology and Toxicology Minor (ASPTXMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

A minor in pharmacology and toxicology provides students with biology and chemistry courses to help prepare them for upper-division courses focused on how chemicals (drugs and environmental toxicants) affect living organisms. Students learn to identify chemical characteristics leading to beneficial and adverse effects, describe how chemicals are evaluated for regulatory purposes, and summarize holistically how drugs and toxicants elicit their effects.

Relevant career paths include the pharmaceutical industry, regulatory fields such as environmental risk assessment, and graduate programs in public health, pharmacology, toxicology or environmental health sciences.

Program Requirements:

The minor in pharmacology and toxicology consists of 20 credit hours. A minimum of 12 credit hours must be upper-division. A minimum of nine credit hours must be taken through the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Required -- 14 credit hours

BCH 371: Modern Concepts in Biochemistry (3)

BIO 182: General Biology II (SG) (4)

CHM 116: General Chemistry II (SQ) (4)

PTX 301: Basics of Pharmacology and Toxicology (3)

Electives -- 6 credit hours

PTX 401 / FOR 401: Forensic Toxicology (3)

PTX 432 / LSC 432: Fundamentals of Pharmacology (3)

PTX 475 / FOR 475 / LSC 475: Principles of Toxicology (3)

PTX 499: Individualized Instruction (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Incompatible Majors: BS in pharmacology and toxicology, BS in biology (pharmacology/toxicology)

Other Enrollment Requirements: The following prerequisite courses do not count toward the minor, but may be needed in order to complete the requirements of the minor:

BIO 181 General Biology I

BIO 353 Cell Biology

CHM 113 General Chemistry I

CHM 233 General Organic Chemistry I AND CHM 237 General Organic Chemistry Laboratory I

The minor in philosophy is open to all ASU undergraduate majors.

Current ASU undergraduate students may pursue a minor and have it recognized on their ASU transcript at graduation. Students interested in pursuing a minor should consult their academic advisor to declare the minor and to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. Minor requirements appear on the degree audit once the minor is added. Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate by the college or department of either the major program or the minor. Courses taken for the minor may not count toward both the major and the minor. Students should contact their academic advisor for more information.

Philosophy Minor (LAPHIMIN)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Description:

The minor in philosophy provides students with an understanding of philosophical inquiry and method. The program offers an introduction to central themes both in the history of philosophy and in the current literature. Students in this minor have the opportunity to sharpen their critical-reasoning skills while addressing profound questions regarding the nature of:

- existence
- knowledge
- law
- morality
- politics
- science

Program Requirements:

A minor in philosophy consists of 18 credit hours, of which at least 12 must be upper-division. At least six upper-division credit hours must be in courses offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Each course must be completed with a minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

The minor in philosophy is also available to complement the studies of ASU Online students. Certain course selections below are offered as oCourses to accommodate ASU Online students.

Subdisciplinary Electives -- 18 credit hours

Subdisciplinary Elective (6)

Upper Division Subdisciplinary Elective (12)

Available subdisciplines are epistemology, ethics and political philosophy, history of philosophy, logic and metaphysics. Students choose courses from the philosophical subdiscipline lists, with no more than two courses from any single track. Courses in the "other" list cover multiple subdisciplines and students may apply these courses within the minor without limit. Students should consult with an academic advisor in the School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies about a proposed selection of courses before enrolling.

Physics Minor (LAPHYMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The physics minor provides students with the fundamental concepts of physics beyond the introductory level. Through rigorous hands-on experience, students deepen their understanding of foundational concepts and develop their analytical skills. Students can tailor the minor through upper-division electives to enhance their career outlook.

Program Requirements:

The minor in physics requires a minimum of 24 credit hours, at least 12 of which must be completed at the upper-division level. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Required Courses -- 12 credit hours

PHY 121: University Physics I: Mechanics (SQ) AND PHY 122: University Physics Laboratory I (SQ) or PHY 150: Physics I (SQ) (4)
PHY 131: University Physics II: Electricity and Magnetism (SQ) AND PHY 132: University Physics Laboratory II (SQ) or PHY 151: Physics II (SQ) (4)
PHY 252: Physics III (SQ) (4)

Electives -- 12 credit hours

Choose one of the following options for the remaining required coursework. (12-15)

Option 1

PHY 361: Introductory Modern Physics (3)

PHY 333: Electronic Circuits and Measurements or PHY 334: Advanced Laboratory I (L) (3)

PHY 201: Mathematical Methods in Physics I (CS) (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/catalog/courselist?s=PHY&l=upperdivision&t=2207&hon=F>) > PHY Upper Division Elective (6)

PHY 201 and PHY 302 are required.

(3)

PHY 302: Mathematical Methods in Physics II (3)

Select 9 additional credit hours (3 courses) from the below list.

PHY 310: Classical Particles, Fields, and Matter I (3)

PHY 311: Classical Particles, Fields, and Matter II (3)

PHY 314: Quantum Physics I (3)

PHY 315: Quantum Physics II (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Physics Minor (LSPHYMIN)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The physics minor provides a rigorous foundation in physics with an emphasis on fundamental concepts and applied hands-on experience. The program broadens and deepens a student's understanding of the field and increases options for employment and graduate study.

The primary emphasis of the physics minor is to give students experience through applied and computational physics projects. The projects are guided by faculty with expertise in the physics of semiconductors and graphene, quantum nano-optics, laser physics and materials science.

The program is offered by the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts at the Polytechnic campus.

Program Requirements:

The minor in physics requires 23 credit hours, including a minimum of 12 credit hours of upper-division. A minimum of six upper-division credit hours must be taken in courses offered by the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all courses.

Required Courses -- 17 credit hours

PHY 121: University Physics I: Mechanics (SQ) (3)

PHY 122: University Physics Laboratory I (SQ) (1)

PHY 131: University Physics II: Electricity and Magnetism (SQ) (3)

PHY 132: University Physics Laboratory II (SQ) (1)

PHY 314: Quantum Physics I (3)

PHY 361: Introductory Modern Physics (3)

PHY 499: Individualized Instruction (3)

Elective Courses (choose two) -- 6 credit hours

PHY 201: Mathematical Methods in Physics I (CS) (3)

PHY 302: Mathematical Methods in Physics II (3)

PHY 321: Vector Mechanics and Vibration (3)

PHY 331: Principles of Modern Electromagnetism (3)

Political Science Minor (ASPOLMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor program in political science, offered by the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, is designed to help students gain an understanding of theory, practice and policy underlying local, national and international political processes and to train students with the research skills necessary for the analysis of complex sociopolitical issues locally and globally.

The program strives to meet these goals by offering students learner-centered coursework in political theory, American political institutions, and international relations and world affairs. These goals are accomplished by offering a flexible program of coursework focusing on international urban, race or ethnic sociopolitical areas, internships and service-learning or action research opportunities. Under the direction of faculty, students focus on intellectual and concrete policy issues in the greater Phoenix metropolitan area, Arizona, the Arizona-Mexico borderlands, the Americas and the world.

Program Requirements:

The minor in political science consists of 18 credit hours, requiring a minimum of 12 upper-division credit hours. A minimum of six upper-division credit hours must be completed through courses offered by the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences. A maximum of three credit hours of internship and three credit hours of individualized instruction may be used to fulfill requirements. Students wishing to pursue the minor must meet with an academic advisor to construct a set of courses that reflect a particular area of specialty and interest. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Required Courses (choose two) -- 6 credit hours

POS 110: American Government and Politics (SB) or POS 310: American National Government (SB) (3)

POS 150: Comparative Government (SB & G) (3)

POS 160: Global Politics (SB & G) (3)

Psychology Minor (LAPGSMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The minor program in psychology focuses on appreciating and understanding the human condition from a scientific, psychological point of view.

Students who complete the minor in psychology possess a breadth of knowledge across many areas of psychology. They are able to use basic research and quantitative methods to gather and synthesize psychological findings. Ultimately, they come to understand the relevance and applicability of psychological principles, approaches and findings to individual, group and social issues. In doing so, they are prepared to pursue productive careers and engage on a daily basis with the increasingly complex, information-rich world.

Program Requirements:

The minor in psychology consists of completing 22 credit hours of coursework in the foundations of psychology and the breadth within psychology categories described below. 12 credit hours must be completed at the upper-division level, of which at least six credit hours must be completed in courses offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Department of Psychology. All courses for the minor must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Required Courses -- 10 credit hours

PSY 101: Introduction to Psychology (SB) (3)

PSY 230: Introduction to Statistics (CS) (3)

PSY 290: Research Methods (L or SG) (4)

Minor Electives -- 12 credit hours

Take one course each from four of the following five breadth areas: Biological, Personality/Mental Health, Cognitive/Learning, Developmental, and Social.

Breadth Area Elective (12)

Biological Breadth

PSY 325: Physiological Psychology (3)

Cognitive/Learning Breadth

PSY 320: Learning and Motivation (3)

PSY 323: Sensation and Perception (3)

PSY 324: Memory and Cognition (3)

Developmental Breadth

PSY 341: Developmental Psychology (SB) (3)

Personality/Mental Health Breadth

PSY 315: Personality Theory and Research (SB) (3)

PSY 366: Abnormal Psychology (SB) (3)

Social Breadth

PSY 350: Social Psychology (SB) (3)

PSY 351: Honors Social Psychology (L or SB) (3)

If a non-psychology statistics course is approved by the psychology department to substitute for PSY 230 Introduction to Statistics, an additional psychology course must be taken to complete the 22 credit hours of required psychology course work. Internship credit, research credit, and teaching assistant credit may not be used to satisfy this requirement. For more information, please contact a psychology advisor.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Sociology Minor (ASSOCMIN)

Campus: West

Description:

The minor program in sociology, offered by the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, provides students with an understanding of the theory, practice and policy underlying issues of social change, inequality and diversity. These issues are approached from multiple perspectives, including race or ethnicity, gender, economic position, age, geographic location and position in the global political economy.

The student minoring in sociology learns how it enhances one's understanding of social realities and institutions at local, national and international levels and how sociology contributes to the other social sciences and to the humanities.

Students gain a basic understanding of the assumptions underlying the discipline of sociology and develop the research skills necessary for analysis of complex social issues. These objectives are met by offering a flexible program and by providing the student with individual and group experiences in working with faculty members on concrete intellectual and policy issues.

Program Requirements:

The minor in sociology consists of 18 credit hours (a minimum of 12 credit hours must be upper-division). All courses used to satisfy requirements for the minor must be passed with a "C" or better. See information about Language Placement Testing (<https://silc.asu.edu/student-life/academic-advising/placement-testing>) or consult with an academic advisor in the School of International Letters and Cultures regarding placement into Spanish language classes. Students testing into higher Spanish language courses may need overrides to enroll.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Incompatible Majors: BA in Spanish; BAE in secondary education (Spanish)

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students who wish to add the minor in Spanish to the degree they are currently pursuing may do so by contacting the School of International Letters and Cultures advising office.

Current ASU undergraduate students may pursue a minor and have it recognized on their ASU transcript at graduation. Students interested in pursuing a minor should consult their academic advisor to declare the minor and to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. Minor requirements appear on the degree audit once the minor is added. Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate by the college or department of either the major program or the minor. Courses taken for the minor may not count toward both the major and the minor. Students should contact their academic advisor for more information.

Studio Art Minor (HISTARTMIN)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The studio art minor is designed for students who have an interest in studio arts but are pursuing another major.

The program includes art courses that address formal and conceptual issues in art. Students develop technical proficiency in one or more studio areas. Coursework in art history, both lower and upper division, helps foster critical understanding of aesthetics and the production of art. The designated coursework is flexible enough for students to concentrate in a single area of the studio arts or explore several mediums.

Program Requirements:

The studio art minor requires 18 credit hours (9 upper-division). All courses must be completed with a minimum grade of "C" (2.00).

Studio Core -- 9 credit hours

ART 110: Drawing as Seeing and Thinking (HU) or ART 112: 2-D Design or ART 113: Color or ART 115: 3-D Design or ART 116: Introduction to Digital Media (3)

ART 2 Elective (6)

Upper-Division Studio Courses -- 9 credit hours

ART Upper Division Elective (9)

Notes: When selecting upper division (3XX/4XX) ART studio courses, check the prerequisites. In some cases, instructors will approve an override.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Incompatible Majors: All studio art majors

Upper-Division Sustainability-Related Electives -- 6 credit hours

Upper Division courses that are sustainability-related and ideally make a connection between the student's major and the minor (6)

Students should consult with their major advisor for upper division sustainability-related elective course selection. Possible courses for these electives can be explored at <https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/sustainability-courses-at-asu/>, but still need to be approved by the student's major academic advisor.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Incompatible Majors: BA in business (sustainability); BA in interdisciplinary studies with a concentration in sustainability; BA in sustainability; BS in sustainability; BS in sustainable food systems

Other Enrollment Requirements: Students interested in adding a minor in sustainability should work with their major academic advisor. A student's major advisor will approve the two upper-division electives required for the minor in sustainability.

Current ASU undergraduate students may pursue a minor and have it recognized on their ASU transcript at graduation. Students interested in pursuing a minor should consult their academic advisor to declare the minor and to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. Minor requirements appear on the degree audit once the minor is added. Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate by the college or department of either the major program or the minor. ENG 409: Analyzing Rhetoric (3)
ENG 419: Writing in Digital Spaces (3)
ENG 472: Rhetorical Studies (L) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: None

Majors Ineligible to Add This Minor: BA in English - all concentrations

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Current ASU undergraduate students may pursue a minor and have it recognized on their ASU transcript at graduation. Students interested in pursuing a minor should consult their academic advisor to declare the minor and to ensure an appropriate set of courses is taken. Minor requirements appear on the degree audit once the minor is added. Certain major and minor combinations may be deemed inappropriate by the college or department of either the major program or the minor. Courses taken for the minor may not count toward both the major and minor. Students should contact the department offering the minor for more information.

Youth Services Leadership Minor (HSYSLMIN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The minor program in youth services leadership is designed to explore the area of youth leadership from the perspective of those who work face-to-face with youth in a variety of settings.

The minor allows students enrolled in a variety of undergraduate programs at ASU to broaden their knowledge of youth services. Students from programs such as education, nursing, social work, criminal justice and others may find this program a beneficial supplement to their existing program.

Program Requirements:

The minor requires 15 credit hours: six credit hours of required courses and nine credit hours of elective courses. At least nine credit hours must be upper division.

Required Core Courses -- 6 credit hours

PRM 203: Program Planning (3)

PRM 335: Sports and Recreation for Youth Development (3)

Notes: Offered spring semester only

Elective Courses (choose three) -- 9 credit hours

CRJ 204: Juvenile Justice (3)

CRD 302: Inclusive Community Development (SB & C) (3)

CRJ 462: Gangs (3)

NLM 220: Introduction to Nonprofit Organizations (3)

NLM 310: Volunteer Management (3)

NLM 451: Grant Writing (3)

Notes: Offered spring semester only

PRM 145: Special Events Management (3)

PRM 364: Foundations of Recreation Therapy (SB) (3)

Standards

1. 15 hours of graded classroom course work (no internship, no independent study)
2. minimum "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) grade required for all courses in the minor
3. should be a junior to take 400-level courses
4. no double counting of courses for a major and the minor

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this minor.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Incompatible Majors: BS in parks and recreation management; BS in parks and recreation management (therapeutic recreation); BS in community sports management; BS in recreation therapy

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Current ASU undergraduate students may pursue a minor and have it recognized on their ASU transcript at graduation. Students interested in pursuing a minor should consult their academic advisor to declare the minor and to ensure that an appropriate set of courses is taken. Undergraduate Programs

Undergraduate Certificates (Program Descriptions and Requirements)

Actuarial Science Certificate (LAACTCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Actuarial science is an area of mathematical and statistical science that requires expertise in specializations of probability and interest theory, coupled with a strong foundation in accounting, finance and economics. This certificate provides students with preparation for professional actuarial credentialing exams offered by the Society of Actuaries and the Casualty Actuarial Society.

Program Requirements:

Students must complete a minimum of 15 credit hours from the courses listed below. At least 12 credit hours must be upper-division courses. Specific course grades are required for each course; see notes below.

Required Course -- 3 credit hours

ACT 201: Introduction to Elements and Techniques of Actuarial Science (3)

Notes: "B" grade (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in this course.

Electives -- 12 credit hours

A "B" grade (3.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in the following courses: ACT 410, ACT 415, ACT 420, ACT 430, ACT 435, STP 427.

A "C" grade (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in the following courses: ACT 440, ACT 441, ACT 450, ACT 451, ACT 484.

ACT 410: Mathematics of Finance (4)

ACT 415: Probability for Risk Management (3)

ACT 420: Ratemaking and Reserving (3)

ACT 430: Mathematics of Financial Derivatives (4)

ACT 435: Statistics for Risk Modeling (3)

ACT 440: Long-Term Actuarial Mathematics I (3)

ACT 441: Long-Term Actuarial Mathematics II (3)

ACT 450: Actuarial Models and Modeling I (3)

ACT 451: Actuarial Models and Modeling II (3)

ACT 484: Internship (3)

STP 427: Mathematical Statistics (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Although no specific degree is required for admission to the actuarial science certificate program, a strong mathematical background is essential (found in majors such as mathematics, statistics, engineering and natural sciences). Students with a major or degree other than those listed will require additional preparation beyond the certificate. Students are required to have a minimum cumulative GPA of 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") and grades of "B" or better in courses of multivariate calculus, linear algebra and introductory statistics at ASU or an equivalent institution.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Applied Business Data Analytics Certificate (BABDACERT)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Description:

The certificate in applied business data analytics is for students who are interested in practical uses for computer-based tool suites that are capable of managing vast amounts of data. Students learn sophisticated but easy-to-use means to manage and analyze such data and to leverage the tools for making good decisions about projects, process designs and fundamental decision-making tasks. Exposure to predictive analytics and modeling, big data techniques, and visualization provides significant insight into the advanced uses of the computer-based tools. Critical thinking is an important skill and mindset that is required to establish and evaluate evidence-based benchmarks for making good decisions leading to high-quality outcomes.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in applied business data analytics requires 18 credit hours and is available to all majors. At least 12 credit hours must be upper-division.

To earn the certificate, students must complete all courses with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a scale of 4.00) or higher.

Required Courses -- 18 credit hours

CIS 105: Computer Applications and Information Technology (CS) (3)

CIS 308: Advanced Excel in Business (3)

CIS 309: Business Process Management (3)

CIS 310: Business Data Visualization (3)

CIS 405: Business Intelligence (3)

Any Statistics Course or CIS 394: Location Analytics for Business (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The applied business data analytics certificate is open to all ASU students. The certificate application is accessed and submitted through Advising SOS at <https://wpcarey.asu.edu/SOS> (<https://wpcarey.asu.edu/SOS>).

No more than six credit hours may be shared between the certificate and other degree programs, minors or other certificates.

This certificate is available through the Pathways for the Future program: <https://pff.asu.edu/> (<https://pff.asu.edu/>). Applicants without a bachelor's degree are eligible to apply for, and receive, this certificate, through the Pathways for the Futures program. Applicants who already hold a bachelor's degree should apply to ASU and this certificate program as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in an online format with multiple enrollment sessions throughout the year. Applicants may view the program description and request more information here. Applied Cybersecurity Certificate (ASACSCERT)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Description:

The applied cybersecurity certificate program is designed to build competencies in security operations, risk assessment, network security, and governmental and regulatory compliance in an interdisciplinary learning setting.

Building upon core skills that students bring with them from their majors, students practice dealing with cyber threats and resolving issues from multiple perspectives. This certificate is an ideal supplement for students interested in careers in cybersecurity in both the private sector and within government agencies (FBI, Homeland Security, NSA, DOD) in positions such as:

- chief information security officer
- cyber risk analyst
- information security engineer
- network security engineer
- security operations center analyst

The program is offered through a collaboration between the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Science, the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering and the W. P. Carey School of Business.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in applied cybersecurity consists of 15 credit hours; a minimum of 12 upper-division credit hours must be earned at ASU. Six credit hours must be unique and not count towards a student's undergraduate degree. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the certificate must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better. Students must select courses from more than one prefix to fulfill certificate requirements.

Students must take CSE 365 or IFT 202 and one course each from groups A, B or C, and D; then one course from Group E for a total of five courses or 15 credit hours. It is recommended that the Group A course be taken concurrently with CSE 365 or IFT 202. The Group B or C and D courses must be taken after successful completion of CSE 365 or IFT 202. Group A through D courses must be completed successfully before enrolling in the Group E required course.

Required Courses -- 3 credit hours

CSE 365: Information Assurance or IFT 202: Foundations of Information and Computer System Security (3)

Electives -- 9 credit hours

Group A - Security Operations and Risk Management -- 3 credit hours

ACO 461: Security Operations (3)

CIS 401: Managing Cyber Risks in Enterprise Business Processes (3)

IFT 381: Information System Security (3)

Group B - Systems and Network Security OR Group C - Forensics/Cyber Crime -- 3 credit hours

Group B - Systems and Network Security:

ACO 431: Network Security (3)

CSE 466: Computer Systems Security (3)

CSE 468: Computer Network Security (3)

IFT 458: Middleware Programming and Database Security (3)

IFT 475: Security Analysis (3)

Group C - Forensics/Cyber Crime:

CSE 469: Computer and Network Forensics (3)

FOR 350: Computer Forensics (3)

IFT 482: Network Forensics (3)

Group D - Policy -- 3 credit hours

ACO 351: Governance, Risk and Compliance (3)

CIS 402: Privacy, Ethics and Compliance Issues (3)

CSE 467: Data and Information Security (3)

IFT 483: Developing Security Policy (3)

Group E - Project -- 3 credit hours

Students may take more than one semester of the Applied Project but only three credit hours will count towards the certificate.

ACO 484: Internship or ACO 499: Individualized Instruction (3)

CIS 440: Capstone in Information Systems (L) (3)

CSE 485: Computer Science Capstone Project I (L) or CSE 486: Computer Science Capstone Project II (L) (3)

IFT 401: Information Technology Capstone Project I or IFT 402: Information Technology Capstone Project II (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

To enroll in this certificate program, students should have completed at least 45 credit hours in their declared majors and have a cumulative GPA of 2.00 or better.

Students should pay attention to the prerequisites needed for required certificate courses and make sure to complete prerequisite courses prior to enrolling in the certificate program.

CSE 365 Information Assurance has prerequisites of ACO 240, CIS 235, CSE 220 or CSE 240.

Prerequisites for ACO 240: ACO 102 or CSE 205, or GIS major with GIS 222, or software engineering graduate student

Prerequisites for CIS 235: CIS 105, 200 or 220; MAT 210, 211, 270 or 271

Prerequisites for CSE 220: CSE 205

Prerequisites for CSE 240: ACO 102 or CSE 205, or GIS major with GIS 222, or software engineering graduate student

IFT 202 Foundations of Information and Computer System Security has prerequisites of IFT 101, IFT 103 and IFT 166.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Applied Social Sciences Certificate (ASAPSSCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The certificate program in applied social sciences prepares students to apply social science tools to real-world problems. Students collaborate to develop case studies, engage in fieldwork, and learn both how to apply expert knowledge and how to communicate evidence. Working with stakeholders, students identify and solve problems, reform managerial structures and organizational systems, and drive social change.

The certificate program is recommended for students with academic or career interests in human resources, administration, journalism, social work, business, community and civic work as well as politics, organizing and advocacy, public policy, education and sustainability.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in applied social sciences requires a minimum of 15 credit hours (at least 12 must be upper-division), consisting of six core credit hours and nine credit hours of electives. Only courses in which a student receives a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet the certificate requirements.

Six credit hours must be completed through the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences. A maximum of three credit hours of individualized instruction or internship may be applied toward the certificate. A maximum of six credit hours may be shared between the certificate and a New College major.

Electives are not limited to the certificate elective list; students should see their academic advisor prior to enrollment. Students are encouraged to take courses that develop breadth rather than limiting their selection to courses in one particular discipline.

Required Core Courses -- 6 credit hours

POS 350: Comparative Politics (SB & G) or SOC 331: Environmental Sociology (SB & G) (3)

SBS 304: Social Statistics I (CS) or SBS 404: Social Statistics II: Multivariate Analysis (CS) (3)

Elective Courses (minimum 6 upper-division) -- 9 credit hours

Students will select nine credit hours from courses where an applied project is assigned within a specific context. Selected courses must come from at least two of the following prefixes: ASB, JHR, POS, SBS or SOC.

ASB 339 / SBS 339 / POS 339 / SOC 339: Grassroots Social Movements (SB) (3)

ASB 340 / SOC 328: Migration and Culture (SB & G) (3)

ASB 442 / SBS 460: Global Cities (SB & G) (3)

ASB 484 / JHR 484 / POS 484: Internship or SBS 484: Internship or SOC 484: Internship (3)

ASB 494 / JHR 494 / POS 494 / SBS 494: Special Topics (3)

ASB 499 / JHR 499 / POS 499 / SBS 499 / SOC 499: Individualized Instruction (3)

GCU 373: Introduction to Geographic Information Science (SG) (4)

JHR 305: Theory and Practice of Social Justice and Human Rights (SB & G) (3)

POS 150: Comparative Government (SB & G) (3)

POS 350: Comparative Politics (SB & G) (3)

SOC 241: Modern Social Problems (SB) (3)

SOC 331: Environmental Sociology (SB & G) (3)

SOC 371: Inequality and Sustainability (3)

SOS 111: Sustainable Cities ((HU or SB) & G) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Arabic Studies Certificate (LAARBCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in Arabic studies provides students with skills that enable them to communicate effectively in Arabic in the four areas of language acquisition: listening, reading, speaking and writing.

Simultaneously, students gain broad knowledge and understanding of the culture, literature and traditions of the vast Arabic-speaking world. The program provides critically needed educational and cultural diversity that enriches students' undergraduate experiences and prepares them for life as employees and employers.

Graduate students in the liberal arts, social sciences and humanities seeking academic or professional careers in any of the three disciplines also benefit from this certificate because of the added advantage the program gives them in the job market, given the demonstrably high need for graduates with knowledge of the Arabic language.

Program Requirements:

The Arabic studies certificate requires students to complete 18 credit hours of upper-division coursework. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required for each course.

Arabic Core (choose three) -- 9 credit hours

ARB 311: Advanced Arabic Skills I or ARB 411: Advanced Arabic Skills II (3)

ARB 321: Arabic Conversation I or ARB 421: Arabic Conversation II (3)

ARB 331: Arabic/Islamic Culture and Literature (HU & H & G) (3)

ARB 335: Arabic Culture and Islam (G) (3)

ARB 341: Quran Text and Women (HU & H) or ARB 351: Classical Arabic Literature (3)

ARB 352: Modern Arabic Literature in Translation or ARB 422: Advanced Arabic Media (3)

Elective Courses (choose three) -- 9 credit hours

Some courses can be used either as a core course or as an elective, but no course can be counted more than once toward certificate requirements.

ARB 321: Arabic Conversation I (3)

ARB 335: Arabic Culture and Islam (G) (3)

ARB 336: Introduction to the Qur'an (G) (3)

ARB 337: Hadith and Prophetic Tradition (3)

ARB 340: Arabic Translation (3)

ARB 341: Quran Text and Women (HU & H) (3)

ARB 351: Classical Arabic Literature (3)

ARB 352: Modern Arabic Literature in Translation (3)

ARB 360: Islamic Philosophical Literature (3)

ARB 421: Arabic Conversation II (3)

ARB 422: Advanced Arabic Media (3)

GCU 328: Geography of Middle East and North Africa (SB & G) (3)

HST 307: Studies in African History (H) (3)

HST 372: Modern Middle East (SB & G & H) (3)

REL 365: Islamic Civilization (HU & H) (3)

REL 366: Islam in the Modern World (HU & G) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Any student accepted into an appropriate degree program at ASU can declare the certificate in Arabic studies. Students should contact an academic advisor in the School of International Letters and Cultures for more information.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The certificate in arts entrepreneurship, meant to extend the study of an individual arts discipline, is available only to current students with a major within the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts.

Students may be admitted to the certificate program upon completion of HDA 252 Foundations Arts and Design Entrepreneurship with a grade of "B" or better (scale is 4.00 = "A") and an overall GPA of 3.00 or higher. Students must submit an application to the Herberger Institute Office of Academic Catalog Archive 2020-2021

Student Success. Herberger Institute students meeting the course and GPA requirements may enroll in the certificate, and a Herberger Institute advisor will add the certificate plan code to the student's record.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Arts and Humanities in Games Certificate (ASAHGCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The certificate program in arts and humanities in games trains students who can design, develop, create and analyze games from holistic and interdisciplinary perspectives, and who can understand the utilization, consumption and real world impact of games in a diverse culture and society. The goal is to make students' minds more supple, critical in thinking, and expansive through an interdisciplinary approach that encompasses the design and development of toys and games as well as the qualitative study of them. The interdisciplinary approach helps students understand the impact of play on human mental, emotional and social growth.

This program, through foregrounding arts and humanities in the study of games, provides a complementary approach to the technically based study of games offered by the ASU Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in arts and humanities in games consists of 18 credit hours; a minimum of 12 credit hours must be upper-division. A minimum of six upper-division credit hours must be completed through courses offered by the School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies. All courses used to fulfill the requirements for the certificate must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

The certificate consists of six credit hours of required foundational courses, and nine credit hours from one of the following game emphasis areas: Toys and Games as Works of Art (Art Game Practitioner); Toys and Game Culture (Research Scholar); Game Writing (Game Design Practitioner); or Game Sound (Game Design Practitioner); and three credit hours of playworks portfolio.

Asian Studies Certificate (LAASNCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The Asian studies certificate supplements a bachelor's degree and demonstrates knowledge of an Asian language as well as general knowledge of Asian history, art, culture and society. The certificate provides students with official transcript recognition of specialization in Asian studies.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 24 credit hours of approved coursework, in addition to proficiency in an Asian language. 15 credit hours of upper-division area studies coursework must be chosen from at least four different disciplines, e.g., language and cultures, history, religious studies, anthropology, geography, political science, global studies, art and music. Courses from other disciplines may be used by approval. The remaining nine credit hours may be chosen in any combination.

At least six upper-division hours in the certificate must be in courses offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. A minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) is required for each course that is used to fulfill the certificate requirements.

Language Requirement

Students must demonstrate proficiency in an Asian language by completing the 201 and 202 course sequence, one year of study abroad at the intermediate level or satisfactory performance on a proficiency exam. Asian languages include Chinese, Hindi, Indonesian, Japanese, Korean, Thai, Vietnamese.

Disciplinary Electives -- 24 credit hours

Upper Division Disciplinary Electives (15)

At least four different disciplines must be represented within the upper-division disciplinary electives (e.g., history, religious studies, global studies, anthropology). Atmospheric Sciences Certificate (LAATMSCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Students in the atmospheric sciences certificate program gain a focused understanding of weather, climate and the various related methods of measurement and instrumentation. The coursework is designed to give students the knowledge and skill set necessary to approach meteorological-related programs through the lens of their primary field of study.

The curriculum of the certificate program is also associated with the requirements for certification as a meteorologist by the National Weather Service. Through completion of both the atmospheric sciences certificate and the BS program in geography with a concentration in meteorology-climatology, students acquire the skills in GIS and meteorological instrumentation required for national-level certification with the National Weather Service.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 21 credit hours with a "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher. At least 12 of the 21 credit hours must be upper-division coursework.

Required Courses -- 18 credit hours

GPH 212: Introduction to Meteorology (SQ) (3)
GPH 213: Climate and Weather (SG) (3)
GPH 412: Physical Meteorology (3)
GPH 413: Meteorological Instruments and Measurement (3)
GPH 414: Climate Change (G) (3)
MAT 275: Modern Differential Equations (MA) (3)

Upper-Division Elective -- 3 credit hours

GIS 311: Geographic Information Science III (CS) (4)
GIS 341: Cartography and Georepresentation (CS) (3)

GPH 314: Global Change (HU & G) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Applicants must have completed GPH 111 Introduction to Physical Geography, MAT 271 Calculus with Analytic Geometry II, and PHY 121 University Physics I: Mechanics with a grade of "C" or better (scale is 4.00 = "A").

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Biomedical Research Certificate (ASBMRCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The biomedical research certificate program combines authentic research experience conducted in laboratories of practicing academic scientists with upper-division coursework, including laboratory courses, that allow for specialization in given subject areas.

The program is intended to serve students seeking competency in addressing scientific questions in the laboratory and prepares them to be highly competitive for careers in the research sector or to pursue graduate and professional schools, such as medical school.

The program is offered by ASU's New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in biomedical research requires a minimum of 15 credit hours (at least 12 must be upper-division). 12 credit hours must be taken at ASU. Nine credit hours must be counted toward the certificate alone and may not be shared with a student's major requirements. Only courses in which a student received a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet certificate requirements.

Core Requirement -- 3 credit hours

STP 280: Probability and Statistics for Researchers (CS) (3)

Upper Division Elective Requirements -- 8 credit hours

BCH 371: Modern Concepts in Biochemistry AND BCH 372: Modern Concepts in Biochemistry Laboratory (4)

Biomimicry Certificate (SUBMYCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The undergraduate biomimicry certificate is an 18 credit hour interdisciplinary opportunity for students from a variety of backgrounds and any major.

The biomimicry undergraduate certificate is designed to address the growing interest in biomimicry knowledge and training, and students who complete the certificate are able to integrate biomimicry principles and tools into their prospective career.

The biomimicry certificate consists of four core classes, one elective course within the student's discipline, and a practicum capstone course offered through either the student's discipline or BMY 430 Biomimicry Practicum.

Program Requirements:

Students must earn a grade of "B" or better in all biomimicry certificate courses.

Core Courses -- 12 credit hours

BMY 230 / BIO 230: How Nature Works (3)

BMY 302: Principles of Life (3)

BMY 304: The Practice of Biomimicry (3)

SOS 110: Sustainable World (SB) (3)

Elective -- 3 credit hours

Upper Division Elective course that is biomimicry-related and ideally makes a connection between the student's major and the certificate (3)

Capstone -- 3 credit hours

BMY 430: Biomimicry Practicum (3)

Notes: Students may take a biomimicry-focused capstone in their corresponding major upon approval from the School of Sustainability and The Biomimicry Center.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students must have a 3.00 GPA in order to add the undergraduate certificate in biomimicry.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Brazilian Studies Certificate (LABZSCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in Brazilian studies encourages students to create a plan of study focusing on current sociocultural influences that will allow them to compete more successfully in the global job market.

Students pursue coursework in important areas, including complementary courses in specific issues in Brazilian culture, the examination of major themes in Brazilian popular and urban culture with particular emphasis on Afro-Brazilian society, a grounding in the major texts of Brazilian literature, and proficiency in the Portuguese language at the intermediate level.

Program Requirements:

The Brazilian Studies Certificate requires 18-20 credit hours of Portuguese language and elective culture content coursework, of which 12 credit hours must be upper-division. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all coursework. Students choose one two-course language sequence for a total of 6-8 credit hours of Portuguese language. Course substitutions may be permitted for heritage speakers of Portuguese based on their proficiency level as determined by a Portuguese placement test. The language course substitution for advanced speakers of Spanish language can be satisfied by the two-course POR 320 and POR 321 sequence.

Portuguese Language -- 6 credit hours

Choose one two-course sequence for 6-8 credit hours. The upper-division two-course language sequence is 6 credit hours total.

POR 101: Elementary Portuguese I AND POR 102: Elementary Portuguese II (8)

POR 201: Intermediate Portuguese I (G) AND POR 202: Intermediate Portuguese II (8)

POR 313: Portuguese Conversation and Culture (G) AND POR 314: Portuguese Composition and Culture (G) (6)

Notes: POR 313 and POR 314 may be applied to either Portuguese Language or to Upper-Division Electives but may not be applied and counted in both categories for this certificate.

POR 320: Portuguese for Spanish Speakers I AND POR 321: Portuguese for Spanish Speakers II (6)

Upper-Division Electives -- 12 credit hours

GCU 323: Geography of Latin America (SB & G) (3)

GCU 485 / PUP 485: International Field Studies (G) (3)

POR 313: Portuguese Conversation and Culture (G) (3)

POR 314: Portuguese Composition and Culture (G) (3)

POR 394: Special Topics (3)

POR 472: Luso-Brazilian Civilization (HU & G) (3)

POR 484: Internship (3)

POR 493: Honors Thesis (L) (3)

POR 494: Special Topics (3)

POR 499: Individualized Instruction (3)

*Other courses may be used with approval from the faculty coordinator and academic advisor in the School of International Letters and Cultures.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Communication Sciences and Disorders Certificate (NHCSDCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The postbaccalaureate certificate in communication sciences and disorders is designed for students who have already received a bachelor's degree in another discipline but wish to pursue a master's degree in speech-language pathology or communication disorders.

The coursework provides students with the prerequisite background and knowledge necessary to perform at the master's degree level in the field.

Completion of the postbaccalaureate certificate does not guarantee admission to ASU's graduate program, but it enables students to meet the American Speech Language and Hearing Association requirements to enter master's degree programs in speech-language pathology or communication disorders.

Program Requirements:

There are 27 required credit hours in the certificate in communication sciences and disorders. A "C" minimum is required for all courses in the certificate, although students must maintain a 3.00 GPA in the certificate program.

Required courses -- 27 credit hours

SHS 250: Introduction to Phonetics (3)
SHS 310: Anatomical and Physiological Bases of Speech (3)
SHS 311: Hearing Science (3)
SHS 367: Language Science (SB) (3)
SHS 375: Speech Science (3)
SHS 401: Principles of Audiology (3)
SHS 402: Clinical Methods and Treatment of Communication Disorders (3)
SHS 465: Speech and Language Acquisition (SB) (3)
SHS 496: Aural Rehabilitation (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Prospective students must have earned a bachelor's degree in a field outside of speech and hearing science with a minimum GPA of 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Students interested in this certificate should apply for university admission as nondegree-seeking graduate students and submit a supplemental application to the program.

Computational Life Sciences Certificate (LACLSICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

In the life sciences, employers need those who are skilled in understanding and interpreting data, and in particular demand are those who have experience using new, computational approaches and computer programs to process data.

Through this certificate program in computational life sciences, students learn how to identify and interpret data that is generated from a wide range of fields in the life sciences. These fields include, but are not limited to ecology, botany, evolutionary biology, neuroscience, molecular and cellular biology, and animal behavior. Students learn about many types of data generated from sources such as DNA, RNA, protein, imaging, conservation and even from long-term ecological research sites.

Students are introduced to a suite of computational approaches that are used to analyze, visualize and interpret this data. Finally, students delve into the ethical implications of collecting, analyzing and sharing the results of computational life sciences data.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in computational life sciences requires a minimum of 15 credit hours, of which at least 12 credit hours must be upper-division. The core consists of one computing course and one ethics course. A minimum of nine credit hours in elective courses complete the certificate. The computing course not used toward the core requirements may be used toward the elective credit hours. A grade of C (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher is required for all courses used toward the certificate.

Required Courses -- 6 credit hours

BIO 316: History of Biology: Conflicts and Controversies (H) or BIO 317: History of Science (HU & H) or BIO 318: History of Medicine (HU & H) (3)

BIO 439: Computing for Research or BIO 440: Functional Genomics (3)

Electives -- 9 credit hours

BIO 355 / MAT 355 / MBB 355: Introduction to Computational Molecular Biology (CS) (3)

BIO 411: Quantitative Methods in Conservation and Ecology (4)

BIO 415: Biometry (CS) (4)

BIO 439: Computing for Research (3)

Computer Gaming Certificate (ESSCICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The computer gaming certificate program is designed to provide a game development skill set that the student can apply to domain-specific applications in the student's major. The skill set includes architecture of game engines, art design and computer graphics for gaming, and game software development.

In this certificate program, students learn to apply gaming technology to the rapidly growing video game industry and to business, medicine, geography, biotechnology and education. Examples of projects include:

- building a game that teaches linear algebra by incorporating trigonometric rules into the game design
- creating a game that teaches correct sentence construction to beginning learners of English
- creating a game to help patients with physical therapy
- creating an interactive virtual world for corporate training
- designing a game platform incorporating geographic information systems
- inventing a surgical simulation to educate medical students

Program Requirements:

Students will complete nine credit hours of core courses (including a final capstone project) and nine credit hours of elective courses. The certificate requires 12 credit hours of upper-division coursework. Students need to allow at least three years to complete the certificate program due to the prerequisite structure.

Core Courses -- 9 credit hours

CPI 111: Game Development I (CS) (3)

CPI 211: Game Development II (3)

CPI 441: Gaming Capstone (3)

Electives -- 9 credit hours

CPI 311: Game Engine Development or SER 332: Introduction to Graphics and Game Development (3)

CPI 321: Fundamentals of Game Art (3)

CPI 411: Graphics for Games or SER 432: Game Engine Architecture (3)

CPI 421: 3-D Modeling and Texturing (3)

CPI 462: Design for Learning in Virtual Worlds (3)

CPI 484: Internship (3)

SER 431: Advanced Graphics (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The computer gaming certificate is open to any student admitted to an undergraduate degree program at ASU and in good academic standing. This certificate can also be used by interdisciplinary studies BA students as part of their degree program.

All students are eligible to take CPI courses. Students who want to declare the certificate need to complete the undergraduate certificate form on the registrar's website and submit it to the School of Computing, Informatics and Decision Systems Engineering Academic Advising Center located in Centerpoint, Room 105. Interdisciplinary studies students need to contact their advisor to add the computer gaming concentration to their degree program.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

The U.S. meetings, conventions and exhibitions industry generates more than $120 billion a year, supporting nearly two million jobs. Students can explore this exciting growth industry with the convention sales and meeting planning certificate program. The demand for professionals is strong, and this program provides an excellent foundation for enhancing career opportunities nationally, regionally and locally.

Phoenix is a major convention and meeting destination. There is a need for qualified professionals to service conventions and meetings, due in large part to the $600 million investment in the Phoenix Convention Center expansion, development of new hotels and other visitor-related products, and the steady influx of corporate headquarters relocating to the greater Phoenix area.

The certificate, which has been endorsed by the Greater Phoenix Convention and Visitors Bureau and the Arizona Sunbelt Chapter of Meeting Professionals International, enhances a graduate's career opportunities as a tourism professional.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 15 credit hours: three required core courses (9 credits) and two elective course (6 credits). Courses taken as part of a university major may count toward that degree and the certificate. Requirements can be met online. All core classes and some elective classes are taught online at least once a year. To earn the certificate, students must complete a minimum of 12 upper-division credit hours. An application to the program is required.

Required Core Courses -- 9 credit hours

TDM 345: Meeting and Convention Planning (3)

TDM 350: Tourism, Recreation and Sports Marketing (3)

TDM 386: Convention Sales and Management (3)

Electives (choose two, one must be upper-division) -- 6 credit hours

NLM 310: Volunteer Management (3)

PRM 145: Special Events Management (3)

TDM 205: Introduction to Travel and Tourism (G) (3)

TDM 225: Introduction to Resort and Hotel Management (3)

TDM 458: International Tourism (G) (3)

Standards

1. Fifteen credit hours of graded classroom coursework are required (no internship, no independent study).
2. A minimum "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) grade is required for all classes in the certificate.
3. A minimum GPA of 2.00 is required for those pursuing the certificate.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Other Enrollment Requirements: None

Students wishing to pursue the convention sales and meeting planning certificate should consult an academic advisor in the School of Community Resources and Development.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Correctional Studies Certificate (PPCRTSCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The certificate program in correctional studies educates students about a variety of components that make up the corrections system. It is designed to provide students with understanding and knowledge of the histories, philosophies and contemporary practices of both institutional and community corrections. The program emphasizes evidence-based best practices concerning the rehabilitation of correctional clients to reduce recidivism.

Program Requirements:

Required Courses -- 15 credit hours

CRJ 100: Introduction to Criminal Justice (SB) (3)

CRJ 240: Introduction to Corrections (3)

CRJ 443: Community Corrections (3)

CRJ 444: Institutional Corrections (3)

CRJ 445: Tools for Engaging Correctional Populations (3)

Elective Courses (choose two) -- 6 credit hours

CRJ 317: Inside-Out Prison Exchange Program (3)

CRJ 394: Special Topics (3)

Notes: Only approved corrections-related topics

CRJ 406: Sex Crimes (3)

CRJ 411: Legal Issues in Corrections (3)

CRJ 434: Drugs of Abuse (3)

CRJ 435: Crime and Forensic Mental Health (SB) (3)

CRJ 484: Internship (3)

CRJ 494: Special Topics (3)

Notes: Only approved corrections-related topics

Special Topics courses (CRJ 394 and CRJ 494) will be designated and approved by departments and schools. Students will need to work with an advisor in order to select appropriate special topics courses that are approved for credit in the correctional studies certificate program.

At least 15 credit hours must be taken in-residence at ASU.

Lower-division courses such as CRJ 100 (Introduction to Criminal Justice) and CRJ 240 (Introduction to Corrections) may be used to satisfy the requirements of any major or a minor at ASU, as well as requirements for the certificate program in correctional studies. No upper-division courses in criminology and criminal justice, however, may be used to satisfy the requirements of the certificate program in correctional studies and either the major or minor in criminology and criminal justice. For example, students majoring or minoring in criminology and criminal justice may not use CRJ 394, CRJ 406, CRJ 411, CRJ 434, CRJ 435, CRJ 443, CRJ 444, CRJ 445, CRJ 484, or CRJ 494 to satisfy the requirements of the certificate in correctional studies and either the major or minor in criminology and criminal justice.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students must complete CRJ 100 Introduction to Criminal Justice with a grade of "C" or better (scale is 4.00 = "A") in order to be admitted to the certificate program. This course may be taken in residence at ASU or may be transferred from other institutions, including community colleges. Because this course is a requirement for the bachelor's degree program and the minor in criminology and criminal justice, its completion satisfies the requirements of the major or minor and satisfies the prerequisite requirement for admission to the certificate program in correctional studies.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Creative City Certificate (PPURBCERC)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

Students explore best practices in a global context and develop asset-based proposals for specific locales including implementation plans.

The creative city certificate adds value to other majors as well as work and life experience for students aspiring to assume leadership roles in improving quality of life, specifically by enhancing quality of place.

Cities are centers of human creativity and cultural innovation; they both attract and breed these qualities of urban areas. Such creativity and innovation are apparent in the vitality of the arts as well as that of businesses (large and small), research (basic and applied) and the everyday life unique to any given locale. These are the ingredients that make places sustainable, economically, socially and environmentally, by endowing a sense of place along with a sense of community.

This certificate also serves professionals in the community working in the areas of community development, land-use law, parks and recreation, philanthropy, planning, public art, urban governance and others.

Flexible class times and locations make the program a viable option for those unable to attend classes during the day.

Program Requirements:

The creative city certificate consists of 15 credit hours of coursework. All courses must be taken at ASU.

Required Core Courses -- 6 credit hours

PAF 405: Citizen Engagement and Community Building (3)

PAF 406: Public Administration and Community Development (3)

Elective Courses -- 9 credit hours

CRD 301: Sustainable Communities (3)

CRD 302: Inclusive Community Development (SB & C) (3)

GRA 401: Creative Environment (3)

NLM 160: Voluntary Action and Community Leadership (SB) (3)

NLM 220: Introduction to Nonprofit Organizations (3)

NLM 300: Fund Raising and Resource Development (3)

NLM 402: Assessment and Evaluation of Community Services (3)

PAF 220: Introduction to Urban America (3)

PAF 420: Public Leadership (3)

PRM 120: Leisure and the Quality of Life (SB) (3)

PRM 210: Leisure Delivery Systems (3)

TDM 448: Heritage and Cultural Tourism (3)

A "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all coursework.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Criminal Investigations Certificate (PPCRICERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, West

Description:

The certificate in criminal investigations educates students about a variety of aspects of criminal investigations and criminalistics. It is designed to provide students of the social sciences, natural sciences, humanities and public services with an understanding of the nature of criminal evidence; the language of forensic science; the scope, probative value and limitations of a variety of investigative specializations and their techniques; and an appreciation of how forensic investigative methods are used in the quest for justice.

The certificate program allows students to satisfy at least two of their General Studies requirements (the SQ and SB) in a thematic manner, but it is not designed to prepare students to work in a crime laboratory.

Program Requirements:

Required Courses -- 12 credit hours

CRJ 100: Introduction to Criminal Justice (SB) (3)

CRJ 210: Introduction to Criminal Investigations (3)

CRJ 211: Documenting the Crime Scene (3)

CRJ 410: Procedural Criminal Law (3)

Elective Courses (choose three) -- 9 credit hours

CRJ 321: Imperatives of Proof (3)

CRJ 433: Death Investigations: Principles of Forensic Medicine (3)

CRJ 434: Drugs of Abuse (3)

CRJ 435: Crime and Forensic Mental Health (SB) (3)

CRJ 450: Crime Analysis (3)

CRJ 484: Internship (1-6)

CRJ 494: Special Topics (3)

Notes: only in approved investigations-related topics

FOR 350: Computer Forensics (3)

FOR 394: Special Topics (3)

Notes: only in approved investigations-related topics

FOR 410: Professional Practices in Forensic Science (L) (3)

FOR 484: Internship (1-6)

1. Special Topics courses (FOR 394 and CRJ 494) will be designated and approved by departments and schools. Students will need to work with an advisor in order to select appropriate special topics courses that are approved for credit in the criminal investigations certificate program.

2. At least 12 credit hours must be taken in-residence at ASU.

3. A "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all course work required for the certificate.

4. Upper-division course work may not be used to satisfy the requirements of both a major and the certificate. Thus, if any elective courses in the certificate program are being used to satisfy the requirements of a major, different elective courses must be taken to satisfy the requirements of the certificate program. For example, students majoring in criminology and criminal justice may not use CRJ 321, CRJ 410, CRJ 433, CRJ 434, CRJ 435, CRJ 450, CRJ 484 or CRJ 494 to satisfy the requirements of the major and the certificate in criminal investigations. Similarly, students majoring in forensic science may not use FOR 350, FOR 410 or FOR 484 to satisfy the requirements of the major and the certificate in criminal investigations.

Prerequisite Information

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

CRJ 100 Introduction to Criminal Justice, SB (3) is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in CRJ 210, CRJ 211, CRJ 433, CRJ 434, CRJ 435, CRJ 484 and CRJ 494.

ACO 100 All About Data: Design, Query, and Visualization, CS (3) is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in FOR 350 Computer Forensics.

Either FOR 286 Principles of Forensic Science (3) or the two semester sequence in FOR 105 and FOR 106 is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in FOR 410 Professional Practices in Forensic Science, L (3). ENG 102 or 105 or 108 are also prerequisites for FOR 410.

The completion of at least 45 credit hours is a prerequisite requirement to enroll in FOR 484 Internship.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students must complete the following prerequisite courses with a grade of "C" or higher (scale is 4.00 = "A") in order to be admitted to the certificate program. These courses may be taken in residence at ASU or may be transferred in from other institutions, including community colleges.

The following prerequisite courses are required for admission to the certificate program:

For students majoring in the social sciences, humanities or the arts:*

FOR 105 Physical Evidence and the Crime Scene, SQ (4) and

FOR 106 Biology Behind the Crime Scene, SQ (4)

For students majoring in the natural sciences:*

FOR 286 Principles of Forensic Science (4)

*Neither FOR 105 nor FOR 106 have any prerequisites. These courses are designed for students majoring in the social sciences, humanities or arts to meet the natural science requirement of ASU's General Studies program. Thus, students not majoring in the natural sciences who wish to declare the certificate program in criminal investigations must complete the two-course sequence in FOR 105 and FOR 106. In contrast, students majoring in the natural sciences, including forensic science, should not take FOR 105 and FOR 106; they need only complete FOR 286: Principles of Forensic Science, which has prerequisite requirements of BIO 181, BIO 182, CHM 113 and CHM 116.

Cross-Sector Leadership Certificate (PPCSLDCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The certificate program in cross-sector leadership provides a comprehensive overview of leading solutions to complex social challenges by integrating the public, private, nonprofit and military sectors.

Students engage in a systems-thinking approach to real-world challenges faced by local and global communities, explore the diverse characteristics and motives of each sector in engaging in cross-sector collaborations, and master processes to formalize such partnerships. Students gain leadership skills, such as leading change within and between organizations across multiple sectors, and they learn to use human-centered design, social entrepreneurship and other approaches when tackling community challenges. Students study values-based leadership and how individual, organizational and sector values can drive a leader's ability to act. Students end the program with a thesis or applied project that integrates the theories, procedures and concepts learned in the certificate courses with experiences from the students' internships in each sector.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in cross-sector leadership is a requirement for, and is limited to, participants in the Public Service Academy's Next Generation Service Corps, a four-year leadership development track that engages future civilian leaders in the public, private and nonprofit sectors to engage in collaboration and change in the context of social challenges in which they hold interest. Students are required to maintain a 3.00 ASU GPA, a 3.00 GPA across certificate courses and demonstrate forward academic progress to maintain enrollment in the certificate as well as the Next Generation Service Corps. ROTC students also may pursue the certificate, but must maintain a 3.00 GPA in certificate courses.

Required Courses -- 12 credit hours

CPP 101: Foundations of Cross Sector Leadership (1)
PAF 311: Leadership and Change (SB) (3)
CPP 201: NGSC Community Impact Lab (2)
CPP 301: Cross-Sector Collaboration (3)
CPP 410: Social Entrepreneurship (3)

Elective (Choose one) -- 3 credit hours

CPP 394: NGSC Leadership Instruction (3)
PAF 421: Leadership Capstone (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Enrollment in the 15-credit hour certificate program in cross-sector leadership is offered only to students participating in ASU's Next Generation Service Corps or in the Reserve Officers Training Corps. Enrollment requirements for the certificate are the same as admission requirements for the Next Generation Service Corps or Reserve Officer Training Corps (by request). Public Service Academy staff and the Watts College of Public Service and Community Solutions Dean's Office enroll the students.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree.

Cryptography Certificate (LACRYCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in cryptology is designed to provide a strong foundation in the mathematical topics that are most applicable to modern cryptosystems. It also provides specialized knowledge required to understand and work in the field of mathematical cryptology.

Program Requirements:

This certificate requires 18 credit hours. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required for all courses.

Required Courses -- 12 credit hours

MAT 440: Group Theory or MAT 444: Intermediate Abstract Algebra (3)

MAT 445: Theory of Numbers (3)

MAT 447: Cryptography I (3)

MAT 448: Cryptography II (3)

Elective Courses (select two) -- 6 credit hours

MAT 415: Introduction to Combinatorics (3)

MAT 416: Graph Theory (3)

MAT 441: Ring Theory (3)

STP 421: Probability (3)

STP 427: Mathematical Statistics (3)

Students may substitute an approved cryptography-related internship for 3 credit hours of elective coursework.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

This program has additional admission requirements; students should see a college advisor for details. Applicants should be in good academic standing with a "B" or better (scale is 4.00 = "A") in MAT 300 Mathematical Structures (3) or the equivalent.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Data Science Certificate (ASDTSCERT)

Campus:

Description:

The data science certificate program combines the strengths of database skills with interdisciplinary computational statistics.

The program provides students with an understanding of the computational and statistical methods used to extract insights from complex datasets and provides hands-on experience with them. In particular, it includes courses that cover key techniques for the different stages of the data science process: data collection, data processing for small and big data, data cleaning, exploratory data analysis, data visualization, predictive modeling with machine learning techniques, and statistical modeling.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in data science consists of a minimum of 15 upper-division credit hours. All courses used to satisfy requirements for the certificate must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better.

Required Courses -- 9 credit hours

ACO 320: Database Systems (3)

ACO 423: Data Science (3)

STP 315: Statistical Computing (3)

Electives -- 6 credit hours

ACO 321: Database Development & Applications (3)

ACO 420: Big Data Systems (3)

ACO 421: Data Mining and Warehousing (3)

BMI 311: Modeling Biomedical Knowledge (3)

BMI 312: Modeling Biomedical Data (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Prerequisites for this certificate are:

ACO 201 Data Structures and Algorithms (3)

MAT 243 Discrete Mathematical Structures (3) or MAT 300 Mathematical Structures (3)

STP 226 Elements of Statistics (3)

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Desert Food Production Certificate (LSDFPRCERT)

Campus: Polytechnic

Description:

The certificate program in desert food production equips students interested in producing foods locally with the knowledge and skills necessary to grow edible plants and to navigate the challenges unique to desert climates.

Coursework in the program emphasizes organic food production, sustainable horticultural technologies, green waste reduction, water conservation, maintaining biodiversity and biological cycles, and enhancing soil quality. Students gain marketable skills that enable them to participate in the growing trend of producing and supporting the consumption of local foods.

Program Requirements:

The desert food production certificate requires a minimum of 18 credit hours.

A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all courses.

Required Courses -- 12 credit hours

ABS 260: Fundamentals of Sustainable Horticulture (SG) (4)

ABS 368: Plant Propagation (3)

ABS 460: Organic Gardening (2)

ABS 464: Desert Horticulture (3)

Elective Courses -- 6 credit hours

At least four credit hours of certificate electives must be from upper-division courses.

No more than two credit hours of ABS 484 Internship may be counted toward the certificate requirements.

ABS 225: Soils (SQ) (3)

ABS 226: Soils Laboratory (SQ) (1)

ABS 360: Southwest Home Gardening (2)

ABS 462: Greenhouse/Nursery Management (4)

ABS 484: Internship (2)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

GPA Requirement: 2.00

Digital Business Innovation Certificate (BADBICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

This certificate program in digital business innovation provides students with a broad overview of modern-day digital information systems. It gives exposure to modern tools for transforming business processes, maintaining digital presence and developing analytical insights.

Students who complete the program will be well suited for the business landscape, phenomenally transformed in recent years by digital innovations.

Program Requirements:

The digital innovation certificate is available to all majors. To earn the certificate, students must complete all courses with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a scale of 4.00) or better. No more than six credit hours may be shared between the certificate and other degree programs, minors, and/or other certificates.

Required Courses -- 18 credit hours

Digital Culture Certificate (HIDGCCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The digital culture certificate program in the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts focuses on the creative exploration of how new media is influencing culture, or rather the way people live, learn, create and communicate.

Pursuing the digital culture certificate allows students to enhance their program of study with integrated, transdisciplinary training in creative processes and technical skills in new media with cultural applications.

Program Requirements:

The digital culture certificate requires 18 credit hours (12 upper-division).

A minimum grade of a "C" (2.00) and an overall GPA of 3.00 is required in all classes in the certificate program. Courses in the certificate program may not be used as part of a major. All upper-division certificate coursework must be taken at ASU.

Required Courses -- 6 credit hours

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Generous substitution rules allow for course flexibility. Students receiving the digital culture certificate can petition to substitute up to six credit hours. Three credit hours can come from any course related to digital culture through courses offered by any ASU unit on any ASU campus, including the interdisciplinary arts and performance program on the West campus and the film and media studies program on the Tempe campus. Courses may include any on the list of related subjects and substitutions (shown above) or courses with comparable content.

The other three substitution hours can be achieved through the following path:

The three-hour media arts and design course requirement may be substituted with a three-hour course in the digital culture-related category. Students who earn a digital culture certificate cannot earn a minor in digital culture.

Enrollment Requirements:

Degree-seeking undergraduates or nondegree-seeking graduate students may add the digital culture certificate. To add the certificate, students must meet with the digital culture academic success coordinator to develop a pathway that best meets the proficiencies for the work they are interested in pursuing. Students then meet with the academic advisor for their major to add the certificate.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Disability Studies Certificate (LADISCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

As a vibrant and diverse area of academic study, disability studies utilizes a cross-disability, intersectional and interdisciplinary approach that views disability as a social construct and people with disabilities as a minority group. The program in disability studies draws upon diverse disciplines such as history, sociology, law, policy studies, economics, anthropology, geography, philosophy, theology, gender studies, media studies, architecture and the arts in order to understand the social, cultural and political situation of disabled cultures. Students are critically challenged to reject simplistic definitions of disability as a restrictive, functional impairment that requires "fixing" or "curing". Rather, students learn to identify disability as a construct that finds its meaning within cultural contexts, is central to individual and social identity and crucial to changing political processes and public attitudes.

This program prioritizes development of theoretical, methodological, educational and advocacy models that redefine legal, physical, policy and attitudinal barriers excluding disabled communities from society.

Program Requirements:

Students must complete 15 credit hours with at least 12 hours completed at the upper-division level. A minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) is required for a course to count toward the certificate.

Students should contact the School of Social Transformation advising center for more information.

Required Courses -- 6 credit hours

Diversity and Equity Studies Certificate (ASDESCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

This certificate program in diversity and equity studies develops students' intercultural competence through knowledge gained related to the histories, practices and perspectives of diverse groups, both local and global. Reflecting on this knowledge permits students to develop strategies to work with and through differences of gender, race, ethnicity, sexuality, age, religion and class. Integrative social sciences perspectives enable bridge-building within and across differences to redress inequalities.

This certificate is valuable to those pursuing careers in medicine, law, business and management, public policy, human resources, media, government and community advocacy.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in diversity and equity studies requires a minimum of 15 credit hours (at least 12 must be upper-division), consisting of a core of three credit hours and 12 credit hours of electives. Only courses in which a student receives a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet certificate requirements.

Six credit hours must be completed through the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences. A maximum of six credit hours may be shared between the certificate and major requirements. A maximum of three credit hours of internship or individualized instruction may be applied to the certificate. Electives are not limited to the certificate elective list; see academic advisor prior to enrollment. Students are encouraged to take courses that develop breadth rather than limiting their selection to courses in one particular discipline.

Required Core Course -- 3 credit hours

SBS 301: Cultural Diversity ((L or SB) & C) (3)

Elective Courses (minimum 9 upper-division) -- 12 credit hours

Students will select 12 elective credit hours from course work related to diversity and equity studies. Selected courses must come from at least two of the following prefixes: ASB, JHR, POS, SBS or SOC.

ASB 211: Women in Other Cultures ((HU or SB) & G) (3)

ASB 311: Principles of Social Anthropology (SB & G & H) (3)

Domestic Violence and Evidence-based Practice Certificate (PPDVEPCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The certificate program in domestic violence and evidence-based practice provides students with the experience and knowledge to intervene safely and effectively on behalf of the survivors of gender-based violence, a vulnerable group that helping professionals are likely to encounter in all areas of practice. Those knowledgeable about the dynamics of intimate partner violence are better equipped to assist those suffering its negative physical and mental health consequences.

Evidence-based care is crucial in domestic violence settings. Students of the certificate program engage in service-based and classroom learning to understand the role of evidence-based interventions in promoting survivor safety and client empowerment. Upon completion of the program, certificate holders become Arizona state-certified advocates for victims of domestic violence.

Program Requirements:

During their first semester in the certificate, students enroll in SWU 416, Domestic Violence and National AmeriCorps Service.

A grade of B or better is required in each course to satisfy the certificate.

Students must participate in an approved internship for a minimum of 300 hours.

Required Courses -- 9 credit hours

SWU 416: Domestic Violence and National AmeriCorps Service (3)

SWU 484: Internship or SWU 412: Field Instruction I (3)

Notes: Other internship credit may be substituted with department approval.

SWU 484: Internship or SWU 414: Field Instruction II (3)

Notes: Other internship credit may be substituted with department approval.

Electives -- 6 credit hours

SWU 417: Technology, Interpersonal Relationships and Abuse (3)

SWU 418: Global Violence Against Women (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

All students seeking the certificate must have 56 credit hours of coursework completed with a minimum GPA of 2.50. In order to enroll in SWU 416, students must have a current Arizona fingerprint clearance card, which will be verified through the State of Arizona system.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Energy and Sustainability Certificate (SUESUCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe

Description:

The transdisciplinary certificate program in energy and sustainability examines current energy systems and explores what will be required to transition to a sustainable energy future. Students begin with an overview of how energy affects peoples' lives, the basic science and methods of energy production, and a full overview of energy policy options. Students then select additional energy courses from across many disciplines, depending on their specific interests.

An understanding of energy is increasingly important for jobs related to environmental quality, national security and the efficient functioning of cities. This program helps students enhance their understanding of the technology and infrastructure for generating, distributing and using energy; the associated sustainability issues; and the social and policy dimensions of energy systems. Students may further tailor the certificate around their unique interests in energy with a variety of electives representing a broad array of academic disciplines. The breadth of their energy knowledge is enriched by taking courses outside their primary area of study.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in Energy and Sustainability consists of 15 credit hours, at least 12 of which must be upper-division.
A GPA of 2.50 is required for all courses completed in the certificate.

Required Core Courses -- 9 credit hours

STS 332: Global Issues in Science and Technology (SB) (3)
TEM 450: Design for the Developing World (3)

394, 494 and 498 courses must be taken with the specific course title/topic indicated above.

Energy elective courses are not limited to courses from this list only. Other courses on energy may be offered (special topics, etc.). Students may request to have those approved as an elective for this certificate by submitting a School of Sustainability standards petition:
https://students.asu.edu/College_Standards_Petitions . Completed petitions may be submitted directly to sosadvising@asu.edu.

Students must earn a grade of "C" or better in all courses.

Some energy elective courses have prerequisites. Any and all prerequisites must be met in order to select and enroll in those courses.

Some energy elective courses are more technical in nature, which may require additional math and science knowledge or prerequisites.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students who wish to declare a certificate in energy and sustainability should make an appointment with a College of Global Futures advisor.

Advising is by appointment only, scheduled through this website: <https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/advising/undergraduate-advising/>

Ethics Certificate (LAETHCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The ethics certificate program is designed to give students a richer understanding of systematic philosophical thinking about ethics. Students with majors in business, nursing, journalism and public administration as well as students planning to pursue legal careers, among others, may well find that training in ethics is beneficial to their career goals. The certificate program permits some flexibility regarding course selection, thereby facilitating particular student interests.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in ethics consists of 18 credit hours approved by an undergraduate advisor in the School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies. All courses must be passed with a minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale). At least 12 credit hours must be upper-division. At least six upper-division hours must be in courses offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Core Course (choose one) -- 3 credit hours

PHI 335: History of Ethics (HU) (3)

 PHI 420: Normative Ethics (3)
 PHI 420: Stoicism (3)
 PHI 420: Topics in the Ethics of Sustainability (3)
 PHI 420: Well-Being: Philosophy of Happiness (3)

PHI 420 is a variable topics course that may be taken more than once, so long as the topics are different. Only topics related to ethics will apply to the certificate.

One course outside the list of electives, and perhaps outside the PHI prefix, may be used with written approval of the director of undergraduate studies.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Incompatible Majors: BA in philosophy (morality, politics and law)

Students must consult with an academic advisor in the School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies to declare the certificate.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. European Studies Certificate (LAESCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The European studies certificate provides a broad overview of the European countries, from their natural environment to their cultural, demographic, economic and political aspects. The fluid nature and the pressing issues facing Europe today reveal both its tremendous diversity and the globalizing elements that invite investigation.

This certificate, a transdisciplinary collaboration involving several faculties of the School of International Letters and Cultures and other ASU faculty engaged in the study of Europe, serves a diverse population of students who would like to enhance their knowledge of European cultures for both academic and professional purposes. This program focuses on the interconnectedness of knowledge involving European cultures, politics, religions, ethnicities, social-economic justice and sustainable solutions to old and new challenges and divisions in today's Europe. It also develops students' ability to analyze the historical development of the region and its exchanges with other world cultures. Students analyze what it meant to be European in the past and what it means today and how that knowledge can be applied to contemporary political and cultural debates as well as to professional opportunities in the region.

Program Requirements:

Evolutionary Medicine Certificate (LAEVMDCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

With rising need for health science-related skills and an aging population in the United States, innovations in health and medicine are in demand. Evolutionary medicine is a new and burgeoning field situated between the life and social sciences that seeks to integrate the fields of evolutionary biology, genetics, medicine, global health and public health to transform our understanding of disease and improve human health. Students who complete this certificate program learn how to integrate perspectives from across fields to answer questions about health and disease in the context of human life history.

Students are introduced to integrated approaches within the biological and social sciences that are capable of address an emerging, anticipated public need such as reemerging infectious disease, challenges with vaccines, the expansion of chronic disease and other growing public health crises.

Film and Video Studies Certificate (ASVIDCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

In the certificate program in film and video studies, students explore film theory and the practice of the moving image. Through this interdisciplinary program, students have an opportunity to develop their interests, skills and understanding of the forms, channels, technologies and histories of the media arts.

Coursework helps students become more astute critics of film and media arts. Students learn about the history of film, television and video arts as well as their place in social, cultural and political expression. This program also helps students strengthen their critical thinking skills through an analysis of the ongoing philosophical, aesthetic, political and technological debates about film, media and video.

Through this program, students gain valuable skills for future careers or graduate study in areas such as video and film production, film studies, media studies or digital design.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in film and video studies consists of 18 credit hours, of which 12 credit hours must be upper-division. A minimum of six upper-division hours must be completed through courses offered by the School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies. Students choose a focus in either film studies or media and video studies. The film studies emphasis focuses on the impact of film and video. The media and video studies emphasis is concerned with the rendering of film and video. All courses used to satisfy the requirements for this certificate must be passed with a minimum grade of "C" (2.00) or better.

Global Management Certificate (TBTGMCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, West

Description:

Research from McKinsey and Company, a highly respected consulting firm, indicates that in the near future, almost 40% of the growth globally will result from just 400 cities in emerging markets around the world. This certificate program in global management provides broad-based training in global business and global studies that helps prepare students for a global management career. It offers unique courses that integrate an in-depth understanding of the political, economic and cultural aspects of doing business in specific regions with tools to assess business trends in specific countries.

Thunderbird School of Global Management has produced unique leaders for more than 70 years. Home to the Bachelor of Global Management and Bachelor of International Trade, the school's innovative and practical curriculum complements a strong core of global business management skills, international political economy and cross-cultural training, with a transdisciplinary approach. The alumni network has over 45,000 graduates across 170 chapters around the globe.

Program Requirements:

The global management certificate requires a minimum of 18 credit hours as outlined below, with a minimum of 12 upper-division credits. Students are encouraged to take courses that develop breadth within their sector rather than limiting their selection to courses in one particular subject area.

Required Course -- 3 credit hours

TGM 101: Principles of Global Management (G) (3)

It is recommended that students take TGM 101 prior to or concurrently with other TGM courses.

Electives -- 15 credit hours

Health and Wellness Coach Certificate (NHHWCCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, West

Description:

This certificate program brings together coursework from the disciplines of exercise and wellness, nutrition, behavioral health and coaching psychology to give students a strong background, perspective and real-life experiences in applied coaching techniques and methods used to decrease and prevent chronic disease risks.

Students learn evidence-based behavior change methodologies and practice coaching communication skills and strategies to influence sustainable healthy lifestyles. They learn to guide groups and individuals through meaningful lifestyle changes by using concepts that emphasize evidence-based coaching and behavioral practices as well as motivational interviewing techniques.

Students work with clients using learned health coaching techniques, and they develop the knowledge and skills to work with people who require lifestyle management strategies to improve their well-being. Faculty consistently monitor and mentor coaching sessions to provide evaluation and feedback on how students may improve their coaching skills, and a final practical skills evaluation is completed to assess a student's coaching abilities. Coaching skills are addressed synchronously over telephone, in person, or via Skype or some other video platform.

History and Philosophy of Science Certificate (LAHPSCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The undergraduate certificate program in the history and philosophy of science is designed to give students an understanding of the traditional philosophical issues surrounding science and the historical development of concrete scientific theories and ideas.

Philosophical questions about how we understand nature through science and how scientific claims gain authority are enriched when they are considered in a historical context. Such philosophical and historical study also often includes the examination of contemporary sciences and their place within the larger society, including the study of bioethics, policy and law.

This certificate is a valuable addition for students in the sciences or humanities. It crosses disciplines to help students engage in unfamiliar and familiar paths of inquiry in new and interesting ways.

The program is offered by the School of Life Sciences.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 18 credit hours from the HPS and PHI prefixes. At least 12 credit hours must be completed at the upper-division level and all courses counting toward the certificate must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Required Course -- 3 credit hours

PHI 314 / HPS 314: Philosophy of Science (HU) (3)

Electives (choose five) -- 15 credit hours

At least nine credit hours must be taken in upper-division HPS courses. Any upper-division HPS course may be used toward the certificate.

Hospice and Palliative Care Certificate (NHHAPCCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The certificate program in hospice and palliative care is designed to provide future health and health care workers with the skills and competencies to lead and manage end-of-life care through a variety of settings, including home health care. Students learn from interprofessional instructors who are involved in hospice and palliative care as physicians, social workers, nurses and bereavement counselors, and who work with both children and adults as well as meet with hospice patients. Students get specialized instruction on dementia and Alzheimer's disease, as well as learn about how these contemporary health care issues are burdening our health care system under its current structure. Lastly, students finish their certificate by completing an internship at Hospice of the Valley where they will work with patients and their families to help provide non-clinical care needs.

Program Requirements:

Required Courses -- 12 credit hours

MED 275: Elements of Hospice and Palliative Care (3)

MED 375: Alzheimer's and Other Dementias (3)

MED 475: Palliative Care: Managing Complex Serious Illness (3)

MED 484: Internship (3)

Notes: Directed by Dr. Gillian Hamilton at Hospice of the Valley. A minimum ASU cumulative GPA of 3.00 is required to enroll.

Elective Courses -- 6 credit hours

Informatics Certificate (ESCPICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in informatics teaches students to use computer technology to gather, synthesize, store, visualize and interpret information. These skills are critical to a broad range of disciplines.

This program provides students with an understanding of the capabilities and technologies of informatics as it applies to domain-specific problems in their field of study. Graduates are able to understand and use methods for the basic computational principles behind the operation of communication, networking and interaction; decision-making and problem-solving; modeling, inference and visualization; representing, creating and running routine activities; and storing, indexing and retrieving information.

Graduates should be in high demand within the software industry and in government, education, science, medicine and other fields that make use of computer technology. Those with the applied and user-oriented focus of the certificate are attractive to such employers.

Program Requirements:

This certificate requires 21 credit hours of coursework, of which at least 12 must be upper-division. Students take 15 credit hours of required courses and select six credit hours of elective coursework.

Required Courses -- 15 credit hours

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The undergraduate certificate in informatics is available to all students who are in good standing at ASU who have completed CSE 205, MAT 242 and MAT 243 with a "C" grade or better. This concentration may also be used by interdisciplinary studies BA students as part of their degree program.

Students need to submit an undergraduate certificate form to the School of Computing, Informatics and Decision Systems Engineering Academic Advising Center located in Centerpoint, room 105. This form is available on the registrar's website. Interdisciplinary studies students need to contact their advisor to add the informatics concentration to their degree program.

This certificate is available through the Pathways for the Future program: <https://pff.asu.edu/> (<https://pff.asu.edu/>). Applicants with or without a bachelor's degree are eligible to apply for, and receive, this certificate, through the Pathways for the Futures program. Applicants must have completed CSE 205, MAT 242 and MAT 243, or the equivalents, with a "C" grade or higher (scale is 4.00 = "A"). Applicants who have taken these courses at another institution should use the Transfer Guide course search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/home> (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/home>)) to determine if a transfer course can fulfill the prerequisite course requirements. Applicants who already hold a bachelor's degree should apply to ASU and this certificate program as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Innovation for Impact Certificate (FIIFICERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The innovation for impact certificate program enables students to cultivate the knowledge, skills and critical dispositions necessary to leverage the power of innovation and achieve personally meaningful and socially significant impact. The program is grounded in the belief that each person can do great things.

Students learn tools and concepts for synthesizing research from courses across disciplines in social sciences, humanities, natural sciences and engineering. Students identify a problematic condition or aspirational future and work with peers, mentors and the community to produce innovations that cultivate a better future for society.

Program Requirements:

Required Courses -- 15 credit hours
FIS 201: Innovation in Society (H) (3)
FIS 305: Ways of Knowing (L) (3)
FIS 307: Navigating Futures (SB) (3)

International Business Certificate (BAIBSCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Students can expand their horizons and opportunities by learning about the global economy. The certificate program in international business studies is designed to help students develop competence in a foreign language and sensitivity to foreign cultures. It provides an awareness of global social processes and an understanding of international business environments, principles and operations.

The W. P. Carey School of Business has partnerships with universities all over the world, so students can experience new cultures, visit new places and build intercultural and language skills. International internships also are offered in conjunction with the ASU Study Abroad Office.

Program Requirements:

This certificate program requires a minimum of 18 credit hours (at least 12 credit hours must be upper-division). All business coursework must be completed through the W. P. Carey School of Business or through an approved ASU international study program.

Only courses in which a student receives a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better may be used to meet the certificate requirements, and an overall certificate GPA of at least 2.50 must be earned.

Students must meet all course prerequisites and requirements as listed in the ASU catalog. Requirements must be met within one year after degree conferral date.

B. Nonbusiness Global Awareness Coursework -- 9 credit hours

Nonbusiness Global Awareness Coursework (9)

Notes: These hours may be satisfied by any combination of the following:

1. Students can choose any of the university-designated nonbusiness global awareness ("G") courses.
2. One course must be upper-division to meet the 12 upper-division hours requirement.
3. Recommended: It is recommended to choose courses related to the area of study abroad experience. Additional courses may be approved by the international program coordinator.
4. Nonbusiness global awareness hours may also be satisfied by:

* An ASU or W. P. Carey School of Business education abroad program earning six credit hours or more fulfills six of the credit hours of nonbusiness global requirements.

* An ASU or W. P. Carey School of Business education abroad program earning three credit hours fulfills three of the credit hours of nonbusiness global requirements.

C. Foreign Language Proficiency

The certificate program requires students to meet a foreign language proficiency by meeting one of the the following:

- Completion of one year (two semesters) of the same foreign language at the college level.
- Completion of one semester of the equivalent of 101- and 102-level course work.
- Completion of two years of the same foreign language in high school with a minimum grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale).
- Documentation of a proficiency test confirming preparedness to start at least the second year of a foreign language (201 level or above).
- A student whose native language is not English may have this requirement waived.

D. International Study Experience

The certificate program requires students to participate in an ASU Study Abroad Office sponsored program. Students cannot use independent non-sponsored programs to fulfill this requirement. Sponsored programs can be found on the Study Abroad Office website at <https://mystudyabroad.asu.edu/>.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

The certificate application is accessed and submitted through Advising SOS: <http://wpcarey.asu.edu/sos> (<http://wpcarey.asu.edu/sos>). Students should contact the department for more information.

No more than six credit hours may be shared between certificate and other degree programs, minors, or other certificates.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

International Cinema Certificate (LAICINCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The power of international cinema lies in its ability to underscore national differences and engage diverse viewpoints.

The certificate program in international cinema provides undergraduates with the means to explore and understand the role that international film plays in highlighting cultural diversity, reflecting the sociocultural, political and economic currents of the period and cultural setting depicted, and calling into question an accepted idea of the dominance of Hollywood film.

Following an integrated pathway through the variety of international film courses, the certificate program explores facets of international film history and production not often covered by American programs in film studies. Students majoring in a second language can explore a particular culture's filmic heritage and traverse avenues for comparative analysis between the filmic heritage of two or more cultures. Students majoring in other areas can encounter visual narratives different from their own and connect international cinema to their own respective experiences.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 18 credit hours of upper-division coursework. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Required Core Course -- 3 credit hours

International Trade Certificate (TBINTRCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, West

Description:

International trade is increasingly important in this globalized economy, but also increasingly challenging. The International Monetary Fund predicts that most of the world's economic growth in the next decade will take place in the largest emerging markets, which are not always easy for companies and nonprofit organizations to penetrate. Most of the world's consumers are outside of the United States. Given these trends, organizations across sectors that operate in multiple countries are increasingly in need of managers who understand the complexities of the global economy.

The certificate program in international trade provides students with an understanding of foreign markets and the intricacies of international trade, laying the foundation for a career that can take them anywhere in the world.

Thunderbird School of Global Management has produced unique leaders for more than 70 years, leaders in every sector capable of tackling the world's greatest challenges. Home to the Bachelor of Global Management and Bachelor of International Trade, the school's innovative and practical curriculum complements a strong core of global business management skills, international political economy, and cross-cultural training, with a transdisciplinary approach. The alumni network has over 45,000 graduates across 170 chapters around the globe.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in international trade requires a minimum of 18 credit hours as outlined below, with a minimum of 12 upper-division credits. Students are encouraged to take courses that develop breadth within their sector rather than limiting their selection to courses in one particular subject area.

Required Courses -- 6 credit hours

TGM 101: Principles of Global Management (G) (3)

TGM 430: International Trade and Regional Economic Agreements (3)

It is recommended that students take TGM 101 prior to or concurrently with other TGM courses.

Electives -- 12 credit hours

TGM 204: Principles of Marketing for Global Organizations (3)

TGM 300: Principles of Finance for Global Organizations (3)

TGM 310: Supply Chain Operations for Global Organizations (3)

TGM 312: Big Data in the Global Economy (3)

TGM 353: Asia Region (G) (3)

TGM 353: Latin America Region (G) (3)

TGM 460: Global Risk Assessment and Management (3)

TGM 468: States and Markets in a Global Economy (SB & G) (3)

TGM 478: Cross-Cultural Communication and Negotiation (3)

TGM 489: Multinational Organizational Leadership (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Study abroad or international experience is encouraged but not required. Consider ASU Study Abroad (<https://mystudyabroad.asu.edu/>) opportunities.

Enrollment Requirements:

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Korean Studies Certificate (LAKORCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in Korean studies aims to train and produce students who are linguistically capable and culturally informed.

The program consists of two major components. The first builds students' Korean language proficiency in the areas of speaking, listening, reading and writing. The second offers students a broad range of knowledge of the culture, literature, history, art and religions of Korea. The certificate allows students to focus on Korean studies.

The program enriches students' perspectives on different cultures and societies at the intellectual level and also equips them with practical knowledge of Korea that will benefit careers in various professions, including academia, government work, international trade, nongovernmental organizations and translation.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in Korean studies requires a minimum of 22 credit hours, of which at least 12 must be completed at the upper-division level. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Korean Language -- 10 credit hours

Students must choose one two-course sequence from KOR 101, KOR 102, KOR 201, KOR 202, for a total of 10 credit hours. Course substitutions may be permitted for heritage speakers and other advanced speakers of the Korean language based on their proficiency level as determined by the Korean Placement Test.

KOR 101: First-Year Korean I (5)

KOR 102: First-Year Korean II (5)

KOR 201: Second-Year Korean I (G) (5)

KOR 202: Second-Year Korean II (G) (5)

Upper-Division Electives -- 12 credit hours

KOR 321: Modern Korean Literature (HU) (3)

KOR 347: Korean Film and Literature (HU) (3)

KOR 350: Women of Korea (H) (3)

KOR 354: Religions of Korea (HU) (3)

Additional courses may be approved in consultation with an academic advisor in the School of International Letters and Cultures or the coordinator of the certificate. The completion of the requirements will be reviewed both by the students' designated advisors and the coordinator of the program. Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

ASU students admitted to a degree program in any field of study are eligible for the Korean studies certificate program. Students should contact the School of International Letters and Cultures for more information about completing the certificate.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Latin American Studies Certificate (LALASCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The Latin American studies certificate is designed to give students an understanding of the culture, economies, political structures and history of Latin American nations.

The program combines six courses across disciplinary boundaries to provide a diverse perspective of the Latin American experience. The Department of Economics, the School of Geographical Sciences and Urban Planning, the School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies, the School of Politics and Global Studies, the School of Human Evolution and Social Change, the School of International Letters and Cultures (Spanish and Portuguese) and the School of Transborder Studies offer courses that comprise the transdisciplinary certificate.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires a minimum of 18 credit hours of Latin American studies content. At least 12 upper-division credit hours must be completed from coursework offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Each course must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher.

Language Requirement

Students must demonstrate Spanish or Portuguese proficiency through the 313 level of conversation and composition. The language proficiency requirement may be waived for native speakers or those with in-field experience equivalent to SPA 313 or POR 313.

Language instruction courses dealing with Spanish and Portuguese conversation and composition cannot be used to satisfy the content course requirement. While students are encouraged to enroll in language instruction courses (i.e., conversation and composition) above the 313 level, they cannot apply such coursework to the Latin American studies certificate course requirements.

Latin American Content Course Requirements -- 18 credit hours

Students will take 18 upper-division credit hours (six courses) from this list of Latin American content courses. Students are required to select nine credit hours (three courses) from within their major and nine credit hours (three courses) outside their major.

Law and Human Behavior Certificate (PPLWHBCERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Tempe, West

Description:

Law and human behavior is an umbrella term that encompasses various aspects of the rapidly emerging field of forensic psychology, law and justice.

This 18-credit hour certificate program focuses on the criminal justice aspects of forensic psychology, emphasizing victimology, offender treatment, criminal incapacity, mental health law, juvenile justice and delinquency, and the dynamics of how the criminal justice system intersects with behavioral science. The program is designed to provide students of social services and social sciences with an understanding of important but understudied areas where justice policy is in desperate need of empirical, psychological research.

Program Requirements:

Required Core -- 12 credit hours

CRJ 260: Substantive Criminal Law (3)

CRJ 410: Procedural Criminal Law (3)

PSY 366: Abnormal Psychology (SB) (3)

PSY 468: Psychology and Law (3)

Electives (choose two from outside of one's major) -- 6 credit hours

CRJ 309: Criminology (SB) (3)

CRJ 403: Victims and the Criminal Justice System (3)

CRJ 406: Sex Crimes (3)

CRJ 434: Drugs of Abuse (3)

CRJ 435: Crime and Forensic Mental Health (SB) (3)

CRJ 484: Internship (1-6)

Notes: Only those relevant to law and human behavior

CRJ 494: Special Topics (3)

Notes: Only those relevant to law and human behavior

PSY 341: Developmental Psychology (SB) (3)

PSY 368: Forensic Psychology (3)

PSY 443: Abnormal Child Psychology (L or SB) (3)

PSY 472: Clinical Psychology (3)

PSY 474: Correctional Psychology (3)

PSY 494: Special Topics (3)

Notes: Only those relevant to law and human behavior

1. Special Topics courses (CRJ 494 and PSY 494) will be designated and approved by departments and schools. Students will need to work with an advisor in order to select appropriate special topics courses that are approved for credit in the law and human behavior certificate program.

2. At least 12 credit hours must be taken in-residence at ASU.

3. A "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better is required in all course work required for the certificate.

4. Bachelor of Science in criminology and criminal justice majors who are also pursuing the Law and Human Behavior certificate may not use CRJ 309, CRJ 403, CRJ 406, CRJ 410, CRJ 434, CRJ 435, CRJ 484, and CRJ 494 towards both their degree and certificate.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students must complete the following prerequisite courses with a grade of "C" or higher (scale is 4.00 = "A") in order to enroll in the certificate program. These courses may be taken in-residence at ASU or may be transferred in from other institutions, including community colleges. Because these courses are requirements for the bachelor's degree program in psychology or criminology and criminal justice, their completion satisfies not only requirements of these two majors, but also the prerequisite requirements for enrollment in the certificate program in law and human behavior.

Completion of the following prerequisite courses with grades of "C" or higher are required for enrollment in the certificate program:

- CRJ 100 Introduction to Criminal Justice
- PSY 101 Introduction to Psychology

- first-year composition (ENG 102, 105 or 107)
- a course which meets the General Studies MA requirement (MAT 117, 119, 142, 170, 210 or 270)

one of the following two-course sequences in statistics and research methods:

- CRJ 302 and 303, or
- PSY 230 and 290

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Leadership and Ethics Certificate (PPLDECERT)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Description:

The certificate program in leadership and ethics focuses on understanding the broad transdisciplinary field of leadership and its application to various elements of society and community, and it prepares individuals for positions of leadership and responsibility in the university, in student organizations, in their communities and throughout their careers in business and government.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in leadership and ethics requires four core courses (12 credit hours), including a leadership capstone experience, plus one elective discipline-based course in leadership or ethics (3 credit hours). The three credit hours of elective course work may be selected from an approved list of elective courses or upon the recommendation of the department.

All courses applied to the certificate must be completed with a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or better.

Core Courses -- 12 credit hours

- PAF 311: Leadership and Change (SB) (3)
- PAF 410: Building Leadership Skills (SB) (3)
- PAF 421: Leadership Capstone (3)
- PAF 460: Public Service Ethics (3)

All core courses and the leadership capstone must be taken at Arizona State University. Any course substitutions for the certificate are at the discretion of the School of Public Affairs.

Elective Course (choose one) -- 3 credit hours

- COM 430: Leadership in Group Communication (3)
- HON 497: Honors Colloquium (3)
- MGT 300: Organization and Management Leadership (3)
- NLM 430: Managing Nonprofit Organizations (L) (3)
- PAF 420: Public Leadership (3)
- POS 314: The American Presidency (SB) (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students are encouraged to schedule an appointment with the undergraduate academic advisor in the School of Public Affairs.

Current students interested in earning the certificate must complete a request to add an undergraduate certificate and return it to the undergraduate academic advisor in the School of Public Affairs at the University Center on the Downtown Phoenix campus. Students may begin taking courses before they formally register for the certificate; however, they are encouraged to complete the paperwork as soon as possible.

Those interested may download the request to add an undergraduate certificate located at <https://students.asu.edu/forms/undergraduate-certificate> (<https://students.asu.edu/forms/undergraduate-certificate>).

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Certificate (PPLGBTCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender studies offers students a multifaceted understanding of society.

Lesbians, gay men, bisexuals and transgender people play important roles as colleagues, clients, parents, children, siblings, neighbors, employees, employers, religious leaders and friends. Given the increasing visibility and changing political climate for LGBTQ people in the United States, all students, not only those who identify themselves as gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender, are served well by learning about the histories, communities and contemporary social issues regarding people from LGBTQ backgrounds.

The educational experience is enhanced when students are introduced to complex intersections between and among sexual, racial, ethnic, religious, geographic and national identities. The philosophy of this certificate program in lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender studies is to promote intellectual and pedagogical diversity as one of the university's greatest assets, and this is done, in part, by instilling in students a sensitivity to cultures different from their own and through careful analysis of the self in historical, artistic and sociocultural contexts.

The goals of the certificate program are to give students knowledge about the history, evolution of and current issues facing the LGBTQ community; practical experience utilizing coursework knowledge in the community through an internship or community service project; and theoretical perspectives on heterosexuality as a presumptive sexual identity. Students gain an understanding of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender studies as an academic area of inquiry; an understanding of community politics, dynamics and conflicts; and engages in a use-inspired education that culminates in a public presentation.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 15 credit hours; a minimum of 12 must be upper-division.

Power and Society Certificate (ASPWSOCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The certificate program in power and society prepares students to think critically and practically about the relationship between power and society.

Courses in the program use multiple perspectives to explore the sources, exercise and consequences of power across a variety of social and historical settings. A special focus on gender is available across the spectrum of courses listed.

The certificate program is recommended for students with academic or career interests in politics, government, economics, organizing and advocacy, public affairs and public policy, journalism, social work, human rights, social justice, education and sustainability.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in power and society requires a minimum of 15 credit hours (at least 12 must be upper-division), consisting of three core credit hours and 12 elective credit hours. Only courses in which a student received a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher may be used to meet the certificate requirements.

Six credit hours must be completed through the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences in the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences. A maximum of six credit hours may be shared between the certificate and a New College major. A maximum of three credit hours of individualized instruction or internship may be applied toward the certificate. Electives are not limited to the certificate elective list; see academic advisor prior to enrollment. Students are encouraged to take courses that develop breadth rather than limiting their selection to courses in one particular discipline.

Religion and Conflict Certificate (LARELCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in religion and conflict is of particular interest to students planning to pursue careers in journalism, law, policy work, diplomacy, the military, public advocacy, publishing, education, ministry or other fields in which an enhanced understanding of religion and conflict is becoming increasingly vital.

A regional component provides students specific regional knowledge of how religion has been implicated in human conflict. Required coursework in at least two different regions fosters a comparative understanding of the dynamics of religion and conflict in historical and global contexts.

A political component explores how religion influences or is influenced by matters of state, law, government or other dimensions of political life.

A cultural component provides students with an understanding of how religion operates as a powerful force that impacts and intersects with expressions of human identity, thought and culture.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires a minimum of 18 credit hours. At least 12 credit hours must be completed in upper-division coursework and at least 12 credit hours must be completed at ASU. At least six upper-division hours in the certificate must be completed in courses offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. A grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher is required for each course used to fulfill a certificate requirement.

Humanities and Social Sciences Requirement

At least six of the 18 credit hours must be fulfilled with courses from the humanities and at least three credit hours from the social sciences.

When choosing courses from the lists below, complete six credit hours from the following prefixes to fulfill the humanities requirement: ARB, CEL, CHI, FMS, GER, HEB, HST, IAS, JST, PHI, REL, or SLC.

When choosing courses from the lists below, complete three credit hours from the following prefixes to fulfill the social sciences requirement: AFR, COM, GCU, JUS, POS, SGS, SOC, or WST.

Electives (two courses) -- 6 credit hours

Certificate Electives (6)

Students select electives from any of the course lists above, keeping in mind that at least 12 credit hours within the certificate must be upper-division.

In some cases, the same course can be used to fulfill more than one requirement. For more information, please contact the certificate director in the Center for the Study of Religion and Conflict.

If a course is used to meet more than one component requirement above, additional electives may be required to meet the 18 credit hour minimum. Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

To declare the certificate, students should contact the certificate director in the Center for the Study of Religion and Conflict:
<https://csrc.asu.edu/students/certificate> (<https://csrc.asu.edu/students/certificate>).

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Risk Communication Certificate (ASRCMCERT)

Campus: West

Description:

The rising importance of the field of risk communication stems from the need to name, understand and manage physical and social risks as society is faced with increasingly challenging decisions concerning stressed social and environmental infrastructures.

Proficiency in risk communication requires understanding the complex interfaces of physical, biological, psychological and social systems. In response, the certificate program in risk communication combines the strengths of the three schools within the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences: the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences and the School of Humanities, Arts and Cultural Studies.

The program prepares students for a range of diverse careers in risk management, crisis communications and environmental public affairs. Specifically, students develop expertise suited to work as risk management specialists and environmental advocates, preparing them to translate complex scientific ideas and analyses into information that can be evaluated meaningfully by all members of society.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in risk communication requires 15 credit hours (a minimum of 12 credit hours must be upper-division). All courses used to satisfy requirements for the certificate must be passed with a "C" (2.00) or better. Eight credit hours must be unique and not already being counted toward the students' bachelor degree requirements in communication or environmental science. Other electives can be chosen in consultation with an academic advisor.

Core Requirements -- 6 credit hours

BIO 130: Introduction to Environmental Science (SQ) or ENV 201: Fundamentals of Environmental Science (3-4)

Notes: ENV 201 is required by Biology or Environmental Science majors.

COM 415: Risk Communication (3)

Elective Courses (choose three) -- 9 credit hours

COM 319: Persuasion and Social Influence (SB) (3)

COM 414: Crisis Communication (3)

COM 450: Organizational Communication (SB) (3)

COM 454: Rhetorical and Critical Approaches to Public Relations (3)

COM 463: Intercultural Communication in a Global Context (SB & G) (3)

IAS 340 / PHI 320: Bioethics (HU) (3)

IAS 407 / PHI 407: Environmental Philosophy and Policy (L or HU) (3)

IAS 409 / PHI 409: Eco-Community Ethics (HU) (3)

LSC 362: The Human Environment (3)

PTX 301: Basics of Pharmacology and Toxicology (3)

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students wishing to pursue this certificate should consult an academic advisor in the School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences or the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences to ensure the appropriate set of courses is taken and the required paperwork is submitted.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Secondary Education Certificate (TESEDCERT)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West, ASU@Lake Havasu, ASU@The Gila Valley

Description:

The secondary education certificate program prepares students who wish to teach students enrolled in grades 6-12. While students develop a strong content background, the secondary education certificate program focuses on developing the requisite teaching knowledge and abilities to successfully teach middle or high school students. In order to integrate teacher preparation with the academic specialization, the Teachers College collaborates and communicates with academic departments throughout the university. Professional experiences and residency are required components of this certificate.

Students who complete this certificate program are issued an institutional recommendation for certification in Arizona. Students desiring to teach in a public school must also pass the Professional Knowledge Arizona Educator exam (either the National Evaluation Series or the Arizona Educator Proficiency Assessments) to be certified to teach in the state of Arizona.

The secondary education undergraduate certificate is also available for students who have earned a bachelor's degree; this is considered a nondegree graduate pathway.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires a minimum of 30 hours.

Required Courses -- 15 credit hours

Notes: During your clinical experience internship(s) you will work alongside a lead teacher, in a 6-12th grade classroom.

SED 478: Student Teaching: Secondary Education (Grades 6-12) (11-12)

Notes: Your student teaching residency requires a full-time commitment in a 6-12th grade classroom for the semester. Degree requirements for a student's major must be completed prior to student teaching.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students interested in pursuing the secondary education certificate should be enrolled as a degree-seeking undergraduate student. This program is also available to students in the Phoenix area or Gila Valley area (Morenci) who have already completed a bachelor's degree and want to be certified to teach. Students interested in this option apply to ASU as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Students interested in this program should have content knowledge in one of the following areas, demonstrated by having a minimum of 24 credit hours in coursework for the major or a passing score on appropriate teacher certification exam: biology, business, chemistry, Chinese (Mandarin), earth and space science, economics, English, French, general science, geography, German, history, mathematics, physics, political science or Spanish.

Students should have a valid Arizona DPS Identity Verified Print (IVP) fingerprint clearance card.

A 2.50 GPA is required to progress into the final semester of student teaching. Students should contact the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College for more information.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Social Science Research Methods Certificate (LASSRMCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The certificate program in social science research methods prepares students to acquire, manage and analyze a broad range of data on human thought and human behavior. Data can be qualitative (e.g., text, images, sound) or quantitative (e.g., direct observation, surveys, GIS). Data acquisition skills may include the downloading and managing of information from online sources or the primary collection of data in surveys or by direct observation. A key feature of this program is a focus on data analysis so students are able to analyze any data they collect. All students in this program demonstrate skills in statistical analysis plus skills in a selection of methods related to their interests.

Speech-Language Pathology Assistant Certificate (LASLPACERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

The speech-language pathology assistant certificate program prepares students to work with individuals with communication disorders, under the direction of a licensed speech-language pathologist.

Students majoring in speech and hearing science or persons already holding a bachelor's degree in speech and hearing science receive additional coursework and clinical training to be eligible for the speech-language pathology assistant licensure.

Speech-language pathology assistants work under the direction and supervision of speech-language pathologists in schools, clinics and rehabilitation agencies that provide speech and language services.

Program Requirements:

The speech-language pathology assistant certificate program includes 15 credit hours of course work and clinical internships completed in conjunction with the bachelor's degree in speech and hearing science.

Twelve of the 15 credit hours for the speech-language pathology assistant certificate must be completed at ASU. A minimum grade of "B-" (scale is 4.00 = "A") is required for a course to count toward the certificate.

Required courses -- 15 credit hours

SHS 402: Clinical Methods and Treatment of Communication Disorders (3)

SHS 473: Implementation of Treatment Plans for Individuals with Communication Disorders (3)

SHS 483: Professional Issues and Ethical Considerations for the SLPA (3)

SHS 484: Internship (6)

Notes: Two internships of clinical practice

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students who have completed at least nine credit hours in speech and hearing science coursework with at least a 2.75 GPA (scale is 4.00 = "A") in those courses are eligible to apply. Applications are accepted from students who have completed a bachelor's degree in speech and hearing science or communication disorders from a program accredited by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association, providing their GPA in the major was at least 2.75.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. A student already holding an undergraduate degree may pursue an undergraduate certificate as a nondegree-seeking graduate student.

Sustainable Food Systems Certificate (SUFSUCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Food systems are particularly important for human societies to sustain; however, these systems are particularly vulnerable to multiple threats. Many students from a wide variety of disciplines are interested in food systems, especially as food and sustainability become increasingly relevant issues to employers in fields across the public and private sectors.

This certificate program in sustainable food systems allows students to take advantage of the diversity of courses offered that address challenges to food system sustainability. It encourages students to cover a breadth of topics and perspectives related to food system issues while providing the opportunity to focus on particular skills and approaches suitable for their career paths, which can range from agriculture to marketing and retail to policy or ethics. This program offers an innovative and exciting approach to the challenges of food system sustainability.

Due to the transdisciplinary nature of the certificate program, many courses may be found across all four ASU campuses, allowing students to choose both the focus area and location of study that best fits their needs.

The knowledge, competencies and skills students will have upon completion of this certificate include the ability to identify food system drivers, activities, actors and outcomes at different spatial scales and the capacity to assess the primary social, economic and environmental drivers and outcomes associated with food system sustainability challenges.

Students also acquire the ability to apply one or more of the following analytical skills or approaches to the development of food system sustainability solutions: cultural and social analysis, alternative agricultural design and practice, analysis of biophysical processes and environmental services, urban planning and policy, marketing and entrepreneurial development, sustainability assessment, and consumer preference and behavior.

Program Requirements:

The certificate in sustainable food systems consists of 15 credit hours, at least 12 of which must be upper-division.

All courses must be completed with a minimum grade of C (2.0 on a 4.0 scale), however, an overall average GPA of 2.5 or higher is required for courses completed for the certificate.

Required Course -- 3 credit hours

SOS 117: Food System Sustainability (3)

Working with Military Families Certificate (LAWWMFCERT)

Campus: Tempe

Description:

Important complexities surround the dynamics of military families. Military personnel, veterans and their families face unique issues and challenges such as navigating military culture and dealing with multiple deployments, war, combat, trauma and death. Students interested in careers focusing on these families have a need to understand normative family processes, stress and coping, and military culture and leadership.

Students enrolled in this program take a unique combination of academic coursework and military leadership training. Students who complete the certificate program are conversant with human development, marital and familial relationships, and family dynamics in the context of military culture.

Program Requirements:

The certificate requires 18 credit hours. At least 12 credit hours must be completed at the upper-division level and a grade of "C" (2.00 on a 4.00 scale) or higher is required in all courses.

Required Courses -- 15 credit hours

CDE 232: Human Development (SB) (3)

FAS 101: Personal Growth in Human Relationships (SB) (3)

FAS 331: Marriage and Family Relationships (SB) (3)

FAS 410: Military Family Systems in a Democracy (3)

MIS 301: Training Management and the Warfighting Functions (L) or AES 301: Air Force Leadership Studies I (L) (3-4)

Internship Requirement -- 3 credit hours

FAS 484: Internship (3)

Students are required to complete a capstone internship project that includes a field work experience, a written integrative paper and an oral presentation.

Depending on a student's undergraduate program of study, prerequisite courses may be needed in order to complete the requirements of this certificate.

Enrollment Requirements:

Students in related majors can apply for the certificate through the T. Denny Sanford School of Social and Family Dynamics. Admission is determined by the admission committee. A student must have a minimum GPA of 3.00 (scale is 4.00 = "A") in order to be considered for admission to the certificate program.

A student pursuing an undergraduate certificate must be enrolled as a degree-seeking student at ASU. Undergraduate certificates are not awarded prior to the award of an undergraduate degree. Undergraduate Programs

Undergraduate Degrees (Program Descriptions)

Business, W. P. Carey School of

Accountancy, BS (BAACCBS)

Campus: Tempe, West, Online

Program Description:

The School of Accountancy's undergraduate BS program in accountancy offers two tracks during the senior year.

The accounting track is followed by most students and is designed to provide a rich educational experience.

The accounting master's internship is the track designed for the most highly qualified students who wish to commit to the MACC or MTax program during the second semester of their junior year. The internship provides a particularly rich and individualized educational experience during the senior year. It includes a number of distinct advantages for students: a full-time paid internship for credit with a participating accountancy firm, early consideration for scholarships, and possible eligibility for a GMAT waiver and a graduate application fee waiver for the MACC or MTax program (eligibility is determined by the GPA at the time of application).

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 210 - Brief Calculus

Program Math Intensity: Moderate

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to choose either a 2.5- or a 3-year path while participating in the same high-quality educational experience of a 4-year option. Students can opt to fast-track their studies after acceptance into a participating program by connecting with their academic advisor. Fast track options appear at the top of the major map.

This program also allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

Taxation, MTax

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Admission Requirements:

General University Admission Requirements:

All students are required to meet general university admission requirements.

Freshman (<https://students.asu.edu/freshman/requirements>)

Transfer (<https://transfer.asu.edu/index.php?q=transferrequirements>)

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

Freshmen admission requirements: 1230 SAT Reasoning OR 25 ACT score, OR graduated in the top 8% of high school class, OR an overall high school GPA of 3.40 in ASU competency courses (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Freshmen should select an additional major when applying for admission. Additional choices may include any of the W. P. Carey business BA programs or any other degree program outside W. P. Carey School of Business. Students who are not admissible to a W. P. Carey business BS major and who did not select a second major or are not admissible to their second major choice will be placed in a business BA program in W. P. Carey School of Business.

Readmission requirements: Students must meet freshman admission requirements by way of high school GPA, test score or class rank and must have a 3.00 transfer GPA (if applicable) and a cumulative ASU GPA of 3.00.

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer admission requirements (30 or more semester hours of credit after high school): 3.00 transfer GPA and one of the following: 1160 (prior to March 2016) or 1230 SAT Reasoning (after March 2016) OR 25 ACT score OR the student must have graduated in the top 8% of their high school class OR an overall high school GPA of 3.40 in ASU competency courses (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Transfer students should select an additional major when applying for admission. Additional choices may include any of the W. P. Carey business BA programs or any other business or other degree program outside W. P. Carey School of Business.

Students with fewer than 45 transfer hours who are not admissible to a W. P. Carey School of Business major and who did not select a second major or are not admissible to their second major choice are placed in the exploratory social and behavioral sciences program in the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts.

Students with more than 45 transfer hours who are not admissible to a W. P. Carey School of Business major and who did not select a second major or are not admissible to their second major choice are prompted in My ASU to select a new major.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in an online format with multiple enrollment sessions throughout the year. Applicants may view the program description and request more information here. (<https://asuonline.asu.edu/online-degree-programs/undergraduate/accounting-degree/>)

Business (Chinese Language and Culture), BA (BABUSCLBA)

Campus: Tempe

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Students interested in pursuing a Chinese language track should apply to the language and culture concentration (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/programs/t5/majorinfo/ASU00/BABSLACUBA/undergrad/false>) of the BA in business.

Program Description:

The mission of the concentration in Chinese language and culture within the BA in business degree program is to create global business professionals who can function well culturally and linguistically in the business environment in China and domestically. As China becomes an increasingly important participant in the global economy and as the manufacturing and financial sectors become more globalized, the need for business professionals skilled in communicating in the Chinese language is growing.

With a network of 26 flagship programs at 22 institutions of higher education across the U.S., the language flagship program graduates students prepared to take their place among the next generation of global professionals, commanding a superior level of proficiency in languages critical to U.S. national security and economic competitiveness. This program prepares participants to function professionally in Chinese within diverse business fields.

Career Opportunities:

Career opportunities are generally substantive and in high demand. Senior management roles for corporate accountants include chief financial officer positions. Currently, more than half the CFOs at larger corporations have formal accounting training. Projecting into the future, the longer term trend is for CFOs to have extensive corporate accounting training, particularly since CFOs at public U.S. corporations personally sign the financial statements.

Typical early- to mid-career positions held by corporate accountants include controllers, treasurers and vice presidents in areas like financial planning, divisional controlling, cost accounting directing, senior financial analysis and senior accounting. These positions typically report to the

CFO.

Business (Global Logistics Management), BA (BABUSGLBA)

Campus: West, Online

Program Description:

Logistics management focuses on integration and partnerships necessary to meet customer needs on a timely basis, with relevant and high-quality products produced and delivered in a service-effective manner.

This BA program in business with a concentration in global logistics management trains students to be strategic thinkers, excellent analysts, effective communicators and team leaders who are focused on efficiency, effectiveness and increasing revenue.

An efficient logistics management system is critical to the success of global corporations, making sure the supply of goods and services flowing through the system closely matches the demand. Logistics management professionals manage, coordinate and transport products from raw materials to the finished goods sitting on a local store shelf or offered by an online retailer. Efficient logistics is a key reason consumers can buy an ever-increasing variety of goods and services at remarkably low prices. Not surprisingly, logistics also plays a major role in the health care industry where efficient, effective delivery systems are gaining significant traction.

Technological Entrepreneurship and Management, BS (TSTEM2BS)

Campus: Polytechnic, Online

Program Description:

The BS program in technological entrepreneurship and management advances the knowledge and practice of entrepreneurship and innovation. To enhance students' understanding of business fundamentals, the Fulton Schools of Engineering have partnered with the W. P. Carey School of Business to offer a degree that is jointly conferred by both colleges. The degree program prepares students to address social and corporate issues to impact and change the world; create, launch and improve technology-based products, services and ventures; and identify and solve open-ended problems using engineering and technology approaches.

Students receive a foundation in both technology and business fundamentals, with an emphasis on technology entrepreneurship and innovation in one of two focus areas: innovation and operation management or social entrepreneurship.

The objectives for this degree program are that students demonstrate the ability to identify, analyze and synthesize information to address and solve use-inspired, open-ended problems, assessing their impact on social, cultural and economic environments; formulate methodologies to advance the knowledge of entrepreneurship and innovation; launch technology-based products and services from idea generation through actualization; use quantitative and qualitative methods to demonstrate continuous improvement of products, services and processes; and utilize a systems approach for the effective design and improvement of entrepreneurial and innovation ventures.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Art (Art Education), BFA (FAARTEBFA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BFA program in art with a concentration in art education involves creative teaching and learning processes and strategies, first-hand experience teaching art with a range of ages, the study of art history and global cultures, and practice in a variety of studio areas.

The program focuses on engaging with artistic inquiry and education in K-12, community and museum settings. Students investigate issues related to teaching art from multiple perspectives, including:

- creativity and critical thinking
- ecological connections
- inquiry-based learning
- interdisciplinary curriculum development
- multicultural contexts
- studio and conceptual art practices

In addition to their art education coursework, students are required to take coursework in the various studio areas offered in the School of Art. Students declare their Bachelor of Fine Arts concentration at the time of their ASU admission. Following admission, if students wish to change their concentration, they may meet with their School of Art academic advisor.

Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/transfermap?major=FAARTEBFA~null + &college=CHI>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates who also complete the state certification requirements for an art specialist certificate may teach in public and private elementary schools, middle schools and high schools. Graduates who do not seek state certification may find opportunities for jobs with some charter schools, art museums, nonprofit art spaces and recreational or community-oriented service groups that offer art instruction.

Art (Art History), BA (FAARTHBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The BA in art history is a dynamic program for the investigation of visual culture in which students engage with a rich and diverse curriculum.

Faculty members emphasize critical concepts in their teaching, including the close study of artists, objects and technologies. Students explore art's history in economic, social and political contexts and the relationship of visual art to other disciplines such as literature, science, anthropology, media and performance studies. In addition to art history courses, the program includes interdisciplinary coursework from departments across the university.

Internships are available at a wide range of arts organizations. The program is enriched by partnerships with the ASU Art Museum and museums throughout the Phoenix metropolitan area and beyond, including an affiliation with the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: Yes

First Required Math Course: MAT 142 - College Mathematics OR MAT 117 OR MAT 119

Program Math Intensity: General

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

Creative Enterprise and Cultural Leadership, MA

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Admission Requirements:

General University Admission Requirements:

All students are required to meet general university admission requirements.

Freshman (<https://students.asu.edu/freshman/requirements>)

Transfer (<https://transfer.asu.edu/index.php?q=transferrequirements>)

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

Students meeting the university requirements for admission may matriculate in the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts. Separate admission procedures and approvals are required for some programs within the college. Students must contact specific departments or schools for details.

Freshmen students applying to the Herberger Institute School of Art enter ASU as art exploratory majors in the School of Art. There is no portfolio review process at the time of admission to ASU for freshmen.

Typically students in their second year who are interested in studio art and art education will submit a portfolio for review once they have completed their core requirements and are completing the last of the 12 hours of 200-level art requirements, or if they are interested in art history or museum studies they will submit a declaration form in the semester in which they complete 30 hours.

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Direct transfer of courses from other accredited institutions to the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts are subject to the existence of parallel and equal courses in the college's curriculum and subject to departmental or school evaluation of studio courses with respect to performance standards.

Every candidate for the bachelor's degree must earn a minimum of 30 hours in resident credit at ASU. Transfer students enrolled in the college must complete a minimum of 15 hours of resident credit in the major as approved by the faculty.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in an online format with multiple enrollment sessions throughout the year. Applicants may view the program description and request more information here. (<https://asuonline.asu.edu/online-degree-programs/undergraduate/bachelor-arts-art-history/>)

Change of Major Requirements:

An ASU student who would like to change a major to one offered by the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50 (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transferecreditguide/app/transfermap?major=FAARTHBA~null + &college=CHI>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates of art history at the bachelor's degree level find employment opportunities in commercial art galleries, art museums and historical societies and archives. Other options include arts agencies and public art programs or admission to prestigious graduate programs across the nation.

A graduate degree is essential for professional positions; a master's degree prepares individuals to teach at the community college level, practice and publish as an art critic or writer, enhance one's own practice as an artist, or gain entry into museums, archives, historical societies, auction houses, publishing companies and academic presses as well as to art libraries. The doctorate is a necessity for employment as a university or college teacher and for responsible administrative and curatorial positions in the museum and publishing world.

Art (Ceramics), BFA (FAARTCBFA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BFA in art with a concentration in ceramics provides a stimulating and challenging environment for artistic and intellectual growth. With the realization that discipline, familiarity with historical precedents and freedom go hand in hand with creative activities, the ceramics program strikes a balance between the acquisition of traditional skills and the promotion of independence and innovation. Responsibility is placed on the individual student to find personally meaningful content and an effective means to express that content within the ceramic arts.

The ceramics program features a complete and varied line of kilns, wheels and other equipment. Faculty members ensure that students of the program learn the techniques and concepts that enable them to take their work in any direction they wish. A guest artist schedule enhances the program as does the Ceramics Research Center at the ASU Art Museum, which has a collection of more than 3,000 pieces and provides unparalleled opportunities to study and research the ceramic arts.

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Students interested in drawing should apply to the painting and drawing concentration (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/programs/t5/majorinfo/ASU00/HIARTPDBFA/undergrad/false>).

Program Description:

The BFA program in art with a concentration in drawing offers a dynamic environment for creative, intellectual and technical growth that leads to quality art practice and professionalism. The program encourages a wide spectrum of innovative approaches to contemporary drawing. Working from a variety of sources and subjects, students develop technical proficiency experimenting with a wide range of materials and processes. In addition, students develop the ability to critically assess imagery through written and verbal analysis. In their final year, students create a body of work with an individualized approach to form and content, culminating in a senior exhibition.

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The BA in art with a concentration in museum studies at ASU is one of the most rigorous programs in the U.S.
Academic Catalog Archive 2020-2021

Through coursework and internships, students of museum studies explore art and museums, historical societies, archives, art galleries, public art programs, arts publishing and arts agencies. The program ensures that students are knowledgeable in art history and visual thinking as well as in museum practice. Upon completion, students possess critical-writing skills and foreign language ability (students must demonstrate an ability to read at least one foreign language).

The curriculum includes art history courses taught by faculty members of diverse specialties. Museum professionals and arts administrators teach specialized classes in their areas of expertise. Internships enable students to work directly with working arts professionals in their field of interest. In addition to art history and museum studies courses, students also pursue a range of other courses, which can include in business, marketing, fundraising, international tourism and nonprofit management.

Art (Painting), BFA (FAARTPABFA)

Campus: Tempe

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Students interested in painting should apply to the painting and drawing concentration (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/programs/t5/majorinfo/ASU00/HIARTPDBFA/undergrad/false>).

Program Description:

The BFA in art with a concentration in painting offers a dynamic environment for creative, intellectual and technical growth that leads to quality art practice and professionalism. The program encourages a wide spectrum of innovative approaches to contemporary painting. Working from a variety of sources and subjects, students develop technical proficiency experimenting with a wide range of materials and processes. In addition, students develop the ability to critically assess imagery through written and verbal analysis. In their final year, students create a body of work with an individualized approach to form and content, culminating in a senior exhibition.

Students declare their BFA concentration at the time of their ASU admission. Following admission, if a student wishes to change their BFA concentration, they may meet with their School of Art academic advisor.

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

Currently, all art students are admitted to ASU into the Bachelor of Arts (art studies) program. They must complete a series of requirements that include foundational coursework to be eligible for study in one of the school's Bachelor of Fine Arts degree programs, which include upper-division coursework in the studio. There is no portfolio review process for admission to the School of Art.

Students in their second year who are interested in studio art and art education obtain a signed BFA declaration form after completing the core requirements and during completion of the last of the 12 hours of 200-level art requirements. Students interested in art history or museum studies submit a major declaration form in the semester in which they complete 30 credit hours. The student's major is changed upon successful completion of the major declaration form. Students may choose to remain in and complete the Bachelor of Arts (art studies).

Beginning Fall 2019, students are admitted directly to the painting concentration upon admittance to the BFA program in art.

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students who have completed the foundational core and pre-art requirements may submit a major declaration form before they have been admitted to ASU. To complete an undergraduate degree in four years, it is recommended that community college transfer students, who are completing a two-year degree and have completed the foundational core and pre-art requirements, apply and submit a declaration form in the semester they are completing their community college degree or the semester before they plan to enter Arizona State University.

Direct transfer of courses from other accredited institutions to the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts are subject to the existence of parallel and equal courses in the college's curriculum and subject to departmental or school evaluation of studio courses with respect to performance standards.

Every candidate for the bachelor's degree must earn a minimum of 30 credit hours in resident credit at ASU. Transfer students enrolled in the college must complete a minimum of 15 credit hours of resident credit in the major as approved by the faculty.

Beginning Fall 2019, transfer students are admitted directly to the painting concentration upon admittance to the BFA program in art.

Change of Major Requirements:

An ASU student who would like to change majors to one offered by the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50 (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transferecreditguide/app/transfermap?major=FAARTPABFA~null + &college=CHI>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

Art (Photography), BFA (FAARTPHBFA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Students in the BFA program in art with a concentration in photography are offered an education in the creation and analysis of photographs as a form of creative expression. Students work in a wide range of photographic media including specialized 19th-century processes, traditional black-and-white and state-of-the-art digital output.

The internationally recognized photography faculty at ASU are diverse, representing and encouraging a wide range of approaches to the creation of photo-based art. Students learn to be self-disciplined and self-directed to understand complex ideas around how images function in their work and to develop a strong sense and control of the craft of photography. The Northlight Gallery engages students and provides opportunities to learn about gallery and museum practice through mounting exhibitions and working with artists and the collection.

A portfolio submission is required for a BFA with a concentration in photography. Students are not able to register for upper-division photography courses until their portfolio has been submitted and reviewed (typically submitted during the second year of study). To be eligible to submit their portfolio, a student must have completed two courses: ART 201 and ART 204 OR ART 205 (transfer credit applicable). Students must submit the online application form and a hard copy portfolio to the Art Office Rm 102 by the posted deadline.

Portfolio details: 10 to 15 hard copy, student-edited prints (8"x10" or 11"x14"); packaged in a simple envelope labeled with name and ASU ID number. If the student has completed ART 205, the prints should be in color and printed by the student on a professional grade printer. If the student has completed ART 204, the prints should be silver gelatin black and white.

Career Opportunities:

A degree in the arts offers students a pathway to a rich and varied choice of careers. Students with a photography degree may work as independent studio photographers or contract for commercial work for firms, museums, galleries, individuals and other artists. Though this is not a commercial degree program, some students apply their skills post-graduation by doing product photography, portraits or event photography. Students have also started their own successful art galleries.

Photo skills hone a particular sensitivity to issues of representation and a heightened sense of time, among many other life-enhancing attributes. These critical and creative sensitivities can be brought to bear in life after graduation whatever career path a student chooses. The bachelor's degree is essential for advanced study leading to the terminal MFA. This advanced degree offers opportunities in:

- curatorial work in galleries, museums and historical collections

- history or studio areas
- nonprofit arts organization management
- university teaching

Art (Printmaking), BFA (FAARTPMBFA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BFA in art with a concentration in printmaking provides a complete studio experience with regular courses in book arts, digital processes, intaglio, lithography, papermaking, photogravure, relief, screenprint and other graphic applications. Faculty teach in spacious, well-equipped studios that offer a complete range of print media. While individual students are encouraged to pursue a personal direction, the faculty encourage students to become well-rounded printmakers by experiencing and understanding many media processes and approaches. No style, technique or aesthetic approach is stressed over another, so the individual quality of each student's work is the essential measure of achievement. Collaboration, experimentation and transdisciplinary approaches to making art are encouraged, and students often work with other areas in the School of Art, such as photography, intermedia, painting, drawing and sculpture.

Students declare their Bachelor of Fine Arts concentration at the time of ASU admission. Following admission, if students wish to change their concentration, they may meet with their School of Art academic advisor.

Career Opportunities:

Trained printmakers are working artists, practicing the expression of a personal understanding of their place in the world. They may find employment as artists or printmakers in schools of all levels teaching the execution and appreciation of visual art. They also work in fine art print studios, executing original prints for other artists. Printmaking skills such as screenprinting or photomechanical and digital techniques, acquired for the production of art, also have commercial, non-art applications that may afford skilled employment. Artists with printmaking skills may also work with graphic designs, illustrations and signage or may work in museums, conservation, publishing, galleries and in other art-related activities. Additionally, their art may sell successfully in the open marketplace.

Art (Sculpture), BFA (FAARTSBFA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BFA in art with a concentration in sculpture recognizes the broad, transdisciplinary nature of sculpture today. A wide range of media now falls within an expanded definition of sculpture.

Coursework covers public and site-specific sculpture, foundry, interactive and electronic sculpture, neon, small metals, wood, and video and sound installation. Students learn to put today's creations in the context of the history of sculpture and the larger field of contemporary art. Critical inquiry is augmented by courses in the art history program. Visiting artists, curators and critics share their experience directly with students.

Through one-on-one mentoring, students learn to win commissions and awards, hold exhibitions, and obtain residencies and jobs as studio artists, public artists, fabricators, project managers, teachers and arts administrators.

Dance, BFA (FADANBFA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The School of Music, Dance and Theatre provides a dynamic and culturally diverse learning environment in which students develop as creative artists, scholars and educators. The BFA program in dance offers a transdisciplinary curriculum that emphasizes collaboration and a holistic approach to education. The program encourages artists of the 21st-century to develop multiple skills for success in the arts and related fields.

The core values of the program include creativity, research, leadership, reflection, humanity and context. These values are embedded in a broad range of academic experiences that emphasize creative practices (the study of the creative process and dance-making using improvisation, choreography and interdisciplinary approaches); dance and digital arts; dance history, ethnography and philosophy; movement practices (the study of the theory, history and technique of a range of dance forms and mind-body practices, including contemporary ballet, Latin dance practices, postmodern contemporary dance, somatic practices and urban dance practices); and seminars.

Additional Requirements:

Admission to the BFA in dance is selective and based on an interview process. Students are admitted to ASU as dance interview students and must successfully complete an interview and audition before enrolling in the dance major. If a student passes the interview, the School of Music, Dance and Theatre will change the student's major to the BFA in dance. In the event the student is admitted to ASU but not selected as a dance major or misses the interview application deadline, the student enters ASU as a dance interview student and will need to successfully pass the dance interview and audition milestone in the first semester in order to gain admission into the program.

Interview days take place in November, February and April of each year. To ensure a smooth curricular progression, all prospective dance students, including transfer students, are strongly encouraged to participate in the interview day during the semester prior to their intended date of enrollment. More information on the interview process and deadlines can be found at <https://filmdancetheatre.asu.edu/degree-programs> (<https://filmdancetheatre.asu.edu/degree-programs>).

Dance (Dance Education), BFA (FADANEBAFA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BFA in dance with a concentration in dance education prepares students for certification to teach dance in K-12 schools in the state of Arizona. Students in this program are required to complete additional state certification requirements.

The School of Music, Dance and Theatre provides a dynamic and culturally diverse learning environment in which students develop as creative artists, scholars and educators. Studies in dance cultures, music, digital media, dance history, philosophy and criticism, movement science, somatics, and stage and screen production enhance the rich educational setting. Creativity and research, the core program values, are embedded in a broad range of academic experiences emphasizing movement and creative practices, artistic process, leadership and pedagogy.

Transfer (<https://transfer.asu.edu/index.php?q=transferrequirements>)

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

Admission to the BFA in dance is selective and based on an interview process. Students are admitted to ASU as dance interview students and must successfully complete an interview and audition before enrolling in the dance major. If a student passes the interview, the School of Music, Dance and Theatre changes the student's major to the BFA in dance. In the event that the student is admitted to ASU but not selected as a dance major or misses the interview application deadline, the student enters ASU as a dance interview student and must successfully pass the dance interview and audition milestone in the first semester in order to gain admission into the program.

Interview days take place in November, February and April of each year. To ensure a smooth curricular progression, all prospective dance students, including transfer students, are strongly encouraged to participate in the interview day during the semester prior to their intended date of enrollment. More information on the interview process and deadlines can be found at <https://filmdancetheatre.asu.edu/degree-programs> (<https://filmdancetheatre.asu.edu/degree-programs>).

Application Deadlines: Students should visit filmdancetheatre.asu.edu/admissions/bachelor-of-fine-arts-dance-admission-requirements (<https://filmdancetheatre.asu.edu/admissions/bachelor-of-fine-arts-dance-admission-requirements>) for more details on Dance Interview Day requirements and deadlines.

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Direct transfer of courses from other accredited institutions to the Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts are subject to the existence of parallel and equal courses in the college's curriculum and departmental or school evaluation of studio courses with respect to performance standards.

Every candidate for the bachelor's degree must earn a minimum of 30 hours in resident credit at ASU. Transfer students enrolled in the institute must complete a minimum of 15 hours of resident credit in the major as approved by the faculty.

Application Deadlines: Students should visit filmdancetheatre.asu.edu/admissions/bachelor-of-fine-arts-dance-admission-requirements (<https://filmdancetheatre.asu.edu/admissions/bachelor-of-fine-arts-dance-admission-requirements>) for more details on Dance Interview Day requirements and deadlines.

Change of Major Requirements:

An ASU student who would like to change majors to one offered by the Herberger Institute or one of its programs must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50 (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/transfermap?major=FADANEBA~null + &college=CHI>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

The concentration in dance education lays the foundation for a career in teaching in public and private settings. Students earn an Arizona teaching certification while pursuing the dance education degree and they can expect to find employment in one of many thriving middle school and high school dance programs throughout the state or in more informal community settings.

Design Studies, BA (ARDSNBA)

Campus:

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Please explore Degree Search for other similar program options.

Program Description:

The BA in design studies is a four-year, nonstudio program of study in design that focuses on the design disciplines offered in the ASU Herberger Institute:

- architectural studies
- graphic design
- industrial design
- interior design
- landscape architecture

This is a highly flexible program of study, much like a liberal arts degree, in which students select design and design-related courses offered in the institute and throughout the university. Students acquire a breadth of design knowledge via courses taken from three categories: communication for design, design history and general design.

It provides a design education, general and specific, to students who seek opportunities in the broader design sector or in graduate education.

Students may undertake the program in one of two specific concentrations: design studies, which allows students to discover the myriad possibilities of design as a subject area as well as the flexibility that it provides for further exploration; or design management, which offers a selection of courses in management and human communication that complement design.

Digital Culture, BA (HIDGCBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA program in digital culture equips students with the technical skills to create computational media and the cultural skills to know when or why to apply them.

Students learn to create computational media, which is computation combined with objects, sound, video, time, space, culture and bodies; breathe behavior into media, objects or systems by programming; and think critically about how computation impacts lives and how culture makes a difference in how people experience computational media, a critical skill in this dynamic age.

Armed with skills and sound judgment, graduates work in cultural communication, marketing, design, social media, health, education, entertainment and creative arts, and all areas in which culture is shaped by technology and computational media. All know techniques to change the world through communication using contemporary computational media, a vital power in the 21st-century. Some graduates go on to invent fresh techniques.

This program is also offered as an accelerated degree with an MA in creative enterprise and cultural leadership. More information can be found on the Creative Enterprise and Cultural Leadership website: <https://herbergerinstitute.asu.edu/research-and-initiatives/enterprise-and-entrepreneurship-programs/curb-enterprise-leadership/master-of-arts> (<https://herbergerinstitute.asu.edu/research-and-initiatives/enterprise-and-entrepreneurship-programs/curb-enterprise-leadership/master-of-arts>).

Digital Culture - English Concentration

The digital culture program with a concentration in English is designed for students who wish to explore the historical, scientific and theoretical intersections of art, media and technology. Sharing of stories and media through electronic communities, participatory art-making and creativity forums on the web, gaming, digital movies and effects, mediated public spaces and electronic design are only a few of the new activities that are defining and evolving culture. Students in the major assist in the establishment, evolution and proliferation of such culture at the state, national and international level. Students will use tools of inquiry to examine, analyze and create works of art through a hands-on approach to communication, writing, rhetoric and literacies in collaboration with the English department.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates of digital culture have a wide array of career opportunities in new media, involving the fields of:

- communications (CISCO, Google, Facebook)
- computing (Apple, Microsoft)
- gaming and entertainment (Industrial Light and Magic, Electronic Arts, Pixar)
- media arts (engineering multimedia shows, video and sound production)

The digital culture curriculum also prepares students for roles in the development of modern media systems that address complex sociotechnical problems, such as:

- diagnostic, monitoring and assistive cyber-physical tools and systems that can be used by health care providers
- new systems for collaborative, participatory content creation and sharing
- social networking and reflection tools for promoting sustainability
- systems for interactive, adaptive learning and computational assessment in educational organizations

Graduates of the digital culture program who are interested in continuing their higher education are well prepared to apply for admission to the top interdisciplinary new media programs in the nation, including the graduate programs through the School of Arts, Media and Engineering at ASU.

Digital culture alumni have received job opportunities in:

- 3D modeling and fabrication

Digital Culture (Graphic Information Technology), BA (HIDGCTEBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA program in digital culture equips students with the technical skills they need to create computational media and the ability to know when or why to apply them.

Students learn to create computational media, computation combined with objects, sound, video, time, space, culture and bodies; to breathe behavior into media, objects or systems by programming; and to think critically about how computation impacts lives and how culture makes a difference in how people experience computational media, a critical skill in this dynamic age.

Armed with skills and judgment, graduates work in cultural communication, marketing, design, social media, health, education, entertainment and creative arts, and all areas in which culture is shaped by technology and computational media. All students gain techniques to change the world and communicate using contemporary computational media, a vital power in the 21st century. Some go on to invent fresh techniques.

Digital Culture - Graphic Information Technology concentration

This digital culture program with a concentration in graphic information technology is offered in partnership with the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering. Students complement their knowledge of new media with technology and new media entrepreneurship skills, knowledge of legal and ethical issues for technology, and additional skills in graphic communication, digital illustration and design methodology.

Students should be advised that while most requirements can be completed at the Tempe campus, courses specific to this concentration take place on the Polytechnic campus.

Environmental Design, BS (HIEDSBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in environmental design offers an integrated curriculum in environmental design primarily in a nonstudio format. This undergraduate program is designed to create a deep awareness and knowledge of issues that influence the design of built environments and the design of artifacts in general.

The program of study emphasizes general knowledge and design research as well as focus areas. Focus areas include histories and theories of design; innovation, technology and design strategies; and sustainability in environmental design. The curriculum provides special understanding of theories, technologies, social issues and management aspects related to the student's chosen focus area. While studio courses cannot be taken as electives, students take career-specific design electives and the degree prepares students for all graduate programs in The Design School.

The program is not a professional degree program but provides a broad base of skills and knowledge in environmental design.

Film (Film and Media Production), BA (FAFLMBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

By bringing their own unique stories to life, students pursuing a degree in film and media production develop a comprehensive and practical knowledge of digital media production, an awareness of the impact of media and entertainment on audiences and culture, and an understanding of the role of the artist in society.

Students in the concentration have access to digital cameras, lighting and sound equipment, post-production software and facilities, and other resources --- including talented and dedicated peer and faculty colleagues --- that will give them multiple opportunities to produce projects of exceptional quality.

In this degree program, students have a choice between three upper-division tracks of study: directing, producing/screenwriting and media technology (including cinematography, post-production and sound). Each course of study is supported by the degree-wide emphasis on ethical filmmaking practices, innovative creative expression and preparation for a career as an industry professional.

The program is offered by the New American Film School.

Additional Requirements:

All film students are admitted to ASU into the Bachelor of Arts in film, filmmaking practices concentration. Students who wish to pursue the highly selective, studio-based Bachelor of Arts in film, film and media production concentration must complete the 15-hour film core and successfully pass an interview and review of their creative work to enter the concentration. This interview and creative work review generally takes place in the third or fourth term at ASU.

Change of Major Requirements:

An ASU student who would like to change majors to one offered by the Herberger Institute or one of its programs must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50 (scale is 4.00 = "A").

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/transfermap?major=FAFLMBA~null + &college=CHI>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

The film and media production concentration provides students with the knowledge and experience to prepare them to enter careers in media and entertainment as:

- cinematographers and camera operators
- directors for motion pictures, television and documentary
- editors and post-production specialists
- producers and production executives
- screenwriters for motion pictures and television
- videographers and digital media content creators

The bachelor's degree program is an excellent broad-based foundation for work in the profession or to prepare students for further training at graduate schools or conservatories.

Film (Filmmaking Practices), BA (FAFPRBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Students who pursue the BA in film with a concentration in filmmaking practices receive grounding in fundamental production skills; entertainment and media ethics; feature, short and episodic screenwriting; and general film and media industry history and practices.

Students have the option of two tracks of study in the upper division: screenwriting or preprofessional. Students who choose the track in screenwriting are required to take multiple writing courses at the intermediate and advanced levels. Students in the preprofessional track chose among a series of course options in each of these areas: writing, producing, and film and media technology.

Production experience is regularly available through select lower-division courses that provide creative coursework options, the upper-division course FMP 300 and credited opportunities to work on projects produced by students, faculty, and the New American Film School. All students complete a year-long senior project, initiated and developed by the students and supported with dedicated faculty mentorship, and are supported in their professional goals through the innovative Film Spark program in Santa Monica, Calif.

Graphic Design, BSD (ARGRABSD)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The graphic design program in The Design School is committed to excellence in traditional and contemporary graphic design education, professionalism, research, and service for the community at large. Faculty, alumni, students, and visiting designers and educators constantly reinforce the link between society and nature and vigorously advocate quality in developing communication strategies.

The curriculum acknowledges the need for creative environments that address ecological concerns and encourages students to develop sustainable transdisciplinary works sensitive to cultural aesthetic. The curriculum rests on a strong foundation (design principles) provided in lower-division studio and lecture courses. Upper-division studio courses provide opportunities for students to work in collaborative teams addressing professional projects in information design, interaction design, exhibition design, animation, motion graphics, branding, publication design, web design, interface design and multiple contemporary facets of sensorial design.

Students are free to explore <http://asudesignshow.com/> (<http://asudesignshow.com/>) --- a site maintained, monitored and voiced by alumni and members of the Graphic Design Senior Student Association. The Visual Communication Design faculty believe that the prime endorsement of the quality and continuing evolution of the program is sustained when voices are heard from an active, enthusiastic and professionally progressive body of alumni and students.

Graphic designers are responsible for designing how information is communicated. Forms of communication include print, video, film and electronic (web). Graphic designers are concerned with appearance, choosing the appropriate mechanism for communication, clarity of information and its effectiveness, and how communication is transferred and received.

The BSD program in graphic design places an emphasis on strategic communication developed through a design process that includes research, analysis, conceptualization, planning and realization. The process leads to innovative visual communication design solutions for contemporary design problems that are local to global in scope.

All students who are admitted to the major must pass a degree milestone at the end of the first year to continue in the major. For more information on the milestone process, students should visit <https://design.asu.edu/resources/students/milestones> (<https://design.asu.edu/resources/students/milestones>). This is an eight-semester graphic design program that requires sequential completion of studio coursework or approved equivalent at any point of entry.

Industrial Design, BSD (ARINDBSD)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Industrial designers are responsible for the design of product and service systems that people use in their everyday lives. The BSD in industrial design at ASU focuses on a new model of transdisciplinary product development called integrated innovation. Using this model of innovation, students systematically work through a matrix of four questions:

- What is valuable to users?
- What is possible through engineering?
- What is desirable to business?
- What is good for society and the environment?

The goal of the program is to help students learn how to create product and service systems that: benefit society while minimizing impacts on the environment, can be realized through appropriate technology and engineering, create measurable value for business, and satisfy people's needs.

Interior Design, BSD (ARINTBSD)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The interior design program at The Design School explores how people inhabit, interact with and transform interior environments. Interior designers create environments within buildings that meet the physical and psychological needs of individuals and institutions, providing a useful, rich and rewarding environment for users. Interior design involves the design of space, equipment and furniture. It requires substantial technical and organizational understanding; sensibility to form, lighting, color and texture; and an awareness of design history and theory.

Landscape Architecture, BSLA (ARPLABSLA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BSLA program offers students the opportunity to engage with the community in applied projects that focus on designing sustainable outdoor environments and improving the ecological and social health of the urban environment.

Undergraduate landscape architecture projects can range from large-scale work encompassing urban design, landscape restoration, open space preservation planning, community planning and landscape ecological design to projects at the more intimate scale of a neighborhood park or residential backyard. Emerging areas of focus include creative placemaking; environmental equity, green roofs and living walls; restorative environments; sustainable design; and urban climate design. Students complement their design learning with electives from a broad range of approved courses.

Completion of the Bachelor of Science in Landscape Architecture provides the qualifications to take the Landscape Architect in Training examination leading to registration as a professional landscape architect. As the only undergraduate degree offered at The Design School which leads directly to professional registration and as an entry point to the profession, above average or higher performance is needed to be successful.

Students should see the BSLA major map for details on specific courses and semester curricula.

Career Opportunities:

The bachelor's degree program is designed to prepare students for landscape architecture professional practice and advanced study at the graduate level. Graduates have found employment in nationally recognized firms working with notable landscape architects in large multinational firms or in public agencies. Alumni have also gone on to pursue advanced study at universities with distinguished graduate programs in landscape architecture and allied design fields.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics projects employment for landscape architects will grow 4% from 2018 to 2028, about as fast as the average for all occupations. The bureau also notes employers prefer hiring entry-level landscape architects with internship experience, to significantly reduce the amount of on-the-job training. The bachelor's degree program has an internship requirement meant to address this preference and better prepare graduates for employment.

Music (Music and Culture), BA (HIMUSMCBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA in music with a concentration in music and culture is a broadly based liberal-arts degree offering the most elective flexibility of any ASU music major.

The program provides skills applicable to careers in music and many other fields (e.g., librarianship, arts festival management or production, criticism, audience educator, recruitment, artist representation, publishing, creative writing). Students may develop mainstream competencies such as performing or writing about Western European music, conducting and teaching about music. They may also pursue coursework in popular song writing, beat-making, acoustics, advocacy of wellness through music, dance as musical embodiment and selected musical competencies of Asia, Latin America and other areas.

Students explore music as human history, cultural artifact and social behavior, and engage in interdisciplinary thinking and academic research and writing. Because of the high percentage of elective courses, students may tailor both the General Studies courses and the music electives to suit their career goals.

- Submit a writing sample, which will be evaluated by all musicology faculty members.

Submit evidence of musicianship broadly defined (basic notational literacy plus live audition on, for example, didgeridoo or gospel-style composition, or documented transdisciplinary installation including music), which will be evaluated by all musicology faculty.

- Attend an interview with at least three musicology faculty members.
- Each student will be matched with a musicology advisor at the time of acceptance. The advisor will assist students in the choice of ensembles (as qualified) and electives to support their programs of study. Students must audition and be accepted into large ensembles following established procedures.
- Students who wish to take studio lessons as part of the degree must audition for the appropriate performance faculty members. Students should follow the BA in music audition requirements.

Music (Popular Music), BA (HIMUSPMBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The popular music concentration within the BA program in music at Arizona State University welcomes and accommodates 21st-century musicians interested in popular music, music industry studies and entrepreneurship. This includes but is not limited to singers and songwriters, laptop performers or composers, guitarists, bassists, keyboardists, and other instrumentalists and vocalists whose musical practices and playing styles are representative of varied popular music idioms.

Students in this concentration develop musicianship and expertise in songwriting and creating, performing and producing music. All students gain a working knowledge of the music industry and music business, and the entrepreneurial skills necessary to gain meaningful employment upon graduation. Students participate in individual applied study in a chosen specialization, as well as a variety of group performances and production opportunities. Internships associated with specialization courses provide opportunities for students to apply their learning in a real-life context. A capstone course allows students to develop original work in their chosen area of emphasis.

Some classes for this program are offered on the Downtown Phoenix campus.

Additional Requirements:

Audition Process for admittance to BA in Music (Popular Music) concentration:

Artist Statement:

All auditioning students must submit an artist statement explaining both their current work and vision of their future work in popular music. A minimum of 250 words is required.

Audition:

Live auditions or recorded auditions are required for admission to the BA program in popular music and for placement in MUP 111 Studio Instruction in popular music. A live audition consists of a 15-minute performance or presentation consisting of three to five selections of live or digital music performance. The selections may be original works or selections from popular music repertoire. The audition will also include scales, improvisation and aural skills. Students may also provide a recorded sample of their creative popular music work if they so choose.

For students seeking to pursue popular music performance, a live or recorded performance video is required for at least part of the audition. For other disciplines in which a video is not possible (studio recording, music creation and composition), students are required to submit a digital audio sound recording of three to five selections.

The audition also includes a live or remote interview. A live audition is preferred. Applicants who are unable to visit the campus for a live audition may upload a recorded audition to the School of Music, Dance and Theatre application. These students will be contacted by faculty to arrange a remote interview.

Students interested in pursuing classical music lessons are required to follow the classical repertoire audition requirements for MUP 111 Studio Instruction in addition to auditioning for MUP 111 Studio Instruction in popular music.

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Students transferring from community colleges, other universities or other ASU programs engage in the same audition process as first-year students.

Transfer students are encouraged to audition during the semester before they wish to enroll at ASU. They will also take piano and music theory diagnostic exams at that time to ensure placement in appropriate coursework.

Transfer of courses from other accredited institutions is subject to the existence of parallel and equal courses in the college's curriculum, and departmental or school evaluation of studio and class piano courses with respect to performance standards.

Every candidate for the bachelor's degree must earn a minimum of 30 credit hours in resident credit at ASU. Transfer students enrolled in the institute must complete a minimum of 15 resident credit hours in the major as approved by the faculty.

Change of Major Requirements:

An ASU student who would like to change majors to one offered by the Herberger Institute or one of its programs must have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50 (scale is 4.00 = "A"), and may change their major to the BA in music with a concentration in popular music if they successfully complete the audition process required for admittance, and are accepted into the degree.

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/transfermap?major=HIMUSPMBA~null + &college=CHI>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

The bachelor's degree in music with a concentration in popular music prepares students for potential careers in the popular music industry that involve creativity and creating new work, being a flexible musician, collaborating with others in the community and having knowledge of music business and music marketing. Possible jobs include:

- concert management and promotion
- entrepreneurship
- music marketing
- music performance in the popular music sector

Music Therapy, BMUS (FAMUSTHBM)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BMus program in music therapy prepares students for a career in health care, community-based and special education settings. Music therapists use carefully planned music interventions to achieve desired changes in a client's individualized behavior and functioning. Music therapy is a profession in which engagement and receptive or active music-making helps a client achieve individual therapeutic goals. Educating the potential music therapist requires a wide range of musical, verbal and nonverbal skills. Music therapy students have many opportunities to develop their clinical skills. Students also study:

- human anatomy
- musical improvisation
- popular music styles
- psychology
- songwriting
- special education
- world music

Performance (Music Theatre), BMUS (FAMUSPMBM)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BMus in performance with a concentration in music theatre is an intensive, performance-oriented program designed to hone all the skills necessary for the complete musical theatre artist. Training includes private voice lessons every semester of study as well as specialized instruction in acting, dance, audition techniques, technical production, repertoire classes, scene study and performance. A unique feature of this program includes an innovative sequence of musical theatre performance courses designed to synthesize all the abilities necessary to succeed as a professional musical theatre performer.

The music theatre and opera program is unique in that students are provided with professional training in both opera and musical theatre and training in a broad variety of musical theatre styles from traditional to contemporary. Two musicals and two operas are produced each year, plus new works and student-led productions. The annual showcase in New York City and Phoenix as well as formal collaborations with Arizona Opera and The Phoenix Theatre Company provide additional performance opportunities and valuable career immersion experiences for all students.

Performance (Orchestral Instrument), BMUS (FAMUSPOBM)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BMus program in performance with a concentration in an orchestral instrument focuses on the study of music literature and techniques on a specific orchestral instrument. Students receive coaching from world-renowned faculty and visiting guest artists, attend masterclasses, and receive extensive performance experience in large ensembles as a chamber musician and as a soloist.

Students study a specific orchestral instrument intensively with a faculty member for eight semesters including major repertoire, solo literature and chamber music. Training is focused toward preparing students for a career in orchestral or chamber groups, in military bands or as a private lesson instructor. Students learn skills that prepare them for auditions and learn how to network with other musicians, how to market themselves professionally, and how to schedule and organize recitals and performances.

Performance and Movement, BA (HIPERMVBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA in performance and movement is an inclusive, transdisciplinary degree program that encourages students to develop both collaborative approaches to learning and professional industry skills in the performing arts. This program is grounded in cultivating community practice through theatre, dance and music.

The bachelor's degree program is located within the ecosystem of Phoenix, the sixth largest urban center in the United States, and enables students to understand, deconstruct and uplift diverse artistic modes across media and encourages the student to create a flexible degree program that intersects and engages these areas of interest. This degree program offers a number of focus areas: dance and theatre, music theatre, social and partnership dance, and urban arts.

Dance and theatre --- The dance and theatre focus area is designed for dancers who seek experience working with theatrical performance and acting, actors and performers who seek to balance text and voice work with movement exploration, and writers and directors who want to explore a wide range of approaches to live performance.

Social and partnership dance --- The social and partnership dance focus area is an innovative program that allows students to explore multiple styles and approaches in social and partnership dance both in formal classroom study and informal student-centered community events. The focus area seeks to prepare future Latin social and ballroom dance leaders with pedagogical, performance and community-building strategies to support the need for serving local and national community engagement in social dance as a means to create social transformation and change.

Urban arts --- The urban arts focus area is designed for the student interested in melding intersectional embodied practice, social justice and urban arts culture by offering a critical look at the historical, social and practical application of urban arts scholarship and culture. The program focus spans various forms of urban artistry and expression through thought-provoking, in-studio courses and hands-on practical application and connects students with scholars and urban arts practitioners to embrace the interdisciplinary nature of urban arts: dance, music, visual and voice.

Aeronautical Management Technology (Air Traffic Management), BS (ESAMTATBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The BS program in aeronautical management technology with a concentration in air traffic management provides a technical foundation in the air traffic control procedures used by air traffic controllers in air traffic control towers and air traffic control radar facilities.

Students gain a strong background in aircraft operations, management skills and business principles through coursework specific to air traffic control and aviation. As a part of the degree program, students are required to take courses that will qualify them to earn their airline dispatcher certificate.

This is an intensive program of classroom study and laboratory practice using state-of-the-art air traffic control simulators to enhance and reinforce classroom study. Students receive training in the methodologies and technologies that are currently being developed for the next generation of air traffic control systems. Students develop the skills of analytical thinking, clear and concise communication, problem-solving, and teamwork.

The Aviation Accreditation Board International accredits this program and the Federal Aviation Administration certifies flight and ground instruction.

Career Opportunities:

The Federal Aviation Administration's 2016 Controller Workforce Plan projected that the agency plans to hire more than 7,400 new controllers by 2021 to keep pace with the expected attrition rate and traffic growth. The total number of planned hires for the period of 2016--2025 is 12,088 new controllers. The increase in the volume of air traffic requires more controllers to handle the additional work. New computerized systems assist controllers by automatically making many of the routine decisions, allowing controllers to handle more traffic and thus increasing their productivity.

Despite the obvious demand for new controllers in the immediate future, competition to get into the FAA-approved training programs is expected to remain intense as there generally are many more applicants than there are openings. Graduates who have met all the FAA requirements are eligible for consideration for employment.

Aeronautical Management Technology (Air Transportation Management), BS (TSAMTMBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The air transportation management concentration of the BS program in aeronautical management technology provides students with a strong foundation of aviation concepts, including airline administration, airport planning, aviation law, policy and human factors as well as technical knowledge focusing on power plants, structures and aerodynamics. Students progress into courses focusing on business and management and operational aspects of aviation such as airline administration and airport planning. All students finish the program by participating in an internship within industry and completion of a capstone project.

This program prepares students for leadership positions within airlines, airports, government, consulting and entrepreneurial enterprises.

The Aviation Accreditation Board International accredits this program.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Aeronautical Management Technology (Professional Flight), BS (TSAMTFBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

Students in the professional flight concentration of the BS program in aeronautical management technology learn to fly in an academic environment that prepares graduates for careers as professional pilots.

Flight training is offered by an ASU-approved flight provider in late-model aircraft equipped with state-of-the-art avionics. Flight instruction takes place at the Phoenix-Mesa Gateway Airport, adjacent to the Polytechnic campus.

Students may take advantage of pathway agreements for guaranteed interviews with regional air carriers.

This program is for students who are seriously interested in becoming professional airline pilots. Graduates are prepared to assume responsibilities in a wide variety of technically related areas within professional aviation flight operations.

The Aviation Accreditation Board International accredits this program and the Federal Aviation Administration certifies flight and ground instruction.

Aeronautical Management Technology (Unmanned Aerial Systems), BS (TSAMTUASBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The unmanned aerial systems concentration of the BS program in aeronautical management technology prepares students for careers in the rapidly growing area of unmanned aerial systems, including operations, remote sensing, data collection and analysis.

The concentration incorporates all aviation management technology core courses and unmanned aerial systems concentration courses. This provides an overview of unmanned aerial systems operations followed by detailed knowledge of unmanned aerial systems-specific systems and technology (ground control stations; data links; flight planning and operations; search, detect and avoid technologies; and payloads) and unmanned aerial systems sensor operations. A critical aspect of this academic area of study is the data capture and transfer of the sensor information collected from the unmanned aerial vehicle.

This innovative concentration brings together the most up-to-date and relevant aspects facing multiple industries today by addressing flight system planning and operations and the employment of the systems in the congested National Airspace System.

If the university requires a TOEFL score from the applicant (see <https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply> (<https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply>)), then admission to engineering requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (paper-based), 213 (computer-based), 79 on iBT (internet-based) or a minimum IELTS score of 6.5.

Freshman Admission:

- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score or minimum 24 ACT combined score or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA or class ranking in top 25% of high school class, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students with fewer than 24 transferable college credit hours:

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for less than 24 transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies, and
- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score (or 1140 if taken prior to March 5, 2016) or minimum 24 ACT combined score, or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA, or class ranking in top 25% of high school class

Transfer students with 24 or more transferable college credit hours must meet EITHER the primary or the secondary criteria (not both):

Primary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies (if Admission Services requires submission of a high school transcript)

Secondary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 2.75 for 24 or more transfer credit hours, and
- minimum GPA of 2.75 in all critical courses: MAE 201, MAE 202, MAE 213 and MAE 242

Change of Major Requirements:

Admission requirements for many majors in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering are higher than university admission standards: <https://engineering.asu.edu/admission-requirements> (<https://engineering.asu.edu/admission-requirements>).

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/transfermap?major=ESAEROBSE~null + &college=CES>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

A majority of students entering the field of aerospace engineering desire to work on the design and analysis of aerospace vehicles. Most graduates are employed in the aerospace industry or in government positions related to aerospace. Specific careers in aerospace engineering include:

- aeronautical and space systems integration
- configuration development
- material and structural design
- propulsion engineering
- space mission design and analysis
- vehicle and component analysis using computer-aided tools
- vehicle design and performance
- wind tunnel and flight testing

The aerospace engineering program has the following educational objectives:

- Through volunteering, entrepreneurial endeavors, community service, employment, etc., graduates of the aerospace engineering program will demonstrate commitment to the Sun Devil ideals of global engagement, social embeddedness, social transformation and sustainability.

Graduates of the aerospace engineering program should have attained one or more of the following objectives within a few years after completing their degrees:

- employment in aerospace or other field in a position that capitalizes on the skills and abilities gained through the degree in aerospace engineering, in positions of increasing responsibility and leadership within the organization
- admission into a graduate degree program in aerospace engineering or other technical field
- admission into a professional degree program, such as law or business, in accordance with the specific interests and abilities of the graduate

Aerospace Engineering (Astronautics), BSE (ESAEASBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The aerospace engineering curriculum provides students with an education in technological areas critical to the design and development of aerospace vehicles and systems.

The astronautics curriculum covers:

- attitude determination and control
- elective topics in aeronautics
- gas dynamics
- orbital mechanics
- rocket propulsion
- space environment
- space structures
- telecommunications.

Students in the astronautics concentration culminate their major study with a capstone design project that incorporates the multiple disciplines involved in the creation of a space-going vehicle.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org>).

Aerospace Engineering (Autonomous Vehicle Systems), BSE (ESAEAVSBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Emerging emphasis on autonomous aircraft technology and operations in both military and civilian sectors signals a new era within the aeronautical community focused on autonomous vehicles and systems. The autonomous vehicle concentration provides graduates with knowledge and skills required for any career in aerospace engineering plus those specific to unmanned aerial vehicles and systems.

The curriculum is structured so students have general exposure to the engineering of autonomous aircraft plus track courses in one area important to this field. The tracks are guidance, navigation and control, and communications. The tracks are intended for aerospace engineering students.

All paths through this concentration satisfy accreditation criteria for aerospace engineering.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org>).

Applied Science (Aviation), BAS (TSAMTABAS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

This BAS program in applied science allows students who have an applicable AAS from an accredited institution to transfer 60 credit hours toward a Bachelor of Applied Science at ASU. Students pursuing this degree may have more than 60 credit hours to complete in order to obtain their Bachelor of Applied Science upon transfer to ASU. Students who have earned an Associate of Applied Science degree from a regionally accredited Arizona community college may be eligible to transfer up to 75 credits toward the Bachelor of Applied Science degree. Students should work with their academic advisor to ensure their courses will meet degree requirements.

The concentration in aviation is for students who have received training and education in some aspect of the air transportation industry, such as air transportation management, flight or aviation maintenance, as part of their associate degree.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Students should click the link for more information and eligibility requirements of the WUE program (<https://admission.asu.edu/wue>).

Applied Science (Graphic Information Technology), BAS (TSGITBAS)

Campus: Polytechnic, Online

Program Description:

The BAS program with a concentration in graphic information technology allows students who have an applicable AAS from an accredited institution to transfer 60 credit hours toward a Bachelor of Applied Science degree at ASU. Students pursuing this degree may have more than 60 credit hours to complete in order to obtain their Bachelor of Applied Science upon transfer to ASU. Students who have earned an Associate of Applied Science degree from a regionally accredited Arizona community college may be eligible to transfer up to 75 credits toward the Bachelor of Applied Science degree. Students should work with their academic advisor to ensure their courses will meet degree requirements.

The cross-media nature of the graphics industry requires tomorrow's graduates to understand the full spectrum of visual design and production as well as current business practices. The graphic information technology program prepares graduates for careers as visual design technologists encompassing front-end web design and development, printing and digital publishing, commercial photography and videography, and game art and animation. This is an intensive program of study emphasizing theory and hands-on laboratory practice.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Biomedical Engineering, BSE (ESBMEBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Biomedical engineering applies principles of engineering to the study and resolution of problems in biology and medicine.

The program objective is to prepare high-quality graduates with a broad-based education in biomedical engineering for productive employment, graduate study or professional programs, especially in human and animal medicine, biotechnology and related biology-based engineering fields; for continued development of technical knowledge, awareness and leadership abilities so graduates may address domestic or global issues in human health; and for preparation to ethically and responsibly contribute to society by drawing from an integrated, transdisciplinary biomedical engineering education that focuses on sustainability and environmentalism.

Graduates are able to apply their skills in an ethical, sustainable and environmentally responsible manner to make contributions that address societal and individual needs.

The admission standards for majors in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering are higher than minimum university admission standards. International students may have an additional English-language proficiency criterion. Foreign nationals must meet the same admission requirements shown below with the possible additional requirement of a minimum TOEFL score. If the university requires a TOEFL score from the applicant (see <https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply> (<https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply>)), then admission to engineering requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (paper-based), 79 on iBT (internet-based) or a minimum IELTS score of 6.5.

Freshman Admission:

- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score or minimum 24 ACT combined score or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA or class ranking in top 25% of high school class, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students with fewer than 24 transferable college credit hours:

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for less than 24 transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies, and
- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score (or 1140 if taken prior to March 5, 2016) or minimum 24 ACT combined score, or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA, or class ranking in top 25% of high school class

Transfer students with 24 or more transferable college credit hours must meet EITHER the primary OR the secondary criteria (not both):

Primary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies (if Admission Services requires submission of a high school transcript)

Secondary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 2.75 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- minimum GPA of 3.00 in all critical courses for Terms 1 and 2 (see major map for critical courses)

Career Opportunities:

Biomedical engineers are primarily employed in:

- governmental regulatory agencies
- hospital and research facilities
- medical and educational institutions
- medical device, biotechnology and pharmaceutical industries

In industry, they may work in all aspects of product development including:

- business development
- manufacturing
- marketing
- quality
- regulatory
- research and design
- sales

Because of their background in both the engineering and medical fields, they often serve a coordinating or interfacing function and provide a key role for transdisciplinary teams. Government positions may involve evaluating new technologies, testing product quality and safety, and setting standards.

In the hospital, biomedical engineers serving in a clinical engineering function may provide advice on the selection and use of medical equipment and supervise performance testing and maintenance. Biomedical engineers may also build customized devices for special health care, rehabilitation or research needs.

Chemical Engineering, BSE (ESCHEBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Chemical engineering deals with the application of chemistry, physics and mathematics to the process of converting raw materials or chemicals into more useful or valuable forms. Chemical engineering also involves the design of valuable new materials and chemical products.

The BSE program offered in chemical engineering builds on a broad base of knowledge within the basic and mathematical sciences and engineering, and it offers excellent career opportunities. Chemical engineers are engaged in the development and production of a diverse range of products, including high-performance materials needed for aerospace, automotive, biomedical, electronic and environmental applications. The modern discipline of chemical engineering is intertwined with biology and biomedical engineering.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org/> (<http://www.abet.org/>).

Civil Engineering, BSE (ESCEEBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Civil engineering majors in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering have three choices within the accredited BSE program: civil engineering; civil engineering with environmental engineering concentration; and civil engineering with sustainable engineering concentration.

The first choice allows students to choose among design and technical elective courses in their senior year. The other choices specify design and technical courses to students with minimal choices. Regardless of choice, the Bachelor of Science in Engineering in civil engineering is accredited by ABET.

Civil engineering involves the analysis, planning, design, construction, maintenance and application of sustainable practices in all areas of urban infrastructure for government, commerce, industry and the public domain. These include airports, bridges, canals, dams, factories, office towers, roadway systems, schools, tunnels and subway systems, and water purification facilities.

Civil engineers are concerned with the impact their projects have on the public and the environment; they coordinate the needs of society with technical and economic feasibility.

The curriculum exposes students to the following areas of civil engineering, with a strong emphasis on sustainability:

- construction engineering
- environmental engineering
- geotechnical engineering
- hydrosystems engineering
- structures
- transportation

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <https://www.abet.org> (<https://www.abet.org>).

Civil engineering with a concentration in environmental engineering is a transdisciplinary field based on traditional civil engineering principles and on chemistry, biology and geology. Environmental engineers are involved with:

- air pollution technology
- analysis of the fate and transport of pollutants
- application of sustainable practices in all areas of urban infrastructure
- construction of hazardous waste containment systems
- design and operation of water and wastewater treatment systems
- remediation of contaminated soils and waters
- surface water quality management
- water conservation and reuse

Computer Science, BS (ESCSEBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Computer science professionals design, analyze and improve the quality of computer software and systems for a variety of applications, including:

- artificial intelligence
- computer vision
- cybersecurity
- graphics
- information management
- multimedia
- networking

Examples of projects a computer scientist might work on include:

- computer networking
- database and information systems
- distribution processing systems
- gaming systems
- next-generation computing systems
- search engines
- software engineering
- web services.

The BS program in computer science focuses on the design of computers, computational processes for problem-solving and information transfer and transformation with an emphasis on improving software and system quality, security, performance and usability. The program supports the evolution of the computing and informatics disciplines: the integration of computer and information sciences with engineering, science and other disciplines.

Career Opportunities:

Computer science graduates secure employment in a variety of capacities ranging from computer and software design to development of information technologies. Their jobs are often distinguished by the high level of theoretical expertise applied to solving complex problems and to the creation and application of new computing technologies. Some computer science-related jobs may include:

- creating computer games and graphics systems
- designing artificial intelligence systems
- developing mobile computing applications
- developing network security applications
- discovering data management and mining solutions for large scale data analytics
- inventing and implementing more efficient computing systems for managing data and information, including information retrieval and search on the Internet

With the theoretical foundation built into the program, computer science graduates can excel in system and software development as well as in designing effective computing solutions for emerging and challenging problems in modern society. Skills in system development and research can lead to entrepreneurial activity that produces innovative computing products and services.

Computer Science (Cybersecurity), BS (ESCSEIBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in computer science with a concentration in cybersecurity provides students with the knowledge and skills needed to build dependable and secure information systems and networks and to ensure the integrity and quality of information being stored, processed and transmitted.

ASU has been certified as a National Center of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education and a National Center of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance - Research by the National Security Agency and the Department of Homeland Security. Information assurance courseware at ASU has been certified by the Information Assurance Courseware Evaluation Program to satisfy the standards for Information Systems Security Professionals (NSTISSI 4011) and Senior Systems Managers (CNSSI 4012). For more information on information assurance courseware at ASU, students should refer to <http://ia.asu.edu/education.php> (<http://ia.asu.edu/education.php>).

Accredited by the Computing Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org/>).

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 265 - Calculus for Engineers I

Program Math Intensity: Substantial

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

- Computer Science (Art, Media and Engineering), MS
- Computer Science (Big Data Systems), MCS
- Computer Science (Big Data Systems), MS
- Computer Science (Biomedical Informatics), MS
- Computer Science (Cybersecurity), MCS
- Computer Science (Cybersecurity), MS
- Computer Science, MCS
- Computer Science, MS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Admission Requirements:

General University Admission Requirements:

All students are required to meet general university admission requirements.

Freshman (<https://students.asu.edu/freshman/requirements>)

Transfer (<https://transfer.asu.edu/index.php?q=transferrequirements>)

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

The admission standards for majors in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering are higher than minimum university standards. International students may have an additional English-language proficiency criterion. Foreign nationals must meet the same admission requirements shown below with the possible additional requirement of a minimum TOEFL score. If the university requires a TOEFL score from the applicant, (see <https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply> (<https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply>)) then admission to engineering requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (paper-based), 213 (computer-based), 79 on iBT (internet-based) or a minimum IELTS score of 6.5.

Freshman Admission:

- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score or minimum 24 ACT combined score or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA or class ranking in top 25% of high school class, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students with fewer than 24 transferable college credit hours:

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for less than 24 transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies, and
- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score (or 1140 if taken prior to March 5, 2016) or minimum 24 ACT combined score, or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA, or class ranking in top 25% of high school class

Transfer students with 24 or more transferable college credit hours must meet EITHER the primary OR the secondary criteria (not both):

Primary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies (if Admission Services requires submission of a high school transcript)

Secondary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 2.75 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- minimum GPA of 2.75 in all critical courses for Terms 1 and 2 (see major map for critical courses)

Change of Major Requirements:

Admission requirements for many majors in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering are higher than university admission standards:

<https://engineering.asu.edu/admission-requirements/> (<https://engineering.asu.edu/admission-requirements/>).

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/transfermap?major=ESCSEIBS~null + &college=CES>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

Domestic students enrolled in the cybersecurity concentration are eligible for federal fellowships, such as the Department of Defense Information Assurance Scholarship Program and the Federal Cyber Service Scholarship for Service Program. For more information on the scholarship programs, students should see <https://globalsecurity.asu.edu/center-cybersecurity-and-digital-forensics/scholarship> (<https://globalsecurity.asu.edu/center-cybersecurity-and-digital-forensics/scholarship>).

Graduates with a degree in computer science with a cybersecurity concentration find employment in a variety of capacities ranging from computer system and software development to research on information assurance technologies. Some related jobs may include:

- analyzing computer forensic data
- designing secure information systems and databases
- developing secure software
- information security consulting
- secure computer and network applications

Program Description:

The software engineering concentration of the BS program in computer science is appropriate for computer science students seeking careers as software engineers. Students learn advanced processes, methodologies and tools for developing and testing large and small software applications in emerging areas such as:

- databases
- enterprise systems
- interoperable systems
- mobile computing
- service-orientated computing

They also learn information assurance concepts and techniques, or principles of human-computer interaction and methods, for developing these applications. The curriculum prepares students to assume leadership roles in software development organizations and to practice professional standards and emerging software technology to the software engineering life-cycle activities.

Career Opportunities:

Career opportunities are plentiful for software engineers. Graduates of this program possess the knowledge and skills to work across the spectrum of software development process activities, including:

- architecture
- coding
- project management
- quality assurance
- requirements engineering
- testing

Careers include:

- software analyst
- software architect
- software engineer
- software task leader
- software tester

Graduates of the software engineering concentration find employment in large and small organizations that develop, deploy and manage software systems. They work on all types of projects that include large, complex engineering systems, distributed banking, financial and government software, and gaming.

Computer Systems Engineering, BSE (ESCSEBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BSE program in computer systems engineering focuses on the analysis, design, testing, integration and evaluation of hardware and software systems. The curriculum is grounded in many engineering disciplines, including the applications of science and technology to the design of:

- computer architecture
- cybersecurity
- digital circuits
- distributed and embedded systems
- networking
- operating systems

Students engage in the design of integrated hardware and software solutions for computing, communication and control applications. They practice many aspects of engineering activities, such as the development of:

- computer networks
- embedded and ubiquitous systems
- high-performance computer systems
- individual digital components

Students become skilled at interfacing different pieces of hardware and software components and integrating systems and products with new capabilities and improved quality and performance.

Computer systems engineers are employed in industry, government, education and consulting firms where they engage in the design, development and operation of hardware and software systems of computer and networking equipment.

Computer systems engineers often find themselves focusing on engineering problems or challenges of emerging computer systems, from chips to device controllers, embedded systems and high-performance computing servers. Their jobs usually involve the research, design and development of computer hardware and software for practical applications. Their work can result in innovative, state-of-the-art products that integrate computing and communication capabilities, such as those in:

- avionics and space vehicles
- digital television and photography
- intelligent highways and control systems for vehicles
- mobile devices and smart applications
- new apparatuses for health care and for the sight-impaired or others with physical disabilities
- security and defense systems

Construction Engineering, BSE (ESCONBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BSE program in construction engineering focuses on a combination of design and management topics, preparing students for a career in the engineering and construction industry. The program prepares students who wish to gain a professional engineering license while working at the interface of design and construction, and it is attractive for students interested in a career that emphasizes the construction of infrastructure.

The degree program includes engineering design and construction management courses with a focus on sustainability and building information modeling topics. Construction management content includes construction methods, contract management, cost and schedule control, people management and project estimating.

The curriculum's design content includes structures, geotechnical engineering and transportation. Students are further prepared with the computer, management, technical and people skills needed to succeed.

This degree is the third in the southwestern U.S. and one of about 20 worldwide.

- material suppliers
- specialty subcontractors

Graduates have unique skills to be able to take on the role of integrator in the delivery of design-build projects or development activities. As the graduate's career progresses, they should be able to take on leadership roles in the delivery of sustainable facilities in the built environment and then progress through successively higher levels of management responsibility. The graduate should be particularly attuned to the design and construction of heavy civil and industrial facilities, meeting the infrastructure needs of society.

Construction Management and Technology, BS (ESCONMGTTBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in construction management and technology allows students to specialize in commercial, heavy, residential and specialty construction and facility management. Students learn to organize, lead and manage the building construction business processes related to real estate, facility and infrastructure projects.

Construction management is the most vital function on a job site. Construction managers represent the interests of the building owner or the contractor and interact with architects, engineers, subcontractors, vendors and suppliers to ensure the success of construction projects in the built environment.

This program focuses on the business of construction and technology, such as building information modeling.

Students learn the basics of design; the construction methods specific to each type of construction (heavy, residential, commercial, specialty); and the process of sustainable or green construction. They learn how to estimate, schedule and control the costs of a project and what it takes to manage the people involved and the various types of contracts. Graduates are prepared with the computer, management, technical and people skills needed to succeed.

This is one of two construction programs in the state of Arizona and one of approximately 80 accredited programs in the nation.

This program is accredited by the American Council for Construction Education: <https://www.acce-hq.org/> (<https://www.acce-hq.org/>).

If the university requires a TOEFL score from the applicant (see <https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply> (<https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply>)), then admission to engineering requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (paper-based), 213 (computer-based), 79 on iBT (internet-based) or a minimum IELTS score of 6.5.

Freshman Admission:

- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score or minimum 24 ACT combined score or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA or class ranking in top 25% of high school class, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students with fewer than 24 transferable college credit hours:

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for less than 24 transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies, and
- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score (or 1140 if taken prior to March 5, 2016) or minimum 24 ACT combined score, or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA, or class ranking in top 25% of high school class

Transfer students with 24 or more transferable college credit hours must meet EITHER the primary OR the secondary criteria (not both):

Primary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for 24 or more transfer hours, and

- no high school math or science competency deficiencies (if Admission Services requires submission of a high school transcript)

Secondary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 2.50 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- minimum GPA of 2.75 in all critical courses for Terms 1 and 2 (see major map for critical courses)

Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/transfermap?major=ESCONMGTB&college=CES>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

The construction management and technology program provides a foundation for students who wish to pursue careers as project managers, project engineers, estimators or schedulers and eventually become principals of firms engaged in the construction of industrial, commercial or residential projects.

The heavy construction emphasis area prepares students for careers related to public works such as highways, airports, bridges, utility systems and water or waste treatment facilities.

The commercial and residential emphasis areas prepare students for careers in real estate development, home production systems, commercial construction, health care and special industrial building projects. Students are also prepared to enter the sustainable or green construction market.

The specialty construction emphasis prepares students to organize, lead and manage the building process at the subcontractor level and prepares students for careers as contractors working with mechanical and electrical systems. It also prepares students for careers in management at specialty contracting firms, such as control systems, electrical distribution or heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems for large and complex facilities such as data centers, health care organizations and semiconductor manufacturing plants as well as commercial facilities.

Electrical Engineering, BSE (ESEEEBSE)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The electrical engineering undergraduate program prepares students for positions as electrical engineers.

Following initial coursework in mathematics and sciences, the foundation classes build a solid base of engineering knowledge. The electrical engineering curriculum includes a number of required upper-division electrical engineering and technical elective courses in such areas as circuits; communication, signal processing and control systems; computer engineering; electromagnetics; power; and solid-state devices.

Approved technical elective courses provide students with an opportunity either to broaden their background in electrical engineering or to study in greater depth the technical subjects in which they have special interest.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org/> (<http://www.abet.org/>).

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 265 - Calculus for Engineers I

Program Math Intensity: Substantial

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to choose either a 2.5- or a 3-year path while participating in the same high-quality educational experience of a 4-year option. Students can opt to fast-track their studies after acceptance into a participating program by connecting with their academic advisor. Fast track options appear at the top of the major map.

This program also allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

Computer Engineering (Electrical Engineering), MS

Electrical Engineering, MS

Electrical Engineering, MSE

Robotics and Autonomous Systems (Electrical Engineering), MS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Electrical Engineering (Electric Power and Energy Systems), BSE (ESEEBPSE)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The electric power and energy systems concentration in the BSE electrical engineering program prepares students for positions after graduation in industries dealing with generation, transmission and utilization of electric power. Generation includes conventional power generation (fossil fuel and nuclear) and alternative energy systems, including solar, wind and fuel cells.

Students in this program complete the foundation courses in math, science and engineering and then are required to take the pathway course in electric power and complete nine of the 15 technical elective credit hours with power classes. The senior design capstone project focuses upon the area of electric power and energy systems.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org>).

Engineering, BSE (TSEGRBSE)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The ABET-accredited BSE in engineering program prepares graduates to collaborate across disciplines to design and build solutions to real-world problems. In the engineering program, students apply engineering fundamental knowledge and design thinking to real projects every semester.

In the Bachelor of Science in Engineering program, students choose a disciplinary concentration to develop in-depth knowledge in a specific area, as well as a secondary focus area. This flexibility allows students to tailor their degree to achieve their individual career and life goals.

Students can choose from the following concentrations: automotive systems, electrical systems, mechanical engineering systems and robotics.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org>).

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all

Engineering (Automotive Systems), BSE (TSEGRASBSE)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The ABET-accredited BSE in engineering program prepares graduates to collaborate across disciplines to design and build solutions to real-world problems. In the program, students apply fundamental engineering knowledge and design thinking to real projects every semester.

Students in the automotive systems concentration of the Bachelor of Science in Engineering program first build a broad engineering foundation to which they add skills and knowledge necessary for vehicle design and testing. The curriculum focuses on automotive engineering fundamentals, including powertrain engineering and chassis system design as well as hands-on projects that involve designing, analyzing and building of actual automotive systems.

Graduates of this concentration are able to provide leadership in automotive engineering settings, especially automotive testing and hybrid propulsion systems, which are intrinsically transdisciplinary in nature.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org>).

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Career Opportunities:

Engineers collaborate on transdisciplinary teams to design, manufacture and deliver innovative technological products and services. The Bachelor of Science in Engineering program enables students to develop sophisticated technical skills in tandem with the professional skills of communication, teamwork, and collaboration and the self-motivation and adaptability that many employers seek. Graduates are prepared to work in large corporations, government agencies and small businesses, as well as to go on to graduate school to pursue advanced degrees. The program's emphasis on open-ended design and project-based learning supports the development of entrepreneurial skills and attitudes, and some students start companies of their own.

Robotics plays an increasingly important role in many different industries, including manufacturing, automotive, defense systems, biomedical devices and aerospace. Graduates from this program have a broad base of technical knowledge in the design and implementation of robotic electro-mechanical systems. In addition, they have the operational and communication skills that make them invaluable members of multidisciplinary engineering teams, well-suited for employment across the whole spectrum of applications.

Engineering Management, BSE (ESEMGBSE)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The BSE in engineering management is designed to provide the graduate with skills for effective management and leadership of engineering-driven enterprises.

The curriculum provides a breadth of engineering science and design with depth in one specific area suitable for practice. This knowledge is augmented with an understanding of business practices and organizational behavior and with the development of management skills to enable the graduate to succeed in the management of a scientific or engineering enterprise. Topics covered include project and resource management, financial engineering, risk management, configuration management, service plans, product liability, entrepreneurship and operations management, in addition to product design and process development.

Graduates have a deep understanding of at least one industry sector based upon the focus area courses.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <https://www.abet.org> (<https://www.abet.org/>).

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 265 - Calculus for Engineers I

Program Math Intensity: Substantial

Concurrent Degrees:

This degree is also offered as concurrent degree program with Economics, BS

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to choose either a 2.5- or a 3-year path while participating in the same high-quality educational experience of a 4-year option. Students can opt to fast-track their studies after acceptance into a participating program by connecting with their academic advisor. Fast track options appear at the top of the major map.

This program also allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

Industrial Engineering, MS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Transfer (<https://transfer.asu.edu/index.php?q=transferrequirements>)

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

The admission requirements for majors in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering are higher than minimum university admission requirements. Students should select a second major choice when applying for admission to a degree program in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering.

International students may have an additional English-language proficiency criterion. Foreign nationals must meet the same admission requirements shown below with the possible additional requirement of a minimum TOEFL score. If the university requires a TOEFL score from the applicant (see <https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply> (<https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply>)), then admission to engineering requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (paper-based), 79 on iBT (internet-based) or a minimum IELTS score of 6.5.

Freshman Admission:

- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score or minimum 24 ACT combined score or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA or class ranking in top 25% of high school class, and
- Admission may be granted with one deficiency in no more than two competency areas: <https://admission.asu.edu/first-year/competency-requirements> (<https://admission.asu.edu/first-year/competency-requirements>). Deficiencies in both math and laboratory science are not acceptable.

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students with fewer than 24 transferable college credit hours:

- minimum transfer GPA of 2.75 for less than 24 transfer hours, and
- satisfy the freshmen admission requirements

Transfer students with more than 24 transferable college credit hours:

- minimum transfer GPA of 2.75 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- if Admission Services requires submission of a high school transcript, admission may be granted with one deficiency in no more than two competency areas: <https://admission.asu.edu/first-year/competency-requirements> (<https://admission.asu.edu/first-year/competency-requirements>). Deficiencies in both math and laboratory science are not acceptable.

Concurrent degree admission requirements: Engineering Management, BSE and Economics, BS:

- minimum 1250 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score (650 minimum on SAT math) or minimum 29 ACT combined score (29 minimum on ACT math), and
- 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA

Environmental Engineering, BSE (ESEVEBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The environmental engineering BSE program educates tomorrow's engineers to solve complex environmental problems and design systems at the human, urban and planetary scale.

Environmental engineers are actively involved with the following topics and activities: air quality monitoring and air pollution control technology; analysis of the fate and transport of pollutants; application of sustainable design principles; design and operation of water and wastewater treatment systems; design of hazardous waste containment systems; design of solid waste management systems; remediation of contaminated soil, sediment and water; and water quality, water conservation and water reuse.

In recognition of the interdisciplinary nature of environmental engineering challenges, the degree program incorporates courses from other programs in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering including chemical engineering and environmental resources management. Engineering courses build on strong foundation in chemistry, biology, geology, physics and mathematics. Courses cover fundamental engineering concepts applied to environmental processes and environmental engineering design as well as applied learning experiences including required internship or research experience and capstone design course.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates from the environmental engineering program have career opportunities in both the private and public sectors. The private sector consulting industry in environmental engineering is growing as greater environmental awareness and emerging novel pollutants require continual refinement of regulations and environmental system design standards. In the public sector, municipalities and regulating agencies require a knowledgeable workforce to understand how public policy can improve human health and ecosystem services through environmental engineering processes.

The college seeks to accredit the Bachelor of Science in Engineering in environmental engineering to allow graduates to pursue professional licensure that enables environmental engineers to design and build drinking water and wastewater treatment facilities, contaminated soil and water remediation systems, and hazardous and solid waste confinement systems.

Environmental and Resource Management, BS (TSETMBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The BS program in environmental and resource management provides critical scientific and management skills for graduates who work in industry or government to ensure the health of natural ecosystems and mitigate the environmental impact of the industrial world.

The curriculum combines a strong foundation in biology, chemistry, physics and mathematics, with a solid grounding in environmental law and policy. Students learn to apply environmental technologies to drinking water and wastewater treatment, management of hazardous and solid wastes, and control of industrial and mobile sources of air pollution. They study OSHA regulations on health and safety, as well as strategies to protect workers in hazardous environments. International environmental issues and legal frameworks are included along with U.S. environmental laws.

Graduates with these skills are in high demand and can find work in industry, governmental management and regulatory agencies, or in policy-making organizations.

An accelerated BS/MS degree option is available in which up to nine credit hours of the bachelor's degree may be applied toward the 33 hours required for the master's degree in environmental and resource management. A special application is required for this option.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Career Opportunities:

Graduates are firmly grounded in the scientific, technical and legal problems facing environmental managers in today's business climate. They are prepared to be environmental, health and safety professionals in industrial settings such as manufacturing, mining, oil and gas or environmental engineering consulting firms. They also assure compliance with OSHA and EPA requirements in laboratories at pharmaceutical companies, water treatment plants or academic labs. On the regulatory side, graduates work for agencies such as the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency or state and county departments of environmental quality.

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The user experience concentration is designed to provide graphic information technology majors with an interdisciplinary foundation in design, research and communication to prepare them for the rapidly growing area of user experience.

The concentration provides students with a conceptual understanding and applied skills in methods of gathering user information, analyzing data and communicating through visual design technologies. Although its disciplinary home and primary focus is graphic information technology, the concentration includes courses from the fields of human systems engineering and technical communication in order to provide students with the multiple perspectives and complementary skills needed for user experience work.

Human Systems Engineering, BS (ESHSEBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The BS program in human systems engineering provides students with an understanding of the science of human performance and with experience using methods and tools to apply this understanding to design and problem-solving in a wide variety of domains, such as product usability, learning design, sports performance, and workplace and hospital safety.

A wide variety of professions need experts in human factors to work on problems that involve an understanding of human performance. Interest areas include user experience, aviation human factors, cognitive performance, consumer psychology, transportation human factors, patient safety, effective teamwork, health psychology, learning optimization, social cognition, threat detection and sports psychology.

Industrial Engineering, BSE (ESIEEBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Industrial engineering pertains to the design, improvement, installation and operation of integrated systems of people, materials, information, equipment and energy with the purpose of determining efficient ways to make a product or provide a service. Industrial engineering draws upon specialized knowledge and skill in the mathematical, physical and social sciences and the principles and methods of engineering analysis and design.

The underlying concepts for the BSE program in industrial engineering include certain business principles but emphasize the use of mathematics and information technology to build models to describe, understand and optimize system performance. Depending on the subspecialties involved and the intended application, industrial engineering may also be known as operations management, management science, operations research, systems engineering or manufacturing engineering.

The admission standards for majors in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering are higher than minimum university standards. International students may have an additional English language proficiency criterion. Foreign nationals must meet the same admission requirements shown below with the possible additional requirement of a minimum TOEFL score. If the university requires a TOEFL score from the applicant (see <https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply> (<https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply>)), then admission to engineering requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (paper-based), 213 (computer-based), 79 on iBT (internet-based) or a minimum IELTS score of 6.5.

Freshman Admission:

- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score or minimum 24 ACT combined score or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA or class ranking in top 25% of high school class, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students with fewer than 24 transferable college credit hours:

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for less than 24 transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies, and
- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score (or 1140 if taken prior to March 5, 2016) or minimum 24 ACT combined score, or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA, or class ranking in top 25% of high school class

Transfer students with 24 or more transferable college credit hours must meet EITHER the primary OR the secondary criteria (not both):

Primary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies (if Admission Services requires submission of a high school transcript)

Secondary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 2.75 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- minimum GPA of 2.75 in all critical courses for Terms 1 and 2 (see major map for critical courses)

Change of Major Requirements:

Career Opportunities:

Graduates in industrial engineering are prepared to design and manage systems for a wide range of organizations. They find exciting career opportunities in all types of manufacturing and service industries, including:

- banking and finance
- defense and government
- health care

- hospitality, sports and entertainment
- management consulting
- manufacturing (e.g., aerospace, automotive, semiconductor)
- software industry
- telecommunication

Informatics, BS (ESCPIBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Informatics is about discovering, developing and understanding computer applications that improve people's lives. The BS in informatics prepares skilled professionals to take a transdisciplinary, user-oriented perspective toward information and computing systems, apply current informatics methods to address society's needs and contribute to the next generation of such systems.

The informatics bachelor's degree program provides an option for students interested in a flexible program in applied information and computing technologies. The program provides skills in design and implementation of computer systems while offering opportunities for building applications used by people in many fields. Students learn to develop software for devices of all sizes, from supercomputers to cell phones and even smaller. The challenges of informatics include designing, developing and applying tools that model, aid or automate activities within science, engineering, business, geography, education and entertainment.

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 210 - Brief Calculus or MAT 265 Calculus for Engineers I

Program Math Intensity: Moderate

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

Robotics and Autonomous Systems (Artificial Intelligence), MS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Career Opportunities:

Informatics careers center on solving problems through the design and creation of information systems, user interfaces, mobile technologies and social media.

Graduates have the ability to develop future information technology solutions that place a strong emphasis on user needs and provide the ability to adapt and change dynamically with society's needs. This makes the informatician a strong candidate for jobs in:

- management consulting firms
- technology research centers
- technology startups

Additionally, the program prepares students for graduate programs that offer an emphasis in emerging technologies.

Information Technology, BS (TSIFTBS)

Campus: Polytechnic, Online

Program Description:

Information technology is the business of the movement of data by retrieving, managing, securing and analyzing data sets. It is an embedded system used in our everyday lives that defines how humans interact on a daily basis. The field's fast pace of growth is a worldwide event, and it is in need of self-motivated, problem-solving individuals who are looking toward a career in the exciting world of information technology.

The BS degree program in information technology starts by introducing basic fundamentals that help lay the foundation of the information technology coursework. These fundamentals build toward a focus area that allow students to hone their skill set, preparing them for employment in the fast-paced environment that is information technology. This program has been designed with key-driven threads to incorporate emerging technologies that are utilized in real-world business models.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Students should click the link for more information and eligibility requirements of the WUE program (<https://admission.asu.edu/wue>).

Manufacturing Engineering, BS (TSMEGRBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

Successful manufacturing enterprises balance design, sustainability and quality with production to prosper in the global marketplace. Manufacturing engineering combines manufacturing processes (e.g., how materials are altered in either shape or properties) and the processes of manufacturing (e.g., design and management of manufacturing systems).

The BS program in manufacturing engineering prepares students to analyze, synthesize and control manufacturing operations using statistical methods; collaborate across disciplines to design and build solutions to real-world problems; design innovative products and the equipment, tooling and environments necessary for their manufacture; model, simulate and analyze manufacturing production processes for both small- and large-scale environments; and provide technological leadership.

The curriculum is project-based, hands-on, teamwork-oriented and delivered in outstanding fabrication facilities. Graduates of this program become key team members who create and implement processes for making such varied products as airplanes, surgical instrument, toys and foodstuffs.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET; <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org>).

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Career Opportunities:

Engineers collaborate on transdisciplinary teams to design, manufacture and deliver innovative technological products and services.

The Bachelor of Science in Engineering program in manufacturing engineering enables students to develop sophisticated technical skills in tandem with the professional skills of communication, teamwork, and collaboration and the self-motivation and adaptability that many employers seek. Graduates are prepared to work in large corporations, government agencies, small businesses, as well as to go on to graduate school to pursue advanced degrees. The program's emphasis on open-ended design and project-based learning supports the development of entrepreneurial skills and attitudes, and some students start companies of their own.

Graduates typically work as manufacturing engineers in a variety of companies, large and small. They are often members of design and development teams, cooperating with other people within and outside of their company. Career employment opportunities include direct manufacturing support, manufacturing management, and quality control and assurance. Due to a strong, broad and practical engineering skill set, graduates are highly valuable in small or new startup companies. Program graduates are well-placed and command top salaries.

A major strength of a mechanical engineering education is the flexibility it provides in future employment opportunities for its graduates. Mechanical engineers are employed in virtually every kind of industry. They are involved in seeking new knowledge through research; generating creative design and development; and the production, control, management and sales of the devices and systems needed by society.

The BSE program in mechanical engineering has the following program educational objectives:

- Through volunteering, entrepreneurial endeavors, community service, their employment, etc., graduates of the mechanical engineering program will demonstrate commitment to the Sun Devil ideals of global engagement, social embeddedness, social transformation and sustainability. Graduates of the mechanical engineering program should have attained one or more of the following objectives within a few years after completing their degrees:

- employment in engineering or other fields in a position that capitalizes on the skills and abilities gained through the degree program in mechanical engineering (holding positions of increasing responsibility and leadership within their organizations)
- admission into a graduate degree program in mechanical engineering or other technical field.
- admission into a professional degree program, such as law, business or medicine, in accordance with the specific interests and abilities of the graduate

Mechanical Engineering (Computational Mechanics), BSE (ESMAECBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

As mathematical and numerical modeling takes on a much larger role in product development, graduates who are highly skilled in computational and mathematical engineering will be in high demand. The concentration in computational mechanics under the BSE program in mechanical engineering is designed to teach students the modern computational tools available for solving large-scale and complex technical problems. The curriculum focuses on high-performance computing and the accurate modeling of large and small scale systems.

Career Opportunities:

Mechanical engineers are employed in virtually every kind of industry. They are involved in seeking new knowledge through research; generating creative design and development; and the production, control, management and sales of the devices and systems needed by society. Therefore, a major strength of a mechanical engineering education is the flexibility it provides in future employment opportunities for its graduates.

The mechanical engineering program has the following program educational objectives:

- Through volunteering, entrepreneurial endeavors, community service, their employment, etc., graduates of the mechanical engineering program will demonstrate commitment to the Sun Devil ideals of global engagement, social embeddedness, social transformation and sustainability. Graduates of the mechanical engineering program should have attained one or more of the following objectives within a few years after completing their degrees:
- employment in engineering or other fields in a position that capitalizes on the skills and abilities gained through the degree program in mechanical engineering (holding positions of increasing responsibility and leadership within their organizations)
- admission into a graduate degree program in mechanical engineering or other technical field
- admission into a professional degree program, such as law, business or medicine, in accordance with the specific interests and abilities of the graduate

Mechanical Engineering (Energy and Environment), BSE (ESMAEEBSE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The concentration in energy and environment within the BSE in mechanical engineering is designed to prepare students to analyze technical problems in:

- air pollution
- climate change
- energy efficiency
- environmental sustainability
- renewable energy
- timely issues facing the global community

Although the primary focus of this program is technical, the general education courses in the areas of the humanities and social and behavioral sciences introduce students to the global, political and societal issues relating to energy and the environment. By focusing on issues such as air pollution, water scarcity and the lack of alternative transportation, this program is even more attractive for employers in the greater Phoenix area as well as nationwide.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org>).

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 265 - Calculus for Engineers I

Program Math Intensity: Substantial

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

- Aerospace Engineering, MS
- Materials Science and Engineering, MS
- Mechanical Engineering, MS
- Solar Energy Engineering and Commercialization, PSM

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Admission Requirements:

General University Admission Requirements:

All students are required to meet general university admission requirements.

Freshman (<https://students.asu.edu/freshman/requirements>)

Transfer (<https://transfer.asu.edu/index.php?q=transferrequirements>)

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

The admission standards for majors in the Ira A. Fulton Schools of Engineering are higher than minimum university admission standards.

International students may have an additional English-language proficiency criterion. Foreign nationals must meet the same admission requirements shown below with the possible additional requirement of a minimum TOEFL score. If the university requires a TOEFL score from the applicant (see <https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply> (<https://admission.asu.edu/international/undergrad-apply>)), then admission to engineering requires a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (paper-based), 213 (computer-based), 79 on iBT (internet-based) or a minimum IELTS score of 6.5.

Freshman Admission:

- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score or minimum 24 ACT combined score or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA or class ranking in top 25% of high school class, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students with fewer than 24 transferable college credit hours:

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for less than 24 transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies, and
- minimum 1210 SAT combined evidence-based reading and writing plus math score (or 1140 if taken prior to March 5, 2016) or minimum 24 ACT combined score, or 3.00 minimum ABOR GPA, or class ranking in top 25% of high school class

Transfer students with 24 or more transferable college credit hours must meet EITHER the primary or the secondary criteria (not both):

Primary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 3.00 for 24 or more transfer hours, and
- no high school math or science competency deficiencies (if Admission Services requires submission of a high school transcript)

Secondary Criteria

- minimum transfer GPA of 2.75 for 24 or more transfer credit hours, and
- minimum GPA of 2.75 in all critical courses: MAE 201, MAE 202, MAE 213 and MAE 241.

Software Engineering, BS (TSSERBS)

Campus: Polytechnic, Online

Program Description:

The BS program in software engineering blends engineering, computing, project leadership and software construction.

Students learn how to make creative software solutions to today's problems. Software systems are complex, often including millions of lines of code. Graduates of the bachelor's degree program in software engineering possess the knowledge and skills of a defined engineering approach to complex systems analysis, planning, design and construction.

The program has a unique, project-driven curriculum, establishing a new model for software engineering education. The program is built around the concepts of engaged learning, discovery-based education and learn-by-doing. Students complete projects in every semester of the program to provide emphasis in communication, teamwork, critical thinking and professionalism. Students have flexibility in designing their course of study; they select technical electives from a pool of courses in different software engineering application areas such as Web and Mobile applications, Embedded systems, and other interdisciplinary areas.

Accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, <http://www.abet.org> (<http://www.abet.org/>).

The accelerated program is only allowed for the software engineering program on the Polytechnic campus.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Students should click the link for more information and eligibility requirements of the WUE program (<https://admission.asu.edu/wue>).

Career Opportunities:

Software engineers solve a broad set of transdisciplinary problems and apply new technologies to improve the quality of life.

The bachelor's degree program in software engineering is a unique program in which students learn by solving engaging projects, commonly as a member of a development team. The program prepares graduates for advanced study in computing, an allied field, or to enter the computing profession (most commonly as an application software engineer). Graduates design and engineer innovative systems that may include mechanical and electrical components that interact with software.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, software engineers are highly paid and there is significant growth in the number of employment opportunities. Some software engineering jobs may include:

- creating applications for mobile devices
- creating web applications
- designing, creating and validating software for avionics, robotics and similar systems fields

Technological Entrepreneurship and Management, BS (TSTEM2BS)

Campus: Polytechnic, Online

Program Description:

The BS program in technological entrepreneurship and management advances the knowledge and practice of entrepreneurship and innovation. To enhance students' understanding of business fundamentals, the Fulton Schools of Engineering have partnered with the W. P. Carey School of Business to offer a degree that is jointly conferred by both colleges. The degree program prepares students to address social and corporate issues to impact and change the world; create, launch and improve technology-based products, services and ventures; and identify and solve open-ended problems using engineering and technology approaches.

Students receive a foundation in both technology and business fundamentals, with an emphasis on technology entrepreneurship and innovation in one of two focus areas: innovation and operation management or social entrepreneurship.

The objectives for this degree program are that students demonstrate the ability to identify, analyze and synthesize information to address and solve use-inspired, open-ended problems, assessing their impact on social, cultural and economic environments; formulate methodologies to advance the knowledge of entrepreneurship and innovation; launch technology-based products and services from idea generation through actualization; use quantitative and qualitative methods to demonstrate continuous improvement of products, services and processes; and utilize a systems approach for the effective design and improvement of entrepreneurial and innovation ventures.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Innovation in Society, BA (FIFISBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA in innovation in society equips students with the knowledge, tools and critical thinking skills to analyze how science and technology impact health, the economy, security, sustainability, privacy and well-being. Students learn to work collaboratively with scientists and engineers to design innovations that create better futures for people and communities around the globe.

This Bachelor of Arts degree is for students who want to play a pivotal role in bringing different disciplines together to solve the world's most difficult problems. Students learn to synthesize and apply insights from the social sciences, humanities, design, natural sciences and engineering so they can work to build better futures for everyone.

This interdisciplinary degree program prepares students for careers in public service, business, policy and academia.

Sustainability, BA (SUSUSTBA)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, Online

Program Description:

Students in ASU's College of Global Futures are rethinking and reinventing the future of a world at risk. The school's programs encourage experiential learning, study abroad (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/study-abroad> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/study-abroad/>)), research with faculty (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/undergraduate-research> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/undergraduate-research/>)), community engagement and leadership development (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/campus-experience/student-sustainability-clubs-organizations/> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/campus-experience/student-sustainability-clubs-organizations/>)). The knowledge and solutions that are created today will shape the social and environmental quality of life for future generations.

The School of Sustainability offers two degrees in sustainability: a BA and a BS. Both programs introduce students to the concept of sustainability in the context of real-world problems and focus on developing practical solutions to some of the most pressing environmental, economic and social challenges of sustainability. The curriculum trains students to approach challenges with consideration of complex adaptive systems and resilience; interconnections and cascading effects between scales; management of trade-offs; stakeholder engagement; future visioning and scenario typologies for transitioning social-ecological systems; and other cutting-edge frameworks.

The Bachelor of Arts is geared toward students interested in the social and human aspects of sustainability in global, regional and local contexts such as international environmental law, urban policy, etc. Students select from one of four Bachelor of Arts track options:

- international development and sustainability
- policy and governance in sustainable systems
- society and sustainability
- sustainable urban dynamics

Disciplinary perspectives included in the core courses of the degree tracks include anthropology, urban planning and design, environmental economics, ethics, geography, philosophy of science, political science, sociology and other disciplines relevant to the sustainability of environmental resources and social institutions.

Students in the School of Sustainability gain not only an understanding of the field of sustainability and strong problem-solving, systems-thinking, stakeholder engagement and future scenario-building skills, they also develop strength in a more traditional discipline of their choice (in addition to their track). Students apply the skills from their core Bachelor of Arts classes and knowledge from their track and related discipline courses in two required capstone experiences in the senior year.

Capstone requirements consist of an internship (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/sustainability-internships-opportunities> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/sustainability-internships-opportunities/>)) with a sustainability-focused organization and either hands-on research (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/student-sustainability-research/> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/student-sustainability-research/>)) or a workshop course in which students work together as a team to develop solutions to real sustainability problems. These workshops are great resume builders as they usually include real work for actual organizations such as city governments, sports organizations, nonprofits, local and global companies, local schools, and ASU facilities management and sustainability practices. Students also are offered workshops on making documentary films, redesigning buildings and downtown areas, and other engaging projects.

Students graduate with a portfolio of accomplishments and skills. They also have the opportunity to participate in study abroad programs, student organizations and professional development workshops.

Additional Requirements:

Freshman admission requirements for this program are the same as the university's freshman admission requirements.

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students (those with 12 or more transfer credit hours after high school graduation) are required to have a cumulative transfer GPA of 3.00 or higher. The School of Sustainability reviews transfer applications that fall below this GPA level on an individual basis.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in an online format with multiple enrollment sessions throughout the year. Applicants may view the program description and request more information here. (<https://asuonline.asu.edu/online-degree-programs/undergraduate/bachelor-arts-sustainability/>)

Change of Major Requirements:

ASU students who would like to change their major to sustainability are required to have a minimum cumulative ASU GPA of 3.00 (based on at least 12 credit hours of ASU coursework).

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercrreditguide/app/transfermap?major=SUSUSTBA~null + &college=CGF>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

In addition to going on to graduate school, graduates of the program are qualified for well-paying positions in:

- consultancy
- government
- intergovernmental organizations
- international development
- management
- municipalities
- nongovernmental organizations
- nonprofits
- policy-making enterprises
- regulatory agencies
- utilities

Recent interest in sustainability within business and government has created new employment opportunities (e.g., sustainability coordinators, directors and managers). Of undergraduate alumni who have shared their experiences with the school (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/careers/employment-data> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/careers/employment-data/>)), 95% are either employed in sectors such as those listed above or have gone on to a graduate program. Of those employed, 72% have jobs directly related to sustainability.

Those with a BA in sustainability offer employers and graduate programs an integrated approach to developing solutions to sustainability challenges. They understand the complexity of systems, have engaged in a range of knowledge and experience from different disciplinary perspectives, and understand the importance of planning for the future and how to engage stakeholders in that process. Graduates of the program are adaptable and prepared for a changing world.

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, Online

Program Description:

Students in ASU's College of Global Futures are rethinking and reinventing the future of a world at risk. The school's programs encourage experiential learning, study abroad (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/study-abroad> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/study-abroad/>)), research with faculty (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/undergraduate-research> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/undergraduate-research/>)), community engagement and leadership development (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/campus-experience/student-sustainability-clubs-organizations/> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/campus-experience/student-sustainability-clubs-organizations/>)). The knowledge and solutions that are created today will shape the social and environmental quality of life for future generations.

The School of Sustainability offers two degrees in sustainability: a BA and a BS. Both programs introduce students to the concept of sustainability in the context of real-world problems and focus on developing practical solutions to some of the most pressing environmental, economic and social challenges of sustainability. The curriculum trains students to approach challenges with consideration of complex adaptive systems and resilience; interconnections and cascading effects between scales; management of trade-offs; stakeholder engagement; future visioning and scenario typologies for transitioning social-ecological systems; and other cutting-edge frameworks.

The Bachelor of Science is geared toward students interested in the more quantitative aspects of sustainability, such as energy, economics and ecology. Students select from one of three Bachelor of Science track options:

- economics of sustainability
- sustainable ecosystems
- sustainable energy, materials and technology

Disciplinary perspectives included in the core courses of the degree tracks include ecology, engineering, environmental economics, environmental science, conservation biology, hydrology, physical geography, earth-systems management and other disciplines relevant to the sustainability of environmental resources and social institutions.

Students in the School of Sustainability not only gain an understanding of the field of sustainability and strong problem-solving, systems-thinking, stakeholder engagement and future scenario-building skills, they also develop strength in a more traditional discipline of their choice, in addition to their track. Students apply the skills from their core Bachelor of Science classes and knowledge from their track and related discipline courses in two required capstone experiences in the senior year.

Capstone requirements consist of an internship (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/sustainability-internships-opportunities/> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/sustainability-internships-opportunities/>)) with a sustainability-focused organization and either hands-on research (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/student-sustainability-research/> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/student-life/student-sustainability-research/>)) or a workshop course in which students work together as a team to develop solutions to real sustainability problems. These workshops are great resume builders as they usually include real work for actual organizations such as city governments, sports organizations, nonprofits, local and global companies, local schools, and ASU facilities management and ASU sustainability practices. Students also are offered workshops on making documentary films, redesigning buildings and downtown areas, and other engaging projects.

Students graduate with a portfolio of accomplishments and skills. They also have the opportunity to participate in study abroad programs, student organizations and professional development workshops.

Second Language Requirement: Yes

First Required Math Course: SOS 101 - Intro Appl Math Life & Soc Sci

Program Math Intensity: Moderate

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

Global Management, MGM

Sustainability Solutions, MSUS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Admission Requirements:

General University Admission Requirements:

All students are required to meet general university admission requirements.

Freshman (<https://students.asu.edu/freshman/requirements>)

Transfer (<https://transfer.asu.edu/index.php?q=transferrequirements>)

International (<https://students.asu.edu/international/future>)

Readmission (<https://students.asu.edu/readmission>)

Additional Requirements:

Freshman admission requirements for this program are the same as the university's freshman admission requirements.

Transfer Admission Requirements:

Transfer students (those with 12 or more transfer credit hours after high school graduation) are required to have a cumulative transfer GPA of 3.00 or higher. The School of Sustainability will review transfer applications that fall below this GPA level on an individual basis.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in an online format with multiple enrollment sessions throughout the year. Applicants may view the program description and request more information here. (<https://asuonline.asu.edu/online-degree-programs/undergraduate/bachelor-science-sustainability/>)

Change of Major Requirements:

ASU students who would like to change their major to sustainability are required to have a minimum cumulative ASU GPA of 3.00 (based on at least 12 credit hours of ASU coursework).

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transfercreditguide/app/transfermap?major=SUSUSTBS~null + &college=CGF>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

In addition to going on to graduate school, graduates of the program are qualified for well-paying positions in:

- consultancy
- energy management
- government
- intergovernmental organizations
- international development
- management
- municipalities
- natural resource management
- nongovernmental organizations
- nonprofits
- policy-making enterprises
- regulatory agencies
- utilities
- waste management
- water management

Recent interest in sustainability within business and government has created new employment opportunities (e.g., sustainability coordinators, directors and managers). Of undergraduate alumni who have shared their experiences with the school (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/careers/employment-data> (<https://schoolofsustainability.asu.edu/careers/employment-data/>)), 95% are either employed in sectors such as those listed above or have gone on to a graduate program. Of those employed, 72% have jobs directly related to sustainability.

Those with a Bachelor of Science in sustainability offer employers and graduate programs an integrated approach to developing solutions to sustainability challenges. They understand the complexity of systems, have engaged in a range of knowledge and experience from different disciplinary perspectives, and understand the importance of planning for the future and how to engage stakeholders in that process. Graduates of the program are adaptable and prepared for a changing world.

Sustainable Food Systems, BS (SUSFOSYSBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The BS program in sustainable food systems trains students to understand food-related challenges using a food systems lens which encompasses the many aspects of food and agriculture within an integrated social and environmental context. This lens empowers students to grapple with real-life complexities and become effective agents of change.

Coursework covers a wide range of topics from nutrition science to agricultural production, economics, social justice and more. Students are engaged in an active community collectively working to achieve the 2030 United Nations Sustainable Development Goals. Beyond the core subject matter and skills courses, the degree requirements include an internship, a chosen focus area and a culminating project-based course, all of which provide students in-depth knowledge of a food-related subfield and ample preparation for exciting careers.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates have gained a broad understanding of sustainable food systems and are trained to pursue multiple career pathways related to food. Students are encouraged to select electives that build upon core sustainable food systems coursework and ready them for career opportunities such as managing natural resources for food production; public policy, governance and grassroots organizing; food literacy; sustainable food procurement; agricultural development, poverty alleviation and emerging markets; improved public health through food; or food entrepreneurship and innovation, marketing and agribusiness.

From the School of Sustainability's 2019 alumni employment survey, 95% of sustainability undergraduates are either employed or have gone on to a graduate program. Of those employed, 72% have jobs directly related to sustainability. Because the sustainable food systems program just launched Fall 2019, the school currently does not have alumni employment data for this specific degree.

Global Management, Thunderbird School of Global Management, BGM (TBTGMBGM)

Campus: West, Online

Program Description:

The BGM degree program draws on Thunderbird School of Global Management's expertise in global management practices and intercultural communication training to provide students with a highly specialized global business education.

The Bachelor of Global Management program prepares students to take on leadership roles in multinational corporations, government agencies or nongovernmental organizations. Thunderbird's elite faculty and strong relationships with global organizations allow students to develop and hone the skills needed to thrive as leaders in today's globally connected economy. Students gain experience and develop skills that international employers, governments and nongovernmental entities value highly in employees.

The program offers two tracks: the international business, language and culture track in which two years of foreign language is required; and the international business and culture track in which there is no foreign language requirement but there is more emphasis on management-related courses. Students who select the foreign language track may complete coursework in Mandarin or Spanish. Speakers of English as a second language may choose the international business and culture track or choose a third language within the international business, language and culture track. The international business, language and culture track is offered to on-campus students only. Online students may pursue only the international business and culture track.

Students have the opportunity to put the skills they have learned into practice in real-world settings through a required internship. Although students are strongly encouraged to pursue international internships, students may also satisfy this requirement by doing a local internship with an international orientation. Students also complete a senior capstone project which draws upon the unique skills they have developed throughout the program. The internship and the capstone project allow students to demonstrate their skills and work experience for potential employers as part of their professional development plan.

This program is unique as it allows students to explore the politics and economics of different countries around the world and apply learned skills during a local, national or international internship. This program provides global career opportunities around the world, global courses taught by outstanding Thunderbird graduate school faculty, and preparation for students to thrive in today's globally connected economy. Students engage in global programming with multinational companies and global organizations, and showcase specialized cross-cultural leadership skills through a senior capstone project.

Thunderbird School of Global Management has produced unique leaders for more than 70 years, leaders in every sector capable of tackling the world's greatest challenges. The alumni network comprises 45,000 graduates and 170 chapters around the globe.

Applied Science (Medical Laboratory Science), BAS (NUMLSBAS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The BAS in medical laboratory sciences is designed to provide the academic knowledge and professional skills that allow students to advance their employment opportunities within the fields of medical technology, cytology, clinical laboratory science and related areas.

Medical laboratory scientists, also known as clinical laboratory scientists, are highly skilled professionals who perform analytical tests on blood, tissue and body fluids to provide laboratory information for the detection, diagnosis and treatment of human diseases. There also is a growing trend for medical laboratory scientists to perform wellness laboratory testing aimed at preventing disease. These professionals work independently using skills and knowledge that are greater in depth and breadth compared to those of medical laboratory technicians, who typically are graduates of a two-year or community college program.

The program is accredited by the National Accrediting Agency for Clinical Laboratory Science, 5600 N. River Rd, Suite 720, Rosemont, IL, 60018, <https://www.naacls.org/> (<https://www.naacls.org/>).

Career Opportunities:

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that overall employment of medical laboratory scientists is projected to grow 11% from 2018 to 2028. This is much faster than the average of most occupations. As the population ages, there will be more demand for trained laboratory personnel to aid in the diagnosis of disease and to help manage medical conditions. The majority of medical laboratory scientists and technologists work in hospital laboratories and major reference laboratories.

Biomedical Informatics, BS (ESBMIBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Biomedical informatics is a multidisciplinary field that involves the understanding of information sciences and technology and their application to the fields of biomedical science, clinical imaging, health care practice and population health.

The BMI curriculum includes biomedical informatics, computer science, biology, chemistry, mathematics and statistics. Students learn approaches to analyzing data, modeling knowledge and using these capabilities to address problems in the biomedical and health domains. Students have the opportunity to do research alongside world-renowned faculty who are experts in bioinformatics, imaging informatics, clinical informatics and population health informatics.

Graduates of the program have a broad set of informatics knowledge and skills that will enable them to contribute to many areas of health and biomedicine in their future work.

Exercise and Wellness (Fitness and Wellness Specialist), BS (ECEXWBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Interested students should apply to the BS program in exercise and wellness.

Program Description:

The BS program in exercise and wellness provides students with the knowledge and practical skills necessary to assist individuals in reaching optimal health. Students are prepared to pursue nationally recognized and credentialed certifications provided by professional organizations in fields of study related to physical activity, strength and conditioning, or exercise physiology. The exercise and wellness student is also well prepared, with the addition of the prerequisite courses, to continue into graduate schools required for careers in physical therapy, occupational therapy, athletic training or other medical fields.

The exercise and wellness program consists of a carefully designed curriculum emphasizing:

- competency in the instruction of basic and advanced techniques related to flexibility, resistance training and cardiovascular exercise
- competencies required to attain advanced level certifications from professional associations in the field
- foundational knowledge of exercise physiology and applied kinesiology
- methods to understand and help improve individuals with regard to their health behavior choices
- skills in assessing and interviewing clients in preparation for fitness and wellness programming
- skills in designing and manipulating program variables to work with apparently healthy or symptomatic individuals

Students in the exercise and wellness degree program also have the ability to enroll in courses that will enhance their abilities to work with high performance athletes, obese individuals or those at risk for suffering from other hypokinetic diseases.

Employment of fitness and wellness professionals is expected to grow by up to 24% through 2020, much faster than other occupations, driven by efforts to reduce health care costs by teaching people about healthy behaviors. The need for exercise and wellness programming and facilities will increase the need for workers in these areas.

Exercise and Wellness (Strength and Conditioning Specialist), BS (NHEXWSCBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Interested students should apply to the BS program in exercise and wellness.

Program Description:

The strength and conditioning specialist concentration is designed for students who want to work with active or athletic populations, including sport and tactical occupations. These students may work with high school, college or professional sports organizations in scholastic or private sports performance training facilities, with tactical sports performance clients (e.g., military, police, firefighters, EMT) in municipal or government-run facilities or with individual clients participating in more active, higher intensity-based fitness programs. Students in this concentration will be exposed to applied assessment labs and practical fieldwork to gain the knowledge they will need to be competent coaches in this field. Graduates will be prepared to sit for the Certified Strength and Conditioning Specialist or the Tactical Strength and Conditioning-Facilitator examinations offered by the National Strength and Conditioning Association (<https://www.nasca.com> (<https://www.nasca.com>)) at the completion of their coursework. Students interested in careers in the field of sports medicine (athletic trainers, sports physical therapists, orthopedic surgeons, etc.) may also benefit from the coursework to provide an understanding of the training programs that accompany sports participation.

Food and Nutrition Entrepreneurship, BS (NHFNUENBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Online

Program Description:

The BS program in food and nutrition entrepreneurship addresses significant and ongoing changes in the food industry by preparing students with sound nutrition principles and business acumen that will allow them to competitively participate in a growing field. The program encompasses key topics for future nutrition entrepreneurs, whether they may be innovating within a company or organization or launching a food or nutrition-related business. Key topics include how to develop an online presence, supported by evidence-based principles, thorough social media, blogging, podcasting and video; how to launch nutritionally sound startups and create standalone businesses for individual practice and consulting; and routes for innovation within the food industry through research and development.

Experiential learning is integrated into the curriculum; students have opportunities to work with specialists in food and nutrition entrepreneurship in order to gain real-world experience, build professional relationships and establish a foundation and direction for their careers after graduation.

Health Education and Health Promotion, BS (NHHEHPBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, ASU@Lake Havasu, Online

Program Description:

The BS in health education and health promotion provides students a pathway for becoming a certified health education specialist through the National Commission for Health Education Credentialing (<https://www.nchec.org/> (<https://www.nchec.org/>)).

Working alongside clinicians, health agency directors and community leaders, health education specialists are catalysts for improving health for individuals and communities. The program provides professional preparation in population-based approaches to improve health outcomes, including school and community health education. Students pursuing a bachelor's degree in health education and health promotion gain foundational knowledge in health promotion program planning, implementation, evaluation, health education and health advocacy. These skills can be applied to society's most pressing health challenges, like improving the food and built environments to promote health, providing sexual health education, and preventing substance abuse, violence and injuries.

Career Opportunities:

Growing awareness of how healthy lifestyles and environments influence our health has led to a greater emphasis on preventing disease and managing chronic diseases effectively. Health education and health promotion professionals fill a critical role in the new vision for health and health care as they teach individuals how to stay well by living healthy lifestyles, and they help mobilize communities to create healthy environments through policy, advocacy and environmental change. As the need for innovative approaches to improving health outcomes becomes increasingly clear, the demand for health education and health promotion professionals will increase as well. Health promotion professionals work in various environments based on the industry in which they are employed.

Based on a random sample of community health job advertisements (September, 2017), health professionals with the CHES credential earn up to a 47% higher salary than health professionals without it. As of 2019, the American Medical Association has approved certified health education specialists for new insurance billing qualifications that will expand the practice even further. In addition to working to change policies and environments to promote health, and to educate communities, health education specialists can work as clinical educators, counseling individuals to adopt new health behaviors. The health education specialist pathway offers growth opportunities, as well, as CHES are eligible to become master certified health education specialists after five years of practice, and MCHES are eligible to become certified diabetes educators.

Graduates of this degree program often pursue careers in wellness and health promotion in such environments as:

- colleges and universities
- community health agencies
- hospitals and clinical settings
- insurance companies
- private health care organizations
- schools
- state and county health departments
- voluntary health organizations
- wellness centers
- work site wellness and health promotion

They may also pursue further graduate study in such fields as:

- medicine and dentistry (with additional elective sciences)
- occupational therapy
- physical therapy
- physician's assistant
- public health
- community health
- health education
- health promotion
- social work
- health psychology

Career Opportunities:

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment for health coaches and health educators is projected to grow 21% from 2012 to 2022, faster than the average for all occupations. Growth is driven by efforts to improve health outcomes and to reduce health care costs by teaching people about healthy habits and behaviors and utilization of available health care services.

Health, wellness and fitness coaches work in hospitals and health care facilities, schools, public health departments, nonprofit organizations, prevention agencies (e.g., American Heart Association), lifestyle and weight management consulting firms, outpatient fitness centers, university fitness and wellness centers, and private businesses.

Specialty areas may include:

- bariatric weight loss clinic counseling and management
- corporate fitness and worksite wellness

Career options include positions such as:

- elder service or congregate meal program coordinator
- fitness center director
- group exercise specialist
- health and patient educator
- Healthy Start or corporate wellness coordinator
- personal training
- physical therapy technician
- school health and nutrition program specialist
- women, infants, children, and community nutrition aide
- worksite wellness coach/coordinator

Students are also well-prepared for admission into graduate programs in health promotion, population health, lifestyle management, integrative health, health administration, psychology and medicine.

Health Sciences (Pre-professional), BS (NUHSCPREBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Interested students should apply to the BS in medical studies or the BS in nutrition with a concentration in human nutrition.

Program Description:

The BS program in health sciences is designed to provide the academic knowledge and skills that enable students to move directly into a range of employment opportunities within the health field or to continue their education in discipline-specific programs.

The preprofessional program is designed for students planning to enter medical, dental, osteopathic, physical therapy, veterinary, pharmacy and similar professional schools. In addition to a comprehensive core of basic science courses, the concentration is unique in that it provides a solid base in ethics; communication; the evaluation of research (the cornerstone of evidence-based practice); and healthy lifestyles (the foundation of health promotion and chronic disease risk reduction avenues of health care), including the role of complementary and alternative care within the U.S. health care system. Students have the ability to incorporate electives that contribute to their knowledge of and sensitivity to the needs of populations impacted by health disparities.

Kinesiology, BS (NUKINBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, ASU@Lake Havasu

Program Description:

A BS degree in kinesiology prepares students for graduate study in physical or occupational therapy, physician assistant programs, medicine and other health-related professional programs. In order to be successful in these programs, students need to have a deep understanding of how the human body works.

In kinesiology, all aspects of human function are studied, but it is done from the perspective of human movement. The curriculum provides a scientifically inclusive approach to human movement, studying mechanical, anatomical, neural, developmental, physiological and psychological mechanisms. This gives students in the program a well-rounded understanding of all aspects of human function as it pertains to movement and exercise.

Nutritional Sciences, BS (NHNUSCIBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic

Program Description:

The BS program in nutritional science provides students with a strong foundation in nutrition, biological sciences, research methods, and prevention and treatment of health issues. With two different tracks, this program prepares students for careers in a variety of fields.

The integrative nutrition track establishes a strong basis for evidence-based nutrition practices, nutritional interventions across the lifespan, and both individualized and community approaches to improving human health. This track prepares students for careers in a variety of health care settings including naturopathic medicine.

With the nutrition research track, students can expect to engage in coursework that integrates evidence-based nutrition with anatomy, physiology, chemistry and microbiology to best prepare them for clinical or graduate research programs and careers in research. This track allows students to work alongside faculty while gaining hands-on experience in nutrition research.

Population Health, BS (NHPOPHLBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, West

Program Description:

Improving the health of populations requires an understanding of complex systems that impact health. The BS program in population health integrates the fields of public health and health care delivery to teach students about these complex factors. Students in this program benefit as the emerging field of population health requires training in an array of disciplines already fundamental to the College of Health Solutions, including biomedical informatics, economics, social determinants of health, program and community assessment, program planning and evaluation, health care delivery, and health policy. Students learn how social determinants, access to care, decision-making, policy and infrastructure influence the health of defined groups, as well as the roles of various stakeholders (e.g., health care organizations, governments, businesses, non-profits, etc.) and how to work across systems to improve health.

This program capitalizes on its multidisciplinary approach that features experiential learning, including student engagement as citizen scientists, to better understand the complex factors impacting population health

Career Opportunities:

Multiple career opportunities exist for students majoring in population health, depending on the specific areas of expertise that students develop via core training in population health and the specific track that the student pursues. Students who pursue the biomedical information track, for example, will be most qualified for positions that require working with a variety of datasets, while students who choose the health education specialist track will be trained to work at the interface of health care and public health.

Specific job titles that currently exist for those trained in population health include:

- Health Care Data Analyst
- Population Health Analyst --- Population Health
- Population Health Community Health Worker
- Population Health Coordinator
- Population Health Practice Liaison - Population Outreach

- Population Health Specialist
- Program Coordinator

Public Health, BS (NHPBHBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The BS degree program in public health teaches students to develop and apply knowledge from multiple disciplines for the promotion and protection of the health of the human population. This degree is designed to appeal to students interested in populations of people (rather than an individual's health), preparing the students with skills in the five core areas of public health, namely:

- behavior science and health education
- biostatistics
- environmental health
- epidemiology
- health services administration

The required internship component of the program, POP 444: Population Health Field Experience, allows students to gain practical experience in public health professions.

Graduates typically work as public health practitioners who are competent to plan, implement, evaluate and monitor public health functions and activities in a variety of settings. They are prepared to fill various positions in public and community health as well as pursue further education through graduate study, including a master's degree in public health.

Sports Science and Performance Programming, BS (NHSPTSPPBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

Sports science and performance programming focuses on understanding and optimizing physical abilities for active groups ranging from sports to occupational to tactical populations. The ability to work with individuals at close to maximal effort requires specialized knowledge and skills related to these specific populations. The National Strength and Conditioning Association identifies the need for the sports performance and tactical performance specialist to be more knowledgeable about all areas of human physiology and movement mechanics in order to keep up with the ever-expanding technologies used to monitor and provide feedback to the coach and participant.

The BS program in sports science and performance programming prepares students to work with participants whose primary objective is maximizing their performance potential, regardless of the environment. Pushing the limits of performance for success in sports, combat or other tactical situations as well as understanding the stress the body undergoes during training for sport, work or recreational activities allows degree recipients to best plan successful exercise and recovery programs. Graduates are well-prepared to sit for the test to become a Certified Strength and Conditioning Specialist or a Tactical Strength and Conditioning Facilitator through the National Strength and Conditioning Association, to work in the sports performance field, or for graduate study in advanced sports science programs.

Honors - Barrett, The Honors College

Honors College, (9HOHONALL)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

ABOUT THE COLLEGE

Barrett, The Honors College at Arizona State University is highly regarded as the model for honors education in the US and abroad. Barrett stands alone in dedicated resources, size and complexity with a presence on four ASU campuses, a multimillion dollar endowment used to support honors students and their projects, and dedicated Deans, faculty and staff that include seven administrators, 45 Faculty Fellows, 64 staff within the college and more than 1,900 university faculty members who teach and mentor Barrett students who major in any field across all four campuses. Barrett students are members of a close-knit community of scholars known nationally for its number of National Merit, National Hispanic and Flinn scholars, and nationally ranked numbers of recipients of Fulbright, Truman, Goldwater, Udall and Marshall Fellowships.

A four-year residential experience is the hallmark of the Barrett living and learning experience. The Tempe campus has a nine-acre complex with residence halls for 1,700 students, classroom, community center, dining hall and refectory, and administrative offices. The residential experience continues across the street with upper-division housing for 1,600 honors students in the 18-acre Vista Del Sol Community. The Barrett Honors College residential experience also extends to the Downtown, Polytechnic and West campuses. The Barrett residential community, called B-Town D-Town is located at Taylor Place at the heart of the campus and offers a living environment where students have easy access to ASU's downtown colleges and programs as well as Phoenix's increasingly vibrant lifestyle. Barrett at the Polytechnic campus gives students the feeling of studying at a small private college with the advantages of a large university. The honors residential community is unique among the ASU campuses --- freshman honors students reside together on a floor of Century Hall while upper-division honors students will enjoy a brand new residence hall to open Fall 2020. Barrett at the West campus provides the entire range of honors activities in a small liberal arts college setting. Barrett West students live and learn on the ASU West Campus with approximately 500 other residents. Honors students live in the Casa de Oro residence hall. The 5,000-square-foot Barrett Suite includes a computer lab, study rooms, a meeting area, a library, and staff and faculty offices.

With its outstanding programs, dedicated faculty and staff, and comprehensive facilities, Barrett is a national model for organizing resources to support the honors experience at all four campuses at ASU. This unique arrangement is a model for higher education and has often been referred to as the best of both worlds by students who thrive in a small college atmosphere but appreciate access to large university programs like Division I athletics and high profile lecturers.

STUDENT OPPORTUNITIES

ASU's size, number of majors, student organizations and student support services is an advantage and provides important opportunities for Barrett students to engage in meaningful ways. With the largest college residential profile across all four campuses, Barrett significantly contributes to the student life of the university. Barrett students demonstrate leadership in the classroom, in research labs, in mentoring and tutoring other students, and in securing leadership roles in student government, Changemaker Central, Greek Life and more than 800 student organizations. Barrett offers a full range of student-driven academic, service, wellness, arts, cultural, social, entrepreneurial and sustainability programming.

Barrett students positively impact ASU and our local, national and global communities through internships, service, travel and other professional development opportunities within Barrett and across ASU. Barrett students participate in study abroad programs that enable them to travel to foreign countries, immerse themselves in small classes taught by honors faculty and experience different cultures and societies while earning honors credits. Barrett students engage in cutting edge research with distinguished ASU faculty or through special partnerships with the Mayo Clinic, the Biodesign Institute and Intel. Students are developing iPhone applications, building robots, designing games or developing tools to improve health care, meet global energy needs and provide clean water, or secure data and information privacy. Many students also take advantage of internship opportunities developed exclusively for Barrett students with organizations like Mayo Clinic, Goldman Sachs, Microsoft, Google, The American Heart Institute and local congressional districts, the governor's office and the United States Senate.

Applied Biological Sciences (Secondary Education in Biology), BS (TSABSSBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The secondary education in biology concentration is designed for students who want to teach biology at the high school level.

In addition to the standard curriculum, students receive hands-on experience in laboratory instruction in this BS program in applied biological sciences. The goal of the program is to prepare teachers who excel in biology and the related sciences.

Students enrolling in this concentration should also contact the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Students should click the link for more information and eligibility requirements of the WUE program (<https://admission.asu.edu/wue>).

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 251 - Calculus for Life Sciences

Program Math Intensity: Moderate

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

Applied Biological Sciences, MS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Applied Biological Sciences (Sustainable Horticulture), BS (TSABSUBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The sustainable horticulture concentration within the BS program in applied biological sciences is designed for students who want theory and practical experiences in the unique aspects of the culture of plants in an urban desert environment. Students acquire the skills to produce, design and care for ornamental and edible plantscapes using sustainable technologies.

Students are prepared for a range of horticulture careers in the private and public sectors, including in nursery plant production, landscape design and culture as well as local food production and organic urban farming.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Career Opportunities:

Horticulture is a multibillion dollar national and international enterprise that offers a diverse and exciting choice of professional careers. Graduates can pursue numerous entry-level careers in horticulture. Employment opportunities exist in private and public sectors. The sustainable horticulture concentration prepares graduates to succeed in graduate or professional schools in disciplines such as:

- aftermarket care of plants
- biology of the plants in desert cities
- care and management of trees in cities
- creation of public, community and private gardens in arid climates
- design and installation of outdoor landscapes including landscape irrigation systems
- integrated pest management
- marketing
- nursery production
- organic farming
- plant identification
- plant propagation

The general program in sustainable horticulture also prepares graduates to succeed in roles such as:

- arboretum or botanical garden manager
- city horticulturist
- city park superintendent or manager
- horticultural consultant
- horticultural plant researcher or educator
- horticulture products and supplies
- horticulture supply sales representative
- integrated pest management specialist
- interior plant specialist
- irrigation system designer or consultant
- landscape designer or contractor
- landscape services company owner or operator
- nursery plant broker and plant salesperson
- nursery production owner or manager
- organic farmer or permaculturist
- plant propagator
- urban forester, tree specialist or arborist
- urban plant ecologist

Career opportunities for urban horticulture graduates are not limited to any one geographic location; graduates can embark on careers throughout the United States, Canada, Mexico and overseas.

Applied Mathematics, BS (LSMATBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The BS in applied mathematics offered by the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts is a transdisciplinary program focused on developing flexible problem-solvers who can apply mathematical techniques and skills to a wide range of problems in the sciences, such as biology, social sciences, chemistry, physics and engineering.

The coursework builds a foundation in mathematical modeling, data analysis and the interpretation of mathematical results in real-world settings. Students choose electives in the sciences, technology, engineering or other areas of interest to complement and provide context for their mathematical training.

Applied Physics, BS (LSAPHYBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The acceleration of advances at the frontier between physics, engineering and technology creates a need for interdisciplinary training and research that is not readily accommodated by traditional single-focus programs in physics. Bringing fundamental physics together with its immediate applications, the BS in applied physics is attractive to students whose interests span new physical technologies in industry and engineering. The degree combines physics, computer science and applied mathematics to tackle complex real-life problems in physics, material sciences, engineering, chemistry and others.

This bachelor's degree program brings together the expertise of physics faculty, particularly in the modeling of physical systems, which relies heavily on both modern numerical techniques and fundamental physics. The growing presence of Intel and other high-tech companies in the east valley and metropolitan Phoenix presents a unique opportunity to enhance the students' interaction with industry. Given the importance of hands-on experience, the degree program offers a series of unique courses allowing students interactive involvement in a project-based environment.

Applied Quantitative Science, BS (LSAQSBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

Students learn to integrate and apply STEM-supported skills that are increasingly in demand in the 21st century.

Graduates of the BS in applied quantitative science acquire six habits of mind, a mental practice that becomes increasingly automatic with progress through the curriculum and after, extending into career development. Students are able to:

- apply and project quantitative reasoning to unfamiliar contexts
- communicate well within and without the expert domain
- critically and adaptably think about complex problems
- effectively search through and evaluate information
- experiment creatively and in an informed manner in search of new insights
- use sophisticated insight involving statistical inference and quantitative reasoning

This program is offered as a stand-alone degree on the Polytechnic campus. Students pursuing degrees on all four metropolitan campuses can add this degree as a concurrent degree.

Applied Science (Applied Leadership), BAS (LSALSBAS)

Campus: Polytechnic, ASU@Cochise, ASU@Pima, ASU@Pinal, ASU@The Gila Valley, ASU@Yavapai, Online

Program Description:

This BAS program prepares students for leadership positions in a wide variety of organizations and career fields. The concentration in applied leadership focuses on the practice of innovative and effective leadership and helps students develop the skills and knowledge that leaders need to solve problems, communicate effectively, resolve conflicts, assess program effectiveness, lead projects and manage resources. It provides a valuable degree pathway for students with Associate of Applied Science degrees in fields such as fire science, environmental technology, machine shop technology and welding technology.

Students learn leadership skills necessary to prepare them to become effective leaders in diverse environments --- applying those skills as team leaders, floor managers and shift captains.

Counseling and Applied Psychological Science, BS (LSCAPSBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

Counseling and applied psychological science is a specialty in promoting psychological well-being. Counselors and applied psychologists provide the tools and resources necessary for individuals, families and organizations to cope with everyday problems.

The BS program in counseling and applied psychological science provides foundational training in counseling theories, addictions, trauma, lifespan development, group counseling and professional ethics. A unique aspect of the program is its attention to cultural diversity, which focuses on age, gender, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, religion and socioeconomic status.

Graduates may qualify for employment in behavioral health care delivery settings such as community agencies, hospitals and rehabilitation centers to support counselors and other mental health professionals. Graduates are prepared for a variety of careers, such as behavioral health technicians, vocational rehabilitation assistants, human service workers and life-skills instructors. Graduates are not license-eligible as professional counselors but are well-prepared to enter graduate degree programs in counseling and related fields.

- government (sales and marketing, human resources management)
- mental health professions (youth counselor, substance abuse counselor, behavioral health technician)
- social services (high school psychology teacher, occupational analyst)
- schools and colleges (school psychologists, educators, professors)
- substance abuse treatment clinics

Advanced degrees or certifications may be required for academic or clinical positions.

The degree also provides an excellent foundation for graduate study in disciplines such as counselor education, counseling psychology, clinical psychology, social work and family studies.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics shows the job outlook (2016 to 2026) for substance abuse, behavioral disorder and mental health counselors is 23%, which is "much faster than average."

Interdisciplinary Studies, BA (LSBISBIS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, Polytechnic, Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The ASU BA program in interdisciplinary studies, one of the top five in the country, offers students the freedom to select two areas of study, referred to as concentration areas, from a rich menu of more than 150 possibilities. Concentration check sheets are available at <https://cisa.asu.edu/interdisciplinary-studies-concentrations> (<https://cisa.asu.edu/interdisciplinary-studies-concentrations>).

The core curriculum provides students the intellectual tools to integrate their concentration areas, engage in transdisciplinary problem-solving and prepare for careers and graduate programs that increasingly cross disciplinary boundaries. An interdisciplinary studies student could choose to integrate concentrations like business and project management, psychology and social welfare, communication and justice studies, public administration and ethics, digital culture and computer gaming or many other unique combinations.

Interdisciplinary studies is an approach to answering questions, solving problems and addressing contemporary social issues from multiple perspectives. Interdisciplinary studies students take an active role in designing their educational plans and defining their career goals. The degree emphasizes written communication, versatility, self-assessment and critical thinking --- essential skills for today's dynamic world.

Those interested in the online program for interdisciplinary studies may visit the ASU Online website for more information.

Change of Major Requirements:

There are no additional requirements for current ASU students to change majors into this program; however, students interested in the interdisciplinary studies major are highly encouraged to meet with an advisor.

Students should refer to <https://changingmajors.asu.edu/request> for information about how to change a major to this program.

Transfer Options:

ASU is committed to helping students thrive by offering tools that allow personalization of the transfer path to ASU. Students may use the Transfer Map search (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/transferecreditguide/app/transfermap?major=LSBISBIS~null + &college=CLS>) to outline a list of recommended courses to take prior to transfer.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

Because of the flexibility of the interdisciplinary studies program, graduates take many exciting career paths after leaving ASU. While some students complete graduate or professional degrees, others immediately enter the job market. For example, one graduate combined business and communication and now owns a small business; another integrated sociology and family studies to further a career in law enforcement; another studied philosophy and economics to prepare for law school; another combined biology and chemistry in preparation to pursue a master of pharmacy degree; yet, another studied Spanish and religious studies and now works as an employee trainer for a major company.

Possible career opportunities include:

- archivist
- chief executive
- climate change analyst
- compliance manager
- computer network support specialist
- curator
- editor
- environmental restoration planner
- general and operations manager
- regulatory affairs manager
- reporters and correspondent

Science, Technology and Society, BS (ECSTSBS)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

Questions surrounding the interaction of science, technology and human systems are highly transdisciplinary and cultural, requiring analytical techniques that transcend space and time. Thus, the BS program in science, technology and society stresses the need to step outside both disciplinary and cultural boxes in pursuit of knowledge.

Accordingly, the program is heavy on cultural and information literacy and critical thinking. The primary goal is to produce generalists who understand the intricate interrelationship of science, technology and society and who are armed with the technical skills to change their environment.

The following three tracks are available: general science, technology and society; global technology and development; and science, technology and governance. Students may use the general science, technology and society track to design targeted programs of their choosing, including premedical and prelaw.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Technical Communication, BS (LSTECBS)

Campus: Polytechnic, Online

Program Description:

Technical communication is applied workplace communication that makes technical or specialized information understandable and available to many different users. It involves using a range of technologies to craft an ever-expanding array of print and digital information products: websites, social media sites, help files, training materials, grants and proposals, and information graphics, to name just a few.

Technical communicators work in many professional roles, such as information developers, grant writers, web interface designers or usability experts. What all of these roles have in common is the focus on creating accessible and appealing communication that has a practical purpose and is intended for a particular audience.

In the technical communication program, students learn how to write, design, produce and manage print and digital information using traditional and developing technologies.

The BS degree program in technical communication in the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts is the only undergraduate technical communication degree program available in the state of Arizona.

Those interested in the technical communication online program may visit the ASU Online website for more information.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Polytechnic campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Career Opportunities:

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that job growth in technical writing and related areas will continue to be significantly higher than average during the next five years. Software and electronics companies, media corporations, financial institutions, government agencies, nonprofits and other areas will see an increased demand for writers. Students in the program prepare for careers as:

- communications teachers (postsecondary)
- computer user support specialists
- copy writers
- desktop publishers
- editors
- media and communication workers
- proofreaders and copy markers
- public relations specialists
- technical writers
- web developers

Technical Communication (User Experience), BS (LSTECUBS)

Campus: Polytechnic, Online

Program Description:

The user experience concentration of the BS degree in technical communication provides technical communication majors with an interdisciplinary foundation in communication, research and design that is central to the rapidly growing area of user experience.

The program provides students with a conceptual understanding and applied skills in methods of gathering user information, analyzing data and communicating research findings to stakeholders. Although its disciplinary home and primary focus is technical communication, the concentration includes courses from human systems engineering and graphic information technology in order to provide students with the multiple perspectives and complementary skills needed for user experience work.

Interdisciplinary Arts & Sciences, New College of Applied Computing, BS (ASACOBS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

Students in the BS program in applied computing learn a computer science foundation and then explore the established knowledge and emerging developments in the high-demand areas of database systems, computer networks and cybersecurity. The program also provides the opportunity to investigate interdisciplinary connections, including the combination of computing with its real-world application in other disciplines through concurrent degrees and minors. Hands-on class projects, internships, industry partnerships and authentic and impactful research conducted with faculty provide numerous opportunities for students to apply their knowledge before they graduate. Students use their programming expertise, systems knowledge and critical thinking skills to effectively problem-solve and articulate their experience through presentations, scientific posters and professional papers.

With the depth of knowledge and experience in databases, networks and cybersecurity, graduates have a strong foundation in systems with established interconnections among these fields, preparing them for graduate study and careers that include cybersecurity analysts, database architects and network engineers.

Applied Computing (Cybersecurity), BS (ASACOCBS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The cybersecurity concentration is designed to prepare students for a continuing and progressive career in cybersecurity.

The innovative cybersecurity concentration builds upon the BS program in applied computing. Students acquire the technical knowledge to secure networks and applications, an understanding of cybersecurity governance models and risk-management fundamentals, methods of communicating complex risk issues, and solutions for the challenges of implementing cybersecurity controls within various organizational models. Leadership, critical thinking and effective communication also are emphasized. Students gain experience with real-world cybersecurity organizations, protecting digital assets against compromise or theft.

Graduates of the applied computing program with a concentration in cybersecurity are well prepared for graduate study as well as entry-level employment with businesses, nonprofits, government agencies and academic institutions.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: West campus. Applied Mathematics, BS (ASMATBS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BS in applied mathematics is an interdisciplinary program that provides a broad and rigorous foundation in applied mathematics. It includes a foundation in computing and statistics as well as both theoretical and applied mathematics.

The program emphasizes quantitative problem-solving and critical thinking through courses that expose students to a variety of mathematical theories, techniques and applications currently used by analysts and researchers in government, industry and nonprofit organizations.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: West campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Applied Science, BAS (ASBASBAS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BAS is for students who have already earned a community college AAS degree. The program allows students to apply the technical knowledge gained from their associate degree and significantly broaden their education through completion of a concentration of their design that expands on the coursework completed in their AAS or by creating a new concentration in a different area of study.

The program includes a unique, personalized area of concentration tailored to the student's individual interests and career goals. The possibilities include but are not limited to applied computing, applied ethics, biology, biomedical research, business, conflict resolution, communication, creative writing, cybersecurity, English, environmental science, film and video studies, forensic psychology, forensic science, interdisciplinary arts and performance, risk communication, peace studies, political science, psychology, Spanish and statistics. The program also includes an internship experience.

Students who have earned an Associate of Applied Science degree from a regionally accredited Arizona community college may be eligible to transfer up to 75 credits toward the Bachelor of Applied Science degree. Students who have earned an Associate of Applied Science from an accredited institution may transfer 60 credit hours toward the Bachelor of Applied Science degree.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: West campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees.

Biology, BA (ASLSCBA)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BA program in biology with an emphasis in the natural sciences examines the interdisciplinary nature of the life and physical sciences, focusing on the ways in which these disciplines intersect. The program's organization and flexibility allows students to simultaneously study another subject outside their major. Students are encouraged to add a minor or concurrent degree in another subject area.

Students gain hands-on experience as they work both in small groups and one-on-one with individual faculty members. Students may participate in cutting-edge scientific research by assisting in faculty research laboratories or even publish in top journals and present their results at regional and Academic Catalog Archive 2020-2021 1846 national scientific meetings.

Graduates are prepared for entry-level jobs in research, nonprofit, education and outreach organizations and for other roles in the life sciences. Graduates are also prepared for related graduate programs.

Biology, BS (ASLSCBS)

Campus: West, ASU@Lake Havasu

Program Description:

The BS program in biology with an emphasis in the natural sciences examines these disciplines through experiential learning, and all of the program's core courses include laboratories. By learning in an integrative environment that emphasizes the connectedness of the life sciences, students gain a better understanding of larger scientific concepts and can view these concepts from multiple perspectives.

Students are encouraged to conduct independent research under the mentorship of faculty members or during internships. Some even publish in top journals and present their results at scientific meetings.

Graduates are prepared for employment with state and federal agencies or private organizations, such as biomedical laboratories and environmental consultancies. They are also prepared for graduate or doctoral programs in human or veterinary medicine, pharmacy, dentistry or scientific research.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: West campus. Career Opportunities:

This program prepares graduates for a wide range of careers by offering course and laboratory work and quantitative research opportunities that develop fundamental problem-solving, critical thinking, writing and communication skills. Graduates may enter careers in:

- business
- laboratory or field research
- medicine
- publishing
- scientific journalism
- teaching

Undergraduate laboratory experience, both on and off campus, enhances employability as a laboratory technician or research associate in university and government research laboratories; in hospital and diagnostic laboratories; and in pharmaceutical, biotechnology, agricultural and food processing companies.

Students engaged in field studies are prepared for entry-level positions in private companies and state and federal agencies, such as wildlife biologist, environmental consultant or conservation officer.

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Please explore Degree Search for other similar program options.

Program Description:

The BS program in biology with a concentration in environmental science emphasizes experiential learning with courses that include required laboratories. By learning in an integrative environment that underscores the connectedness of these disciplines, students gain a better understanding of larger scientific concepts and they view these concepts from multiple perspectives. Students pursuing this concentration take a set of courses that focus more on environmental science than those pursuing a Bachelor of Science in biology.

While the emphasis is on science, students learn to approach environmental science from an interdisciplinary perspective, in part by studying environmental ethics and policy.

Career Opportunities:

According to the 2010-2011 Occupational Outlook Handbook (U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, 2010), employment of environmental scientists is expected to grow by 28% between 2008 and 2018. This is far more rapid growth than the average rate of growth for all occupations. The handbook indicates most rapid growth will occur in the private sector, primarily in private environmental consulting firms.

This concentration allows students to tailor their courses of study to their interests in the science of the environment to help prepare them for careers in the public and private sectors (e.g., environmental consulting, environmental remediation, natural resource management) and entry into graduate programs in environmental science and related disciplines.

Biology (Forensics), BS (ASLSCFBS)

Campus: West

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Students interested in this program should apply to the BS in forensic science.

Program Description:

The forensics concentration of the BS program in biology emphasizes the study of scientific techniques used to solve crimes. Students pursuing the forensics concentration take a more forensics-relevant set of courses than those students pursuing the BS in biology.

Much of the required coursework is completed in chemistry or biology lab science courses to ensure that graduates of this program are competitive as they apply to graduate degree programs, pursue relevant careers and enter the workforce.

Graduates are prepared to pursue careers in forensics laboratories and in the research and development of new criminal forensic technologies. Completion of the bachelor's degree in biology also ensures graduates are prepared for graduate, professional or medical degree programs.

Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates of this program pursue careers in forensics laboratories and in the research and development of new technologies in forensics.

Graduates are particularly competitive for positions in forensics laboratories because the concentration focuses heavily on chemistry and biology laboratory coursework (areas that administrators and current employees in crime labs have reported are critically important). For example, as reliance upon DNA fingerprinting technologies increases, demand for forensic scientists trained in the requisite amounts of molecular biology will increase. The concentration also places focus on oral communication skills (e.g., through coursework in argumentation, COM 222 Argumentation (3) or COM 422 Advanced Argumentation (3)), which will prepare graduates for the multifaceted aspects of their careers in forensics (e.g., providing articulate and compelling expert testimony in criminal trials). Graduates of this program are also well positioned to enter graduate programs in forensic science.

Biology (Pharmacology/Toxicology), BS (ASLSCPBS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The pharmacology and toxicology concentration of the BS program in biology provides an emphasis in the biochemical, molecular and physiological components of drug and body interactions.

The degree program emphasizes experiential learning, and all required core courses have laboratories. By learning in an integrative environment that emphasizes the connectedness of the disciplines, students gain a better understanding of larger scientific concepts and they can view these concepts from multiple perspectives. To have a thorough understanding of the interactions of chemicals in the biological system, students study both biology and chemistry and become familiar with chemical interactions at physiological, molecular and cellular levels. Undergraduates have the opportunity to conduct independent research under the mentorship of faculty members or in internships outside the school.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: West campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Students should click the link for more information and eligibility requirements of the WUE program (<https://admission.asu.edu/wue>).

Biotechnology and Bioenterprise, BS (ASBITEBS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BS program in biotechnology and bioenterprise provides students with essential transdisciplinary and practical experience in biotechnology research. Students acquire the associated business and entrepreneurship skills needed to develop and market biotechnological innovations and solutions to problems facing the biotechnology and health sciences communities in Arizona, the nation and beyond.

The program emphasizes coursework in the biological, biomolecular and biotechnological sciences, which are key components that underpin biotechnology. Students may tailor the degree to their specific interests and aspirations through focus areas in biotechnology, bioenterprise and biostatistics. The program is unique due to its focus on blending biotechnology and entrepreneurship.

Computational Forensics, BS (ASCPFBS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BS in computational forensics is a multidisciplinary degree program that encompasses areas of physical, biological and social sciences with an additional focus on statistics and computation.

Students investigate specific forensic problems using statistics, computing and mathematics with the main goal of advancing their forensic science knowledge and capabilities. Students study and develop the quantitative and computational methods that assist basic and applied research efforts in forensic science, establish or prove scientific basis in investigative procedures, and support forensic examiner casework. Through modeling, computer simulations and computer-based analysis and recognition, students gain an in-depth understanding of the forensic science discipline, the scientific method and the systematic approach to forensic science.

Disability Studies, BA (ASDISASBA)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BA program in disability studies explores historical, linguistic, social, artistic and legal dimensions of disability with the goal of improving the conditions of people whose lives are touched by disabilities.

With larger numbers of disabled people and disciplines focused on social justice, the new model for disability studies is that of empowerment rather than fixing a deficit. The curriculum combines theory and practice that prepare students to address injustices, exclusions and misapprehensions regarding disabilities through advocacy and self-advocacy, education, knowledge of the law and historical awareness.

Students in this major develop a professional-level digital portfolio of research in preparation for the job market.

English, BA (ASENGBA)

Campus: West

Program Description:

Students in the BA program in English learn how to write clearly and effectively, to think critically and to construct well-supported arguments.

The program stresses the formal aesthetic qualities of texts and the issues of class, gender, race and ethnicity relating to literary representation. Students gain a familiarity with standard literary-critical terminology and an awareness of various theoretical approaches to literary study. Students also become aware of uses of the English language in the U.S. and around the world.

The program provides students with a balanced overview of major literature in the English language and an awareness of the role of literary discourse in broader social and historical contexts.

Environmental Science, BA (ASENVBA)

Campus: West, ASU@Lake Havasu

Program Description:

The study of human impact on the earth's ecosystems and resources has become increasingly important over the past 20 years. The BA program in environmental science is dedicated to finding solutions to the challenges posed by climate change.

This degree program is founded on established environmental basics, ensuring that students are well-versed in biological study including molecular, organismal and ecosystem biology. Students gain competency in chemistry, statistics and geographic information systems. Rounding out student preparation, the program includes a focus on the management and communication skills necessary in various environmentally-specific careers.

The Bachelor of Arts in environmental science prepares graduates to find innovative and sustainable solutions to today's critical environmental challenges, including pollution and climate change. The world-renowned faculty conduct research across the globe and engage students in the process of creating new scientific knowledge that, in turn, impact a rapidly changing world.

Environmental Science, BS (ASENVBS)

Campus: West, ASU@Lake Havasu

Program Description:

The study of human impact on the earth's ecosystems and resources has become increasingly important over the past 20 years. The BS program in environmental science is dedicated to finding solutions to the challenges posed by climate change.

This degree program is founded on established environmental basics, ensuring that students are well-versed in biological study including molecular, organismal and ecosystem biology. Students gain competency in chemistry, statistics and geographic information systems. Rounding out student preparation, the degree includes a focus on the management and communication skills necessary in various environmentally-specific careers.

The Bachelor of Science in environmental science prepares students to become graduates who will find innovative and sustainable solutions to today's critical environmental challenges, including pollution and climate change. The world-renown faculty conduct research across the globe and engage students in the process of creating new scientific knowledge that, in turn, will impact a rapidly changing world.

Forensic Science, BS (ASFOREBS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

Forensic science is the study and application of scientific methods to matters of law. The BS program in forensic science emphasizes laboratory coursework in chemistry and biology as both areas provide essential experience with techniques commonly used in crime labs.

Rigorous coursework in the natural and mathematical sciences is required to ensure graduates are competitive in the workforce. The program is enhanced by a focus on oral communication skills that help prepare graduates for the multifaceted, transdisciplinary aspects of careers in forensic science, such as providing articulate expert witness testimony.

If a student is interested in pursuing a career as a forensic DNA analyst, nine cumulative hours of coursework in biochemistry, molecular biology and genetics are required, and coursework in population genetics is desirable. Students should note that the addition of these courses to the academic program may mean the student would have more than 120 credit hours. Employers may require documentation for completed coursework, such as an official course syllabus.

Forensic science students may apply for and participate in internships sponsored by metropolitan Phoenix area crime labs or other crime labs around the country. Internships are competitive, and the application process takes time. Generally, fall semester internships require application in the spring semester prior, and spring or summer semester internships require application by the start of the preceding fall semester. Internship positions are unpaid and require concurrent enrollment in FOR 484 Internship. Also, students must have a faculty mentor and abide by all internship standards of the school and those of the organization providing the internship. Students may also participate in cutting-edge research with a faculty mentor either as a volunteer in the faculty member's lab or by registering for FOR 499 Individualized Instruction. For more information, students should see an academic advisor.

Job applicants and students seeking a volunteer or internship position within a crime lab are required to undergo an extensive background check that includes a polygraph exam, fingerprinting and drug testing. Actions that can disqualify an applicant include recent or past illicit drug use (this includes marijuana), felony convictions and drunk driving convictions.

Career Opportunities:

Scientific and technological advances in the field of forensic science, as well as continually increasing caseloads in law enforcement, are projected to increase the number of forensic science technicians needed over the next decade. The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that between 2016 and 2026, employment of forensic science technicians will increase 17%, an average increase much greater than most occupations.

Forensic science program graduates are prepared to enter the workforce with crime labs and private forensic science labs at the local, state and federal levels. Graduates also are prepared for graduate programs in forensic science, law school, medical school and related fields.

Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences, BA (ASIASBA)

Campus: West

Program Description:

Today's employment landscape is evolving into one that prizes expertise in an increasing number of specialized fields. The BA program in interdisciplinary arts and sciences allows students to build a flexible, customized degree that is unique to their specific career goals. For example, a business degree with an emphasis in communications can lead to employment opportunities that aren't as easily accessed by a traditional business degree alone.

By providing the opportunity to combine disciplines, the college equips students with the specialized education they need to reach their individual career goals.

This degree program culminates in a capstone internship experience that provides real-world perspective, skills and connections, creating versatile graduates and attractive job applicants for the corporate world.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: West campus. Pharmacology and Toxicology, BS (ASPTXBS)

Campus: West

Program Description:

Students in the BS program in pharmacology and toxicology study how foreign materials react with human bodies. To have a thorough understanding of the interactions of chemicals in the biological system, students in the program study both biology and chemistry, and become familiar with chemical interactions at physiological, molecular and cellular levels.

With a heavy focus on experiential learning within the laboratory, graduates of the pharmacology and toxicology degree program are better prepared to obtain careers ranging from clinical research coordinators to veterinarians to even governmental roles.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: West campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Psychology (Forensic Psychology), BA (ASPGSFPBA)

Campus: West, Online

Program Description:

Forensic psychology is the application of psychology to the law. The concentration in forensic psychology within the BA program in psychology combines general training in psychology with specialized coursework in criminal law, criminal behavior, the diagnosis and treatment of mental disorders, and legal decision-making.

When courts are faced with cases in which a psychology-related question arises, they may turn to psychologists for help with the case. For example, psychologists might assist the court in understanding a criminal's mental state at the time of a crime or in determining whether a particular jury might have been biased against a defendant based on his or her race. This is the realm of forensic psychology.

This program teaches students about the various roles for psychologists in the legal system and helps them discover which roles they might like to pursue through careers in mental health, criminal justice or through graduate training.

The Bachelor of Arts degree differs from the Bachelor of Science degree in that it does not require two additional lab science courses.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: West campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Career Opportunities:

The interdisciplinary degree is an excellent option that matches the individual's interests and fulfills many employers' expectations of a bachelor's degree, namely that it should expose the student to a variety of outlooks and challenges.

Such a degree is competitive in most situations in which the disciplinary social and behavioral degrees are accepted, and it is advantageous when seeking entry to broad professional programs such as regional planning or urban studies.

This degree program provides a solid background in social sciences and methodologies that prepares students for graduate work in community development, counseling, criminal justice, professional schools (e.g., law, public administration, social work), public policy, social science disciplines and urban studies or planning.

Other careers include:

- border patrol officer
- community developer
- customer services manager
- housing specialist
- human relations officer
- immigration advocate
- lawyer
- lobbyist
- mediator
- nonprofit manager
- social sciences professor
- social services case worker

Social and Cultural Analysis (American Studies), BA (ASSCAASBA)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BA program in social and cultural analysis with a concentration in American studies engages in the transdisciplinary and comparative study of the United States as a cultural and political site of ongoing change and conflict.

Students learn diverse methods of analyzing nationalist politics, public and private cultural practices, transnationalism and the nation-making processes of migration, in keeping with the creative and critical scholarship of the discipline. The curriculum also brings attention to identity formations around gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity.

As a transdisciplinary field, American studies unites the social sciences, the humanities and the arts to stimulate students into engaging in rigorous and adventurous conversations about American culture, politics and history. Students explore knowledge beyond disciplinary boundaries by bringing differing perspectives and understandings into dialogue with one another and generating a unique level of intellectual rigor and excitement.

Social and Cultural Analysis (Queer and Sexuality Studies), BA (ASSCAQSBA)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BA program in social and cultural analysis with a concentration in queer and sexuality studies combines transdisciplinary topics and methods to critically analyze the function of ideologies of sexuality, the history and present conditions of sexual identity formation, structural inequalities and queer resistance to those same inequalities, and the diversity of LGBTQ communities.

Drawing from the premise that sex, gender and sexual orientation are both private experiences as well as profoundly political and public issues with important legal, social and cultural implications, the intellectual core of this program draws from theories, methods and pedagogies in queer theory and sexuality studies while engaging complementary fields of social justice, cultural studies, women's studies, gender studies, literature, history, sociology, psychology and transnational studies. Areas of emphasis include sexuality in culture, transnational queer studies, queer social movements and resistance, sexual fluidity, trans studies and critical heterosexualities.

Social and Cultural Analysis (Women and Gender Studies), BA (ASSCAWSBA)

Campus: West

Program Description:

The BA in social and cultural analysis with a concentration in women and gender studies offers students a transdisciplinary curriculum that focuses on the diverse experiences of women in both national and international contexts. The program also examines the meaning of gender as a socially constructed category that shapes personal identities, beliefs, opportunities and behaviors.

The wide range of classes explores the intersections of gender, race, class and sexuality; the institutional structures that have an impact on women's and men's lives; and the broad range of feminist theories that seek to explain and influence women's status in society. Areas of emphasis include gender and sexuality, critical race feminisms, gender and the borderlands, transnational feminisms, social activism and social movements, histories of feminism and critical embodiment studies.

Career Opportunities:

Risk is a part of daily life and wherever there is risk, there are opportunities for actuarial intervention. Many actuaries work with insurance companies to calculate premiums, determine reserves needed to ensure an organization's financial health and to ensure organizations conform to stringent, complex legal mandates. Others help companies to establish retirement plans or are employed as consultants. Students with a Bachelor of Science degree in actuarial science possess skills that are transferable to any industry and any organization that requires risk modeling and management, including:

- colleges and universities
- consulting firms
- energy, such as utilities, oil and gas
- environment (on issues such as climate change and the financial impact or risk of extreme events)
- financial services, such as banking and investment management
- government agencies such as Social Security, the Department of Labor and Medicare (to manage social programs and to develop regulations and legislation)
- insurance companies
- retirement and pensions
- transportation, such as shipping and air travel

Students can also apply the advanced problem-solving skills learned in the actuarial science undergraduate program to a variety of other professional careers, including:

- analysts
- business operations specialists
- consultants
- teachers

Career Opportunities:

Graduates of the American Indian studies program are qualified to fill positions at the tribal, state and federal government levels and in the private sector. Graduates can advance to graduate school or can pursue professional careers in fields such as government service or public service. For example, federally and tribally operated schools located in remote areas within Indian Country have high turnover rates for both teachers and staff. American Indian studies graduates should be available to help fill these positions. Furthermore, the federal government, a major employer on many reservations across the country, is in need of qualified people who are knowledgeable in Indian cultures, laws and policies. Additionally, many American Indian nations' economies and infrastructures are developing at a rapid pace, and they are in continuous need to fill mid-management and management-level positions.

Graduates find positions in many areas, such as:

- community action work
- public administration (tribal or state relations, nonprofit management, education administration, planner)
- public health
- the arts
- tribal employment (political office, tribal management, cultural resource programming, grant writer, cultural specialist, youth services)

This program also provides suitable preparation for graduate study or law school.

Anthropology, BA (LAASBBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

A BA in anthropology lies at the cross-section between complex reasoning, the collection and analysis of data, and pure human ingenuity.

In this degree program students learn how to use the scientific method to formulate and test hypotheses and gather qualitative and quantitative data through participant observation, interviewing, ethnographic study, careful excavation and measurement. They also learn how to employ statistics to analyze and extract meaning from data.

A special feature of the ASU anthropology program is its relevance to other disciplines and many exciting hands-on learning opportunities in laboratories and through study abroad and field-based courses.

Using skills gained through this program, graduates discover rewarding career paths and new avenues of public understanding in everything from humankind's historical origins to modern sociocultural intricacies.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in anthropology may not pursue a concurrent degree with the Bachelor of Science in anthropology or the Bachelor of Arts in global health due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

The demand in the job market for people with an anthropology background is stimulated by a growing need for researchers and analysts with keen thinking skills who can manage, evaluate and interpret large amounts of data. As the many spheres of human interaction expand globally, people trained in anthropology are increasingly sought for their broad, holistic knowledge and perspectives, which are the hallmarks of anthropology.

Some career opportunities include:

- acting as legal advocates in international cases
- analyzing and proposing policies
- conducting postgraduate academic research
- consulting for private and public organizations
- curating cultural resources
- directing nonprofit organizations
- directing programs in the private or public sector
- managing culture or heritage resources in private or public sectors

Anthropology, BS (LAASBBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Anthropology is the study of how and why humans evolved and how evolutionary biological, social and cultural trajectories help explain the meaning of being human in past, present and future environments. The BS program in anthropology gives students an opportunity to master anthropological knowledge and skills, or the anthropologically relevant, through applications of the scientific method and quantitative methodologies.

In core and elective courses, the bachelor's degree program in anthropology allows students to explore problems that may require the use of theories and methods from diverse disciplines, including biology, global health, applied mathematics, psychology, economics, sociology, medicine, law and engineering. The curriculum provides many exciting, hands-on learning opportunities through laboratories, study abroad and field-based courses.

Students currently enrolled in the BS in anthropology may not pursue a concurrent degree with the Bachelor of Arts in anthropology or the BA in global health due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Applied Mathematics for Life and Social Sciences, BS (LAAMLBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS in applied mathematics for the life and social sciences is unlike any other math program. It offers a novel and in-demand approach to investigating, integrating and solving for the physical, life and social sciences, across new, pressing applications such as mass violence, contagion, wildlife-human interactions and the transmission of behaviors through influence.

Degree seekers in this program are immersed in the use of proven theory, modeling and computational methods, while collaborating with and contributing to diverse fields such as anthropology, global health and environmental social science. The insights and skills gained allow graduates to confidently create accurate, versatile and practical answers desperately needed to improve or remedy real-life issues.

Nationally recognized experts ensure program graduates are well equipped for prestigious career paths in government, medicine, technology, security or other fields requiring vigorous data analysis or accurate projections, with an insight into human nature.

Asian Languages (Chinese), BA (LACHIBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA program in Asian languages with a concentration in Chinese emphasizes proficiency in reading, writing and speaking Mandarin and in reading classical Chinese. Students gain an in-depth understanding of the fundamentals of the rich Chinese cultural tradition, centered on primary Chinese texts (in Chinese and in English translation) from the literary, intellectual and religious cultures of Chinese-speaking societies. These texts include visual and written materials on a variety of topics, including:

- history
- linguistics
- literary theory
- media
- philosophy
- religion
- urban culture

Highly-motivated students interested in learning Chinese to professional-level proficiency are encouraged to inquire about the Chinese Language Flagship Program: <https://silc.asu.edu/chineseflagship> (<https://silc.asu.edu/chineseflagship>). All students with higher levels of linguistic competency may enroll in targeted courses (conducted in Chinese) offered as part of the Chinese flagship track.

Asian Pacific American Studies, BA (LAAPABA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA program in Asian Pacific American studies provides an opportunity for students to study the long history and rich contemporary experiences, cultures and communities of Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders in the Southwest and in the United States.

Dedicated and inspiring faculty lead students through an interdisciplinary liberal arts emphasis on critical thinking, complex reasoning and solid writing skills, preparing them to engage in research that informs meaningful dialogues between policymakers, educators and society at large about Asian American and Pacific Islander communities. Students understand the challenges and opportunities of U.S. society on why race matters today, how people have worked together cooperatively to make positive change, and identify solutions with creative, applied thought.

The Asian Pacific American studies program is housed in ASU's interdisciplinary School of Social Transformation, the only school of its kind in the United States.

Biological Sciences, BS (LABSCBS)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The life sciences delve into the study of the basic organization and processes of life (microbes, plants and animals) at scales ranging from molecules to ecosystems and in time from picoseconds to millennia. This includes investigations into how hereditary information is transferred and organisms evolve, the interplay of organisms and their environments, and how these factors interact in health and disease.

Students interested in a degree in life sciences can opt for a BS in biological sciences or choose one of five concentrations:

- biology and society

- biomedical sciences
- conservation biology and ecology
- genetics, cell and developmental biology
- neurobiology, physiology and behavior

This program is available as an accelerated degree program: <https://sols.asu.edu/degree-programs/accelerated-bachelor-master-science> (<https://sols.asu.edu/degree-programs/accelerated-bachelor-master-science>).

Due to the high volume of overlap in curriculum, students enrolled in a Bachelor of Science degree in the School of Life Sciences may be restricted from declaring a concurrent degree within the school. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 251 - Calculus for Life Sciences

Program Math Intensity: Moderate

Concurrent Degrees:

This degree is also offered as concurrent degree program with Secondary Education, BAE

Career Opportunities:

The biological sciences major with no concentration is designed for students who are committed to studying and training in multiple disciplines in biology and for students who want to get more exposure to the life sciences before deciding whether they want to declare a concentration as an undergraduate. Therefore, students in this major take core courses from several concentrations. Students in this major have more flexibility to customize their program of study so they can focus on their own area of interest that may not have a concentration, such as plant biology or genomics.

The biological science major provides an excellent foundation for graduate study as well as preparation for professional schooling in:

- dentistry
- medicine
- pharmacy
- veterinary medicine

Graduates may enter positions in:

- biotechnology
- education
- government
- industry

Biological Sciences (Biology and Society), BS (LABSCBS)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The BS program in biological sciences with a concentration in biology and society focuses on training biology students to understand the social context of their science, to ask how and why a biological problem has been and should be studied. Students explore the ways in which policy decisions shape and are shaped by biological research and they investigate the meaning and significance of the life sciences in understanding our complex world.

The biology and society curriculum is highly individualized. This unique degree is home to world-class researchers and teachers in diverse fields, including bioscience ethics, history and philosophy of science, science communication, science education and science policy, all brought together under one program. Students have the opportunity to work with many renowned scholars in independent study and research projects.

ASU has transfer partnerships in Arizona and across the country to create a simplified transfer experience for students. These pathway programs include exclusive benefits, tools and resources, and help students save time and money in their college journey. Students may learn more about these programs by visiting the admission site: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>.

Career Opportunities:

Biology and society students gain the historical, philosophical, political and ethical perspectives needed to explore interactions between the life sciences and related, complex human issues. As a result, the program contributes to better informed and more effective teachers, writers, policymakers, clinicians and researchers in areas related to biology, medicine and society.

As a result of the individualized, skill-based curriculum, biology and society majors are eligible for a broad range of career options. Most graduates have chosen to pursue professional degrees in medicine, law, public health or public policy, or graduate study in biology, ethics, education or history and philosophy of science. Graduates enter the workforce, whether in academia, industry, government or clinical practice, with a deep sensitivity to the complexity of biology in society and the skill to navigate that complexity throughout their careers.

Biological Sciences (Biomedical Sciences), BS (LABSCMBS)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The biomedical sciences concentration serves students in the biological sciences BS degree program who wish to pursue careers in medicine, other health professions or biomedical research in academic, clinical or industry settings. The curriculum aligns with the broad scientific competencies recommended for premedical students in a report of the American Medical Colleges and the Howard Hughes Medical Committee and reflected in the 2015 changes to the Medical College Admission Test.

Coursework draws from the school's concentration in genetics, cell and developmental biology and the concentration in neurobiology, physiology and behavior, with the addition of courses in biology and in medicine and society. The concentration focuses on chemistry, biochemistry, math and physics coursework that is necessary to prepare students for the MCAT and for medical school admissions. The concentration emphasizes core concepts, competencies and critical intellectual skills necessary to succeed in medical school or biomedical research.

This program is available as an accelerated degree program: <https://sols.asu.edu/degree-programs/accelerated-bachelor-master-science> (<https://sols.asu.edu/degree-programs/accelerated-bachelor-master-science>).

Due to the high volume of overlap in curriculum, students enrolled in a Bachelor of Science degree in the School of Life Sciences may be restricted from declaring a concurrent degree within the school. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 251 - Calculus for Life Sciences or MAT 270 Calculus with Analytic Geometry I

Program Math Intensity: Moderate

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

- Biology, MS
- Global Management, MGM
- Microbiology, MS
- Molecular and Cellular Biology, MS

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates are well-equipped to enter into careers as research scientists or as scientists in the health professions, having met the majority of prerequisite requirements and mastered many of the competencies valued by graduate programs in medical, dental and optometry fields or programs which prepare students to be physician assistants or physical therapists.

Additionally, graduates of this program have an understanding of the process of science, preparing them for a career in research. They have knowledge of foundational concepts in biological sciences, chemistry, physics and statistics and the ability to understand and apply core biomedical concepts. This prepares them for entry into biology research in a vast number of areas, some of which include genetics, genomics, evolution, physiology and immunology.

Biological Sciences (Conservation Biology and Ecology), BS (LABSCCBS)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

Ecology is the study of the distribution and abundance of organisms, the interactions among organisms, and the interactions between organisms and the physical environment. Conservation biology is an applied science based on ecological principles that focuses on conserving biological diversity and on restoring degraded ecosystems.

Arizona State University is committed to a more sustainable world, and sharing knowledge of conservation biology and ecology through the BS program in biological sciences with a concentration in conservation biology and ecology is one critical component to help meet this global challenge.

Conservation biologists at ASU investigate the impact of humans on Earth's biodiversity and develop practical approaches to prevent the extinction of species and promote the sustainable use of biological resources. Some investigate the causes of ecosystem degradation and use ecological principles to reestablish desired conditions in a variety of ecosystems, including rivers, wetlands, grasslands, urban landscapes and forests.

- governmental agencies such as the Environmental Protection Agency and state game and fish departments
- K-12 education, colleges and universities
- nongovernmental organizations such as The Nature Conservancy and Conservation International
- private companies focused on environmental resources, environmental law or environmental economics

The concentration can provide training in specific skills that might be needed in these areas:

- animal and plant physiology, identification and ecology
- behavioral ecology and population biology
- community, ecosystem and landscape ecology
- conservation of endangered species
- ecology of different habitats, including cities, lakes, rivers and grasslands
- restoration of degraded ecosystems

Biological Sciences (Genetics, Cell and Developmental Biology), BS (LABSCGBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS degree program in biological sciences with a concentration in genetics, cell and developmental biology integrates the study of three exciting, closely related areas of life science research. Genetics examines the blueprints of life, such as DNA sequence and gene expression, while cell biology studies the machinery of life enclosed within the boundaries of cells. Developmental biology uses both genetics and cell biology to understand how genes and the environment interact to produce a whole new individual from a single cell as well as understand the various developmental changes that organisms undergo throughout life. The combined study of genetics, cell biology and development has resulted in a better understanding of many diseases and promises to prove even more important in the future.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates of this concentration have a variety of career options. This degree provides the fundamental coursework necessary for admission into medical, dental, veterinarian, pharmacy or graduate schools or any of the health professions. There also are many employment opportunities that can be pursued upon receipt of the Bachelor of Science with this concentration:

- animal breeder technician
- bioinformaticist
- biotechnologist
- cell culture specialist
- cloning technician
- crime lab technician
- cytotechnologist
- drug design technician
- food and drug inspector
- genetic counselor
- histologist
- in-vitro fertilization technician
- plant improvement specialist
- teacher
- technical writer
- vaccine development technician

Students in this concentration program learn critical thinking skills that can be applied to many scientific problems and professions as well as to the challenges of daily life. Students are encouraged to engage in independent research projects or internship opportunities to develop a better sense of how science is done.

Biological Sciences (Neurobiology, Physiology and Behavior), BS (LABSCABS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The neurobiology, physiology and behavior concentration serves students in the biological sciences BS degree program with a broad yet rigorous education.

While it might seem that neurobiology, physiology and behavior are quite separate fields, the three interact extensively in living organisms to achieve common goals. By studying neurobiology, behavior and physiology from the perspectives of molecular and cellular biology, evolution, organ systems (neural, endocrine, cardiovascular, respiratory, immune, etc.) and the environment, students gain insight into how these aspects work together in a variety of ways. Students in this concentration also learn to apply principles from mathematics, chemistry and physics. Discoveries are made at the laboratory bench and in the field, and students in the concentration are encouraged to participate in research projects in the labs of our faculty members.

Career Opportunities:

The broad education and critical thinking skills students receive in this concentration are applicable to a variety of rewarding careers. Premedical, preveterinary and predental students get the background and courses needed for professional school application and beyond. Many students go on to graduate school for academic, teaching or research careers in areas such as:

- endocrinology
- environmental or behavioral physiology
- human physiology
- metabolism
- neurobiology
- social behavior

With a Bachelor of Science degree in this concentration, graduates have opportunities for technical positions in hospitals, research institutes and industry (food, dairy, chemical, pharmaceutical and biotechnology) as well as in government laboratories and agencies. The most important skills students learn in the concentration are critical-thinking and problem-solving skills that can be applied to many scientific problems and professions as well as to the challenges of daily life.

Chemistry, BA (LACHMBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

Students in the BA program in chemistry take a wide range of courses that prepare them to take on important problems using atomic and molecular level thinking in areas as diverse as energy and sustainability, new materials, medicine and health, nanoscience, environmental science, forensics, cosmetics and food chemistry, patent law, sales and marketing.

The Bachelor of Arts program in chemistry is a flexible option for students interested in a liberal arts degree with a strong grounding in physical science. It is ideal for students seeking to complete two degrees. Students pursuing a bachelor's degree in chemistry have opportunities to explore a wide range of interests from laboratory science to working in the public sector in regulation or law.

Students wishing to pursue a scientific graduate degree should consider the BS in chemistry.

Civic and Economic Thought and Leadership, BA (LACELBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA program in civic and economic thought and leadership incorporates the study of political philosophy, economic thought, history and American politics. Faculty engage students through the Socratic method, which challenges students to analyze the complex topics impacting lives today.

The curriculum, combined with outside-the-classroom leadership experiences, prepare students with the broad, academic foundation they will use throughout their careers. Students have the opportunity to intern on Capitol Hill or in congressional offices in their district, with nonprofits around the country, or in an opportunity of their academic interest. They engage with world-renowned scholars and experts who visit ASU for large lectures and small seminars through the school's public programs and civic outreach initiatives, and they are able to apply for one of the school's Global Intensive Experiences, which study service and leadership in places such as Israel and the West Bank, India and South Africa.

Civic and Economic Thought and Leadership, BS (LACETLBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS in civic and economic thought and leadership incorporates the study of political philosophy, economic thought, history and American politics. Faculty engage students through the Socratic method, which challenges students to analyze the complex topics impacting our lives today.

The curriculum, combined with outside-the-classroom leadership experiences, prepare students with the broad, academic foundation they will use throughout their careers. Students have the opportunity to intern on Capitol Hill or congressional offices in their district, with nonprofits around the country or in an opportunity of their academic interest. They engage with world-renowned scholars and experts who visit ASU for large lectures and intimate seminars through the school's public programs and civic outreach initiatives, and they are able to apply for one of the school's Global Intensive Experiences, which study service and leadership in places such as Israel and the West Bank, India, and South Africa.

Communication, BA (LACOMBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA program in communication at ASU's Tempe campus focuses on how message processes create, maintain and transform identities, relationships, workplaces and communities. This program provides a culturally based liberal arts focus with a second language requirement. Such courses and activities allow students to explore many fascinating questions, such as how messages can optimally advocate for a cause, sports team or organization; how people can communicate creatively in a variety of settings and styles; how valid messages differ from invalid messages; how and why cultural differences make communication difficult; and why some topics are difficult to discuss and consistently lead to conflict.

Through rigorous coursework and rewarding applied experiences, students gain effective communication skills that are highly sought by employers. Students learn to write and speak effectively and are able to convey complex ideas simply. They are prepared for employment in communication-intensive fields or for graduate study.

Communication, BS (LACOMBS)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The BS program in communication at ASU's Tempe campus focuses on how message processes create, maintain and transform identities, relationships, workplaces and communities. This degree program provides a liberal arts grounding and a social science focus. Such courses and activities allow students to explore many fascinating questions, such as:

- In what ways can messages convince people to eliminate negative health behaviors?
- When, how and why do cultural differences make it difficult to communicate?
- Why are some topics difficult to discuss and consistently lead to conflict?
- Why do people differ in how committed they are to their work?
- Why do some relationships flourish while others fade away?

Through rigorous coursework and rewarding applied experiences, students gain effective communication skills that are highly sought by employers. Students learn to write and speak effectively and to convey complex ideas simply, preparing them for employment in a variety of career fields or for graduate study.

Career Opportunities:

In a recent study, mathematics, computer science, applied mathematics and statistics all ranked among the top 15 most valuable college majors in terms of salary and career prospects. The computational mathematical sciences program brings all these disciplines together.

A bachelor's degree in computational mathematical sciences is one of the most versatile math degrees, offering students many career options. The degree positions students for careers in computer technology, business, medical research, teaching and education, engineering, and more. Some students pursue graduate opportunities in areas such as biophysics, economics, medicine, statistics and law. Diverse areas of study such as cancer modeling, weather forecasting and financial modeling all involve computational mathematical sciences.

Data Science, BS (LADATSCIBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Modern science and technology use sophisticated mathematical and computational tools to extract patterns from large, complex and often unordered data sets. Machine learning and data mining are invaluable technologies with applications as diverse as detecting fraudulent online credit-card transactions, understanding the dynamics of social movements, and personalizing medical treatments based on a tumor's unique genetic profile.

The BS degree program in data science prepares students to be critical analysts and users of data in a variety of areas such as business, research and government. This transdisciplinary program allows students to choose a focus area from a variety of fields to center their understanding of data science. With a mathematical core consisting of linear algebra, statistical inference and classification, data mining, machine learning and associated computer methods, students leave the program with a strong background in data-related skills that are useful in solving real world issues.

Earth and Environmental Studies, BA (LAEESBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BA program in earth and environmental studies provides a foundational understanding of the evolution of the earth system with an emphasis on the planetary context for sustainable human societies.

The degree program includes broad training in the physical sciences, especially process-oriented geosciences that focus on Earth's life-sustaining surface environment. Advanced courses focus on topics including:

- climate change
- earth's water, energy and material resources
- impact of land-use change on human civilization
- physical, chemical and biological process interactions that define Earth's evolution

This is designed as a liberal arts program with an emphasis on basic scientific literacy, not as a preparatory degree program for graduate study in the natural sciences. However, successful earth and environmental studies graduates are well prepared for green energy career opportunities such as:

- education
- environmental reporting
- natural resource management
- public planning
- sustainability

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in earth and environmental studies may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BS in earth and space exploration, the BS in earth and space exploration (astrophysics), the BS in earth and space exploration (astrobiology and biogeosciences), the BS in earth and space exploration (exploration systems design), or the BS in earth and space exploration (geological sciences) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Career Opportunities:

With a breadth of knowledge and experience and the acquired skills to integrate various domains of knowledge, graduates of the earth and environmental studies program are prepared for a variety of careers that help find solutions to tomorrow's environmental and sustainability challenges. Chief among these are careers in the following settings:

- consultancy
- education
- governmental agencies
- industry
- museums
- nongovernmental organizations
- nonprofit organizations
- publishing
- regulatory agencies
- utilities

Recent environmental awareness in business and government has also resulted in new employment opportunities (e.g., environmental coordinators, directors and managers). Graduates are also well prepared for admission to strong professional schools in fields outside the natural sciences.

Earth and Space Exploration, BS (LASESBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in earth and space exploration offers students an integrated education across earth sciences, planetary sciences, astrophysics and engineering. The degree program incorporates a learning community that includes science and engineering students, a yearlong collaborative capstone senior exploration project and strong quantitative preparation.

This strong foundation in geosciences, astrophysics and exploration engineering prepares students for key roles in earth resources and exploration, environmental and geologic engineering, space research and industry, and water and environmental use policy.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science in earth and space exploration may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in earth and environmental studies, the BS in earth and space exploration (astrophysics), the BS in earth and space exploration (astrobiology and biogeosciences), the BS in earth and space exploration (exploration systems design), or the BS in earth and space exploration (geological sciences) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Earth and Space Exploration (Astrobiology and Biogeosciences), BS (LASESABBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Astrobiology studies the origins, evolution, distribution and future of life in the universe. Biogeoscience focuses on the interaction of biological, geological and chemical processes on Earth in the present, past and future. These topics are closely related because the concepts of biogeoscience inform the study of planetary habitability and the search for habitable worlds.

Therefore, the astrobiology and biogeoscience concentration in the BS program in earth and space exploration is designed to offer students a strong foundation for exploring the interaction of geological and biological processes and understanding how such interactions sustain life on Earth and how they might operate on other planets. Those with this necessary scientific background contribute to the search for life on other planets, explore the life of extreme environments here on Earth and better understand how life on Earth responds to past, current and future global changes.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science in earth and space exploration (astrobiology and biogeosciences) may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BS in earth and space exploration, the BS in earth and space exploration (astrophysics), the BA in earth and environmental studies, the BS in earth and space exploration (exploration systems design), or the BS in earth and space exploration (geological sciences) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Earth and Space Exploration (Astrophysics), BS (LASESABS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS in earth and space exploration with a concentration in astrophysics is designed to offer students a fundamental grounding in astronomy and astrophysics, with exposure to the related fields of geology, planetary science and engineering. Students emerge from this program with the required skills for a career in astrophysics, physics or related fields.

The rigorous and quantitative coursework includes a combination of physics courses taught in the ASU School of Earth and Space Exploration and the Department of Physics. The tools of astronomical discovery are increasingly dependent on technological advances, and students are exposed to engineering principles and computer programming. Through the capstone project in the senior year, students gain valuable experience in translating science drivers into engineering solutions.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science in earth and space exploration (astrophysics) may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in earth and environmental studies, the BS in earth and space exploration, the BS in earth and space exploration (astrobiology and biogeosciences), the BS in earth and space exploration (exploration systems design), or the BS in earth and space exploration (geological sciences) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Earth and Space Exploration (Exploration Systems Design), BS (LASESESDBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in earth and space exploration with a concentration in exploration systems design offers students a fundamental curriculum in geology, physics and astrophysics while providing tools that enable them to design and build hardware and software to explore Earth and the universe beyond.

The program has a rigorous and quantitative grounding in the fundamentals of physics, mathematics and chemistry. Upon that foundation, students learn how to design hardware and software for scientific exploration. Coursework focuses on conceiving the requirements needed for a mission or project destined for space or extreme environments on Earth.

Each student in this degree has the opportunity to learn how projects and missions are designed and planned, starting with the scientific drivers and then defining engineering specifications. All students are expected to complete a senior project that takes a desired scientific measurement and realizes the technological solution to achieve the observation.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science in earth and space exploration (exploration systems design) may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BS in earth and space exploration, the BS in earth and space exploration (astrophysics), the BA in earth and environmental studies, the BS in earth and space exploration (astrobiology and biogosciences), or the BS in earth and space exploration (geological sciences) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Earth and Space Exploration (Geological Sciences), BS (LASESGSBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Geological science is the study of Earth and other planets with an emphasis on the processes that have shaped them since the origin of the solar system. Students explore topics such as the co-evolution of life, oceans, atmosphere and the Earth's climate system, and the record of that evolution encoded in rocks, soil, ice and isotopes.

The BS program in earth and space exploration with a concentration in geological sciences educates students in the fundamentals of geological sciences, providing a solid background in chemistry, mathematics and physics as well as mineralogy, structural geology, field geology and a variety of geologic subdisciplines.

Students gain a strong understanding of field methods as well as modern computing, remote sensing and instrumentation to effectively study the natural environment and Earth's resources. Graduates of the program can apply their knowledge for the benefit of Arizona, the nation and society in general.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science in earth and space exploration (geological sciences) may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BS in earth and space exploration, the BS in earth and space exploration (astrophysics), the BA in earth and environmental studies, the BS in earth and space exploration (astrobiology and biogesciences) or the BS in earth and space exploration (exploration systems design) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Economics, BS (LAECNBS)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The mission of the Department of Economics at ASU is to provide the highest quality instruction to students, conduct cutting-edge research in economics, and provide leadership and service to our professional communities. The department's undergraduate program aims to provide students with the critical thinking and communication skills needed to succeed in business, government or graduate school.

The BS program in economics is built on a strong core of economic theory, supplemented by mathematics and data analysis. All students are encouraged to develop programs of study tailored to their individual needs and interests. Students choose from a variety of courses within the department as well as from The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and the university to broaden their knowledge and skills and individualize their learning experience.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science in Economics offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences may not pursue a concurrent degree with the Bachelor of Science in economics with a concentration in politics and the economy, offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, or the Bachelor of Science in economics, offered by the W. Economics (Politics and the Economy), BS (LAECNPECBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The concentration in politics and the economy serves undergraduate students in the BS program in economics who wish to pursue careers in business, economic and political consulting, political science, law and government.

In addition to coursework drawn from economics, the concentration also requires coursework that highlights the impact of government policies on the economy and the conditions under which government interventions may be warranted. Students take political science courses that provide a deep understanding of political processes and institutions as well as methodologies for understanding that behavior.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science in economics with a concentration in politics and the economy may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BS in economics from The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences nor a BS in economics from the W. Career Opportunities:

Students graduating with a bachelor's degree in English with a concentration in secondary education have tremendous opportunities for employment. With more than one million students in a state ranked seventh in the nation in population growth, the need for certified teachers in Arizona is self-evident. Arizona State University provides more of those teachers than any other institution of higher education. In the last 15 years, ASU graduates have had their pick of teaching jobs around the valley and around the state. After student teaching in school districts in the greater Phoenix area or in one of the 22 Native American nations in the state, students are often hired to teach in the same school in which they completed their internship. New teachers continue to be in demand because the predicted rate of population growth in Arizona is still strong and the retirement rate of teachers is increasing.

Geography (Urban Studies), BS (LAGCUUBS)

Campus: Tempe

ASU is no longer accepting new students to this program. Please explore Degree Search for other similar program options.

Program Description:

Geographers' understanding of the modern world stems from their unique spatial perspective. Whether the topic is local or elsewhere in the world, they view it through the twin lenses of space and place.

The urban studies concentration under the BS program in geography applies the tools of geography to the study of urban areas. Students have an opportunity to focus in particular on the Phoenix metropolitan area and other rapidly urbanizing regions in arid climates. Tied with geographic information science, the urban studies major brings together both knowledge and skill sets in a powerful way.

Global Health, BA (LASSHBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The BA in global health is a transdisciplinary degree that provides new skillsets and perspectives to understand and solve contemporary public health challenges, from the poorest nations to the most industrialized. This program yields new ways of understanding diverse cultures, places and perspectives while accounting for social, historical, biological and ecological considerations.

The curriculum focuses on identifying critical issues, asking the right questions and creating meaningful and effective solutions that top health employers demand, combined with personal growth, empathy and insight gleaned through transformative hands-on experience. Students are required to participate on-ground in an approved global health study abroad program and a variety of destinations and focuses are available.

Many faculty in the program hold titles of national distinction and are recognized experts in hot topics such as water security, obesity, resource management, disease, mental health, stigma and more.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in global health may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in anthropology or the BS in anthropology due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

History, BA (LAHISBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

Students pursuing the BA in history study the growth and development of human society from political, social, economic and cultural perspectives. Students learn to craft stories from materials other people have left behind --- constitutions, land deeds, diaries, guns and bones. They learn to make decisions about what to investigate, whom to believe, what happened first, and why things fell apart or came together.

History is a discipline that constantly adopts new techniques of analysis and new ways of gathering and presenting information. Students of history learn to use and create digital media, to perform quantitative as well as qualitative analysis, and to present their findings in compelling ways to all kinds of audiences.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in history offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in history (secondary education), the BA in history offered by the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences, or the BA in history offered by the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Career Opportunities:

History majors are in demand. They know how to find and evaluate evidence, form arguments and present analysis --- skills essential to most careers including law, business, education, medicine and government.

Three out of four employers surveyed by the Association of American Colleges and Universities say they want colleges to place more emphasis on helping students develop five key learning outcomes: critical thinking, complex problem-solving, written communication, oral communication and applied knowledge in real-world settings. These learning outcomes are integral elements of an undergraduate degree in history.

History majors seek jobs in:

- business and industry
- communications
- education
- foreign service
- law enforcement
- museums
- public administration
- social services

History is an excellent foundation for graduate and professional studies in:

- business
- history
- justice studies
- law
- medicine
- public administration
- public history
- theology

History (Secondary Education), BA (LAHISSEBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The secondary education concentration within the BA in history offers a flexible degree for students who are considering a career in education.

The concentration program fully prepares students for teaching and certification. At the same time, the concentration provides all the disciplinary knowledge of a traditional history degree and prepares students for a variety of noneducation careers. By developing strong critical reading, writing and research skills as well as skills in oral presentation, the program creates a solid foundation for graduate work in history, law or business.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in history (secondary education) offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences may not pursue a concurrent degree with the Bachelor of Arts in history offered by The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, the Bachelor of Arts in secondary education (history) offered by the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College, the Bachelor of Arts in history offered by the New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences, or the Bachelor of Arts in history offered by the College of Integrative Sciences and Arts due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

International Letters and Cultures (Classical Civilization), BA (LASLCVBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Classics is a transdisciplinary field that includes the study of the literature, art, history and philosophy of the ancient Greeks and Romans, subjects which fueled the Renaissance and have continued to provide an intellectual foundation for innovative and influential people ever since.

ASU's BA program in international letters and cultures with a concentration in classical civilization provides a thorough grounding in the culture and history of the ancient Greeks or Romans while allowing students to satisfy their language requirement. The program begins with two cores: an introduction to ancient Greek and Roman literature (read in English translation) and knowledge of ancient history. With that basis, students are allowed to build a program to meet their needs and interests. Among the variety of topics students pursue are:

- ancient history, war, politics and economics
- archaeology of the ancient Mediterranean world
- art and architecture of the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans
- mythology and religious practices of the Greeks and Romans
- thought of figures such as Plato, Aristotle and Lucretius
- use of the classics in today's film, books and other media

International Letters and Cultures (Classics), BA (LASLCCBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Classics is the study of the literature, art, history and philosophy of the ancient Greeks and Romans --- a transdisciplinary field that fueled the Renaissance and that has continued to provide an intellectual foundation for innovative and influential people ever since.

The BA program in international letters and cultures with a concentration in classics begins with two cores: language skills in ancient Greek or Latin (or, if the student chooses, both) and knowledge of ancient history. With that basis, students build a program to meet their needs and interests.

Among the variety of topics students pursue are:

- ancient history, war, politics and economics
- literary classics such as Homer, Sophocles, Virgil and Ovid
- the archaeology of the ancient Mediterranean world
- the art and architecture of the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans
- the mythology and religious practices of the Greeks and Romans
- the thought of figures such as Plato, Aristotle and Lucretius
- the use of the classics in today's film, books and other media

In addition to the concentration in classics, ASU also offers a classical civilization concentration with a similar focus but different language requirements. Students should consult their advisor and choose the concentration that best meets their needs.

Career Opportunities:

Graduates with a degree in the classics possess skills in research and the precise use and analysis of language that will serve them well in a wide range of fields. The transdisciplinary study of a culture very different from the modern world, yet lying at the root of it, also fosters the ability to view issues from many angles and think critically about them.

Classics graduates often find careers in:

- business
- Christian ministry
- film, television and multimedia
- law
- politics
- education
- writing and editing (fiction, journalism, technical writing)

As many employers are well aware, a classics graduate has the training to solve difficult puzzles, to see through obscure language and to conduct rigorous research on often ill-defined problems. These skills are prized in any field of endeavor.

Students who receive a bachelor's degree in Jewish studies and pursue a career with one of the hundreds of U.S. companies that do business in Israel have a competitive edge because of their familiarity with Jewish culture. Jewish studies graduates are also prepared to:

- attend rabbinical seminary in preparation for becoming a community rabbi or chaplain
- engage in world political and economic issues
- pursue advanced education in Jewish professional service fields

The degree also provides a firm foundation for students who wish to pursue advanced degrees related to their area of interest in fields that may include:

- archaeology
- creative writing
- ethics

- film and media
- history
- journalism
- justice studies
- law
- philosophy
- political science

Justice Studies, BA (LAJUSBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Justice studies is an innovative social science and liberal arts program that examines contemporary social justice in a variety of contexts, including inequality, race, gender, citizenship, indigeneity and other significant areas.

This program provides a broad approach to understanding justice including the legal system as well as wider social contexts. The BA program provides students the kind of broader perspective required in today's workforce, through a liberal arts focus and the requirement to enroll in language courses.

As so many social justice issues occur across countries and cultures, this program equips students with a dynamic knowledge of the world's justice systems and gives them the skills to create meaningful, real-world change.

Mathematics, BA (LAMATBA)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

Math is the science of problem-solving. Students in the BA degree program in mathematics apply the critical thinking and problem-solving skills they learn to many endeavors, because math is a crucial component in engineering, life sciences, business, economics and social sciences.

In the bachelor's degree program in mathematics, students acquire a strong general mathematics background, but retain the flexibility to pursue other areas of interest through a minor or even a second major. Combining a second area of study such as life science, physics, computer science or business creates a powerful combination for future career goals.

Mathematics (Secondary Education), BS (LAMATSBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in mathematics with a concentration in secondary education provides an excellent pathway for students interested in teaching. Students acquire strong content knowledge in diverse areas of math and the skills to convey these concepts to others. This degree program offers a deeper mastery of mathematics coupled with the ability to handle the challenges of a high school classroom.

Students who wish to teach at the secondary level take courses preparing them to earn certification in the state of Arizona through this program. By providing a carefully designed curriculum of courses and instructional experiences, the program develops the deep understandings and connections needed to be a highly effective mathematics teacher. Graduates emerge equipped to provide mathematics instruction that is coherent, meaningful and challenging.

Microbiology, BS (LAMICBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in microbiology combines the study of the branch of biology involving the smallest of living things (bacteria, fungi, algae, protozoa and viruses) and immunology (the study of all aspects of the immune system).

Despite their small size, microbes are fundamental to life on Earth and compose the majority of all Earth's life forms. In addition to their essential contributions to the natural world, microbes have been model experimental subjects due to their impact on human health and ease of manipulation in the laboratory. A significant portion of medical research employs microbiological and immunological methods in order to examine basic genetic and biological phenomena.

The microbiology degree program places emphasis on understanding microorganisms and their interrelationships with other organisms in nature and on the influence of microorganisms in biomedicine and biotechnology. Students in the microbiology degree program study the background and current findings in the field of microbiology and also acquire the critical thinking skills and the hands-on laboratory and field skills required to succeed in science.

The major provides excellent training for premedical, pre dental, preveterinary and prepharmacy students as well as advanced study in microbiology and immunology.

This program is available as an accelerated degree program. Students can visit this website to learn more about accelerated degree programs: <https://sols.asu.edu/degree-programs/accelerated-bachelor-master-science> (<https://sols.asu.edu/degree-programs/accelerated-bachelor-master-science>).

Due to the high volume of overlap in curriculum, students enrolled in a BS degree in the School of Life Sciences may be restricted from declaring a concurrent degree within the school. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Microbiology (Medical Microbiology), BS (LAMICMBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The medical microbiology concentration serves students in the BS in microbiology degree program who aim to pursue careers in health professions, medical microbiology or biomedical research.

The curriculum aligns with the scientific competencies recommended for premedical students in a report of the American Medical Colleges and the Howard Hughes Medical Institute Committee and are also reflected in the 2015 changes to the MCAT. Coursework includes many of the courses in the microbiology major, including chemistry, biochemistry, math and physics, with some microbiology courses replaced by cell biology, animal physiology and courses that relate to human biology and society to emphasize core concepts, competencies and critical intellectual skills necessary to succeed in medical school or biomedical research. The concentration includes coursework that students need to prepare for the MCAT or medical school admission.

Molecular Biosciences and Biotechnology, BS (LAMBBBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in molecular biosciences and biotechnology encompasses many of the cutting-edge disciplines in life sciences research. Biotechnology is an exciting, rapidly growing field with major applications in agriculture (green biotechnology, leading to improved crops or production of vaccines in plants), health care (red biotechnology, leading to better therapeutics, diagnostics and personalized medicine) and industry (white biotechnology, leading to sustainable production of energy, enzymes and chemicals).

This molecular biosciences and biotechnology degree program focuses on the interface between molecular biology and biotechnology. The interface drives major advancements in knowledge and applied research and development, such as the development of next-generation biomedical products or biofuels. Hands-on research and the capstone course with both science and business or entrepreneurial components round out this exciting program.

Career Opportunities:

The molecular biosciences and biotechnology degree program provides an excellent background and training for a growing number of careers that incorporate this innovative area of the molecular life sciences. Independent research and courses with classroom plus lab components result in a solid base of knowledge and practical expertise in biotechnology and the molecular biosciences, providing many options for further education or for entering the workforce.

Many molecular biosciences and biotechnology graduates enter graduate programs in a molecular biosciences and biotechnology-related area. A number also enroll in medical school, other health-related professional programs or in other advanced programs. Graduates also have the knowledge and technical skills to enter the biotechnology workforce in an area matching their expertise and interest.

The molecular biosciences and biotechnology program has a faculty mentoring program which provides students with the opportunity to speak with faculty regarding career choices, selection and timeline of major courses and of independent research projects, and much more.

Neuroscience, BS (LABMENBS)

Campus:

Program Description:

Neuroscience is concerned with understanding the structure and function of the nervous system and its relation to behavior. The field of neuroscience spans all levels of biological analysis, with interfaces to many fields such as mathematics, law and engineering.

The concurrent BS degree program in neuroscience consists of rigorous, in-depth training in cellular, molecular and systems biology. With this broad depth of fundamental knowledge, students gravitate toward different areas of specialization in neuroscience. Students are prepared for collaborative and interdisciplinary research and teaching positions in neuroscience. The degree program also enables students to enter biomedical fields that prepare students for careers in medicine, nursing or veterinary medicine and to integrate innovative outcomes from the research community into their practices.

Philosophy, BA (LAPHIBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Accelerated options for this program are not currently available to ASU Online students.

Program Description:

The BA in philosophy teaches students how to think well which, in turn, lays the foundation for personal and professional success.

Philosophy students learn how to structure arguments, write precisely and clearly, and communicate their ideas in an orderly, persuasive and unambiguous way. Many philosophical texts are complicated, and philosophy courses teach students how to read, comprehend and summarize conceptually difficult material. In short, studying philosophy trains one to be a better, clearer thinker.

Coursework includes the major subfields of philosophy, such as metaphysics, epistemology and ethics, and electives that connect philosophy to other areas of inquiry, emphasizing the social relevance of philosophy.

Philosophy alumni are well prepared for leadership roles whatever path they take, whether it be in business, law, politics, medicine or education.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in philosophy may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in philosophy (morality, politics and law) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Philosophy (Morality, Politics and Law), BA (LAPHIMPBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Accelerated options for this program are not currently available to ASU Online students.

Program Description:

The BA in philosophy with a concentration in morality, politics and law combines the basic analytical approaches of philosophy with an emphasis on the moral questions that arise in political theory and law. The foundations of our political and legal systems are moral values, such as individual liberty, equality and justice. These are contested values, open to different understandings of their nature and implications.

Students explore the nature of morality, political theory, legal theory and the interconnections between them. Students complete philosophy courses as well as courses from disciplines related to philosophy to enrich and enliven their understanding of the intersections of morality, politics and law. This degree program is of special interest to students planning to pursue postgraduate work in law, policy or politics.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in philosophy (morality, politics and law) may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in philosophy due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Politics and the Economy, BS (LAPECBS)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BS program in politics and the economy prepares students for careers that require a sophisticated understanding of the relationship between politics and the economy. This degree is a response to the growing recognition that many of the world's most pressing problems (e.g., growth and development, tax reforms and climate change) are fundamentally political and economic problems. The program combines core courses in economics and political science. Utilizing the strengths of both the ASU Department of Economics and the School of Politics and Global Studies, students graduate with strong quantitative and modeling skills and a rich understanding of political context.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Science in politics and the economy may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BS in economics from The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, a BS in economics from the W. P. Carey School of Business, a BS in political sciences or a BA in political science due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Career Opportunities:

According to external forecasters of employment growth (U.S. Department of Labor and the U.S. News & World Report), job opportunities for graduates of the politics and the economy degree program are expected to grow as fast or faster than the average growth of the labor force. They note that the demand for graduates grounded in economics and political science is driven by the growing complexity of the global economy, the increased implementation of financial regulations in wealthier nations and the growing competitiveness of the business environment. In terms of specific sectors, graduates are well-prepared for entry positions in government at all levels (local, state and federal), business, economic and political consulting, and law. They are also prepared to pursue advanced degrees in law, business, economics or political science.

Religious Studies, BA (LARELBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

ASU is not currently accepting applications for this program. Interested students should apply to the concentration in religion, culture and public life (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/programs/t5/majorinfo/ASU00/LARELCPBA/undergrad/false>) or the concentration in religion, politics and global affairs (<https://webapp4.asu.edu/programs/t5/majorinfo/ASU00/LARELPGBA/undergrad/false>).

Program Description:

Religion is an important part of human experience. Religious understanding informs and shapes politics, literature, philosophy, art and science as well as the daily life of millions around the globe. An understanding of religious traditions is critical to understanding our shared past and present and to navigating toward our shared future.

Students who pursue the BA in religious studies come from a wide diversity of faiths, cultural backgrounds and intellectual interests. What many find fascinating and exciting about religious studies is that it draws from a wide variety of disciplines --- history, philosophy, anthropology, literature, political science and theology, to name a few. Course offerings reflect a diversity of approaches (historical, anthropological, ethical and theological), regions (North America, South America, Europe, Middle East, Africa, South Asia and Southeast Asia) and traditions (Buddhism, Christianity, Hinduism, Islam, Judaism and Native American traditions).

Students currently enrolled in the BA in religious studies may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in religious studies (religion, politics and global affairs) or religious studies (culture and public life) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.

Religious Studies (Religion, Culture and Public Life), BA (LARELCPBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Accelerated options for this program are not currently available to ASU Online students.

Program Description:

The BA in religious studies with a concentration in religion, culture and public life approaches religion as a mode of human culture, as constituted in intellect, language, emotion, practice, art and everyday life.

The program focuses on the role religions play in the formation of cultural identities, traditions, norms and memories, and it examines in particular the impact religions have on culturally specified ways people reason, communicate, socialize, work, entertain, dress, eat, live and die. Special consideration is given to the influence of religion on gender roles and sexual norms; the formation of images of the body and the moral assessment of medical practices; and the reflection and reproduction of religion in film, popular culture, and conventional, digital and social media.

The concentration addresses present-day interests and prepares students for jobs in a variety of professions, including education, journalism, media studies, gender studies, health care, politics, law, education, migration and international studies.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in religious studies (religion, culture and public life) may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in religious studies or the BA in religious studies (religion, politics and global affairs) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Religious Studies (Religion, Politics and Global Affairs), BA (LARELPGBA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Accelerated options for this program are not currently available to ASU Online students.

Program Description:

The BA program in religious studies with a concentration in religion, politics and global affairs considers how the study of religion expands the understanding of political culture, communal formation, governance, nationalism, statehood and citizenship in both domestic and global contexts.

Students explore the role religion has in shaping political values, social movements, civic organizations and communal norms, with particular attention on how religion impacts issues of health, the environment, migration, peace, conflict, violence and various issues of social justice. Special consideration is given to the religious intersections of nationality, ethnicity, race, gender and other vital facets of human community and identity.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in religious studies (religion, politics and global affairs) may not pursue a concurrent degree with the BA in religious studies or the BA in religious studies (religion, culture and public life) due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Spanish, BA (LASPABA)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

Students pursuing a BA degree in Spanish have the opportunity to gain reading, speaking and writing proficiency in the language. The Tempe campus program offers two study options: the Spanish linguistics track and the Spanish literature and culture track.

The linguistics track provides an in-depth understanding of the Spanish language while the literature and culture track addresses issues throughout the Spanish-speaking world as seen through the lenses of Spanish language, culture and literature.

A Bachelor of Arts in Spanish is also available for ASU Online students; it combines courses from both the linguistics track and the literature and culture track.

Students are encouraged to contact a school advisor to discuss which option is best for them. Throughout the year, through study abroad and exchange programs, ASU offers opportunities to study in countries in which Spanish is spoken. Program Description:

In ASU's three-year BS degree program in technological leadership, students learn complex problem-solving, critical thinking and leadership through an interdisciplinary blend of classroom learning and hands-on projects. Coursework focuses on individual- and team-based inquiry and design, intensive summer internships and fundamental skills in writing, math and coding.

The heart of this major consists of classes in inquiry and making, taken each semester. In inquiry classes, students use an innovative inquiry process to solve big questions both independently and in teams; examples include "What will the moon look like after human settlement?" and "What is the future of cars?" In making classes, students use similar processes with software and lab tools to create physical products that fill urgent material gaps in the world of science and technology.

Graduates are prepared to succeed in an array of endeavors, whether a direct path to an empowered career in the workforce in such areas as tech and finance industries, think tanks, and consulting firms or in earning an advanced degree before a career in academia.

Urban Planning, BSP (ARPUPBSP)

Campus: Tempe, Online

Program Description:

The urban planning program introduces students to issues faced by urban areas and the tools necessary to address them. Urban planners guide communities in making wise decisions about their use of land and resources.

The BSP program in urban planning provides students with expertise in both the analysis and the synthesis of the physical, social, political and economic issues that shape urban and regional development. Planning encompasses:

- computer and research methods
- environmental impact assessment
- geographic information systems
- housing
- landscape architecture and urban design
- planning and zoning law
- public policy formulation and administration
- transportation
- urban and development economics
- utilities

Students take courses that include:

- comprehensive planning
- computer and analytical methods
- planning law
- public policy formulation and administration
- site planning
- socioeconomic and environmental analyses
- urban design

Additional Program Fee: Y

Second Language Requirement: N

First Required Math Course: MAT 142 - College Mathematics

Program Math Intensity: General

Accelerated Degree Options:

This program allows students to obtain both a bachelor's and master's degree in as little as five years. It is offered as an accelerated bachelor's and master's degree with:

Urban and Environmental Planning, MUEP

Acceptance to the graduate program requires a separate application. During their junior year, eligible students will be advised by their academic departments to apply.

Nursing, BSN (NUNURDBSN)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, ASU@The Gila Valley, Online

Program Description:

Through a curriculum centered upon evidence-based practice, clinical reasoning, innovation, interprofessional communication and information technology, the BSN degree program prepares students to provide high-quality professional nursing care. The Bachelor of Science in Nursing may be earned through several unique pathways.

Traditional Prelicensure BSN Nursing Program

The traditional prelicensure clinical nursing program is a full-time, upper-division nursing program designed for students who wish to become a registered nurse by completing a Bachelor of Science in nursing. The program has three start dates per year --- in spring, summer and fall and it may be completed in a 16-month year-round schedule or a 24-month academic year schedule. Graduates are eligible to sit for the National Council Licensure Examination to gain licensure as a registered nurse.

Students advance into the program in one of two ways: direct admission or the competitive advancement process. Direct admission is offered to incoming first-time freshman who meet specific admission criteria. Students admitted directly must meet continuing eligibility criteria while attending ASU to advance into the upper-division nursing program. Directly admitted nursing students who do not meet continuing eligibility criteria, transfer students or ASU students who are changing majors may apply for advancement to the upper-division nursing program by competing for any remaining spaces. More information can be found at <https://nursingandhealth.asu.edu/programs/bsn/traditional> (<https://nursingandhealth.asu.edu/programs/bsn/traditional>).

Accelerated BSN Clinical Nursing Program

The accelerated BSN clinical nursing program is a full-time, 12-month upper-division clinical nursing program designed for students who wish to become a registered nurse by completing a BSN. Selection is competitive and students start the program in the spring semester.

Students pursuing advancement to the accelerated BSN clinical nursing program complete prerequisite coursework and apply for advancement to the program. Graduates are eligible to sit for the National Council Licensure Examination to gain licensure as a registered nurse. More information can be found at <https://nursingandhealth.asu.edu/programs/bsn/postbaccalaureate> (<https://nursingandhealth.asu.edu/programs/bsn/postbaccalaureate>).

Online RN to BSN Program

The online RN to BSN program is available online to students who have earned an associate degree in nursing and have a current RN license in good standing with the state board of nursing. The RN to BSN program courses are offered online in 7.5-week sessions and can be completed in 14 to 24 months. There are five starts per year: two in the fall, two in the spring and one in the summer. Assignments may include readings, discussions, papers, presentations and practical application activities completed wherever the student resides.

Transfer pathway agreements are in place with all community colleges in Arizona, which provide additional benefits to students. The RN to BSN program does not have approval from the boards of nursing in Tennessee, Rhode Island or Washington to be offered to RNs licensed in those states. More information can be found at <https://asuonline.asu.edu/online-degree-programs/undergraduate/bachelor-science-nursing-rn-bsn/> (<https://asuonline.asu.edu/online-degree-programs/undergraduate/bachelor-science-nursing-rn-bsn/>).

Concurrent Enrollment Program

The concurrent enrollment program pathway is available to students enrolling in or already enrolled in any regionally accredited associate degree program in nursing that leads to NCLEX-RN licensure. This program is designed for qualified nursing students who are interested in earning their Bachelor of Science in nursing while simultaneously pursuing their associate degree in nursing. Selected students enroll in the community college program and ASU CEP courses at the same time (concurrently). CEP courses taken at ASU are delivered in an online format. More information can be found at <https://nursingandhealth.asu.edu/programs/bsn/cep> (<https://nursingandhealth.asu.edu/programs/bsn/cep>).

Eastern Arizona College Partnership

The ASU and Eastern Arizona College partnership offers a concurrent enrollment program pathway for qualified students pursuing an Associate of Applied Science in nursing from any of the three EAC campuses while simultaneously earning a Bachelor of Science in Nursing from ASU. Courses in this program are delivered in a hybrid format on the Thatcher campus. More information can be found at <https://nursingandhealth.asu.edu/admissions/eastern-arizona-college> (<https://nursingandhealth.asu.edu/admissions/eastern-arizona-college>).

Community Advocacy and Social Policy, BA (PPCASPBA)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix, West, Online

Program Description:

The BA program in community advocacy and social policy focuses on advocacy strategies through an in-depth exploration, analysis and comparison of social service systems and policies from an empowerment perspective.

The program's emphasis is on examining the needs of individuals, families and communities that have been historically under-served. Policy analysis and social change are critical themes in developing an advocacy knowledge base as are the equally important themes of prevention and social well-being. Students complete courses in two core areas: diversity and oppressed populations and social issues and interventions.

This degree prepares students to pursue graduate education. While the Bachelor of Arts in community advocacy and social policy program is fully accredited regionally under the North Central Regional Higher Education Association, it is not accredited through the Council of Social Work Education because this degree is not a BSW degree. Therefore, the Bachelor of Arts in community advocacy and social policy degree would not fulfill a professional licensing requirement that requires a Bachelor of Social Work degree from a CSWE-accredited Bachelor of Social Work program.

Nonprofit Leadership and Management, BS (PPNLMBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

Through the BS degree program in nonprofit leadership and management, students are empowered to become successful professionals who work to advance the quality of life in communities.

The nonprofit sector in the United States is unique in form and function. This sector includes institutions and individuals situated between government, public, business and commerce sectors. With more than 1.6 million organizations in the U.S., the sector employs more people than the finance, insurance and real estate industries combined. Philanthropy (voluntary action for the public good) is a hallmark of the nonprofit sector as individuals give their time, money and know-how to causes about which they care.

Students in the nonprofit leadership and management program learn about the nonprofit sector through curriculum instruction and field experience. The required internship component of the program leads students to professional opportunities within the nonprofit sector. Within the undergraduate degree requirements, students also may choose to pursue the National Certified Nonprofit Professional credential through ASU's affiliation with the Nonprofit Leadership Alliance: <https://www.nonprofitleadershipalliance.org/credential/> (<https://www.nonprofitleadershipalliance.org/credential/>).

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Downtown Phoenix campus. Students from Western states who select this major and campus may be eligible for reduced nonresident tuition at a rate of 150% of Arizona resident tuition plus all applicable fees. Students should click the link for more information and eligibility requirements of the WUE program (<https://admission.asu.edu/wue>).

Career Opportunities:

Depending on their interests, graduates seek work in diverse settings that include a wide range of missions, including arts and culture, environmental, health, youth development, etc. Some graduates find employment with local, grassroots, direct-service nonprofits while others find work with grant-making foundations. Many work in affiliates of well-known national organizations such as:

- American Red Cross
- America's Second Harvest
- Humane Society of the United States
- March of Dimes
- National Urban League
- United Way
- youth-serving entities such as Big Brothers Big Sisters, Boys and Girls Clubs, Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts of the USA, Camp Fire USA and the YMCA of the USA

Increasing opportunities in the nonprofit sector include careers across the spectrum of community issues such as the arts, environment, health care and others. Typical positions include roles as:

- field executives
- fund development directors
- program directors
- program officers for grant-making organizations

Parks and Recreation Management (Therapeutic Recreation), BS (PPPRMTRBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The BS program in parks and recreation management with a concentration in therapeutic recreation prepares students to apply for eligibility to take the national professional certification in through the National Council for Therapeutic Recreation Certification: <https://www.nctrc.org> (<https://www.nctrc.org>).

The degree program prepares competent, entry-level recreational therapists with the requisite knowledge, skills and abilities to improve functional outcomes and increase participation in life activities with individuals experiencing health conditions. It is designed for students who want to learn to conduct assessments, develop service plans, implement therapeutic interventions, evaluate and document outcomes of care. They gain skills to effectively provide comprehensive therapeutic recreation services that include program design and evaluation, individual and group service provision, and advocacy. The required fieldwork component of the program facilitates the development of competencies needed to provide quality recreational therapy services.

Students who choose this degree program are truly committed to improving people's lives and contributing to their communities. This degree program is one of two such programs in Arizona, both offered by the School of Community Resources and Development. This program prepares students to provide recreational therapy services in community settings such as youth programs, adaptive sports, or parks and recreation while the Bachelor of Science in recreational therapy has a heavier emphasis on healthcare settings such as hospitals and human service agencies.

Public Service and Public Policy (Health Policy), BS (PPPAFHPBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The School of Public Affairs offers a concentration in health policy as part of the BS in public service and public policy. This program allows students to build a course of study that emphasizes their own areas of interest. The health care industry is continuing to be a major part of the U.S. and world economy.

The concentration in health policy provides students who have an interest in policy to focus on health-related issues and their policy implications. The courses in the concentration are offered by the College of Health Solutions and the School of Human Evolution and Social Change. All the courses are part of the college's regular degree offerings. Thus, students emerge from the program prepared to address policy issues in this substantive area with an understanding of the range of public service careers (including government, nonprofit and for-profit options), the economics of public affairs, the challenge of leadership in the public context and the dynamics of administering public programs.

Recreation Therapy, BS (PPRECTBS)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

The BS program in recreational therapy prepares students to apply for eligibility to take the national professional certification through the National Council for Therapeutic Recreation Certification: <https://nctrc.org/about-certification/ctrs-the-qualified-provider> (<https://nctrc.org/about-certification/ctrs-the-qualified-provider/>).

The program prepares competent, entry-level recreational therapists with the requisite knowledge, skills and abilities needed to improve functional outcomes and increase participation in life activities for individuals experiencing health conditions. It is designed for students who want to learn to conduct assessments, develop service plans, implement therapeutic interventions, and evaluate and document outcomes of care. They gain skills to effectively provide comprehensive therapeutic recreation services that include program design and evaluation, individual and group service provision, and advocacy. The required fieldwork component of the program facilitates the development of competencies to provide quality recreational therapy services.

Students who choose this degree program are committed to improving people's lives and contributing to their communities. This degree program is one of two such programs in Arizona, both offered by the School of Community Resources and Development. This program has a heavier emphasis on healthcare settings such as hospitals and human service agencies while the Bachelor of Science in parks and recreation (therapeutic recreation) prepares students to provide recreational therapy services in community settings such as youth programs, adaptive sports, or parks and recreation.

ASU offers programs that lead to certification or licensure that may allow graduates to be eligible for certification or licensure in other states. Please check the professional licensure list for Watts College to determine if this program meets requirements in your state: <https://asuonline.asu.edu/about-us/licensure/> (<https://asuonline.asu.edu/about-us/licensure/>).

Urban and Metropolitan Studies, BA (PPURBBA)

Campus: Downtown Phoenix

Program Description:

Located in the heart of downtown Phoenix, the BA program in urban and metropolitan studies is for students who have a yearning to study and understand urban theory in order to effectively address the challenges of rapid growth along with other contemporary urban issues.

Students discover what makes the city tick --- and the city is their classroom. They examine challenges and solutions by researching history, society, culture, economy and politics in order to understand urban theory, and they use that knowledge to get involved in their communities. This gives them an outlet through which they can experience practical ways of solving complex problems faced by metropolitan regions. The students are invested in their neighborhoods. Many of them live and work downtown and they learn how to improve urban health and well-being, often training themselves to be the future leaders of urban environments. Others focus on making a wide variety of other contributions to society, studying the role of arts and culture, business and property development, revitalization and community-building in the life of the region.

This major is eligible for the Western Undergraduate Exchange program at the following location: Downtown Phoenix campus. Students applying to this program must have completed an AAS degree from a regionally accredited institution AND be employed in an early childhood setting (e.g., Head Start, child development center, daycare or childcare center, private or public preschools, home-based child care) in order to successfully participate and complete coursework.

Students with an Associate of Applied Science degree (which consists of courses in specialized occupational areas built upon a general education core) will receive 60 hours of credit through a block transfer to the university. The block transfer applies only to the Bachelor of Applied Science degree program. Students may receive up to 15 more credit hours for additional coursework completed at the community college or university that, through transcript evaluation, is determined to match a course in the degree program major map.

Attend Online: ASU offers this program in an online format with multiple enrollment sessions throughout the year. Applicants may view the program description and request more information here. (<https://asuonline.asu.edu/online-degree-programs/undergraduate/early-childhood-applied-science/>)

Change of Major Requirements:

A current ASU student must have completed an Associate of Applied Science from a regionally accredited institution to change to this major.

Early Childhood and Early Childhood Special Education, BAE (TEECSEBAE)

Campus: Tempe

Program Description:

The BAE program for early childhood and early childhood special education prepares students for certification in both early childhood education (birth to age 8 or grade 3) and early childhood special education (birth to age 8 or grade 3).

This is a premier program taught by nationally renowned faculty who emphasize community connectedness, technology infusion, policy and advocacy related to young children with and without disabilities or developmental delays.

The program teaches child development, research-based instructional and assessment practices in early childhood education and the skills to assess, monitor and report the progress of children with and without disabilities. It provides techniques and approaches to collaborate and partner with family members in the growth and development of young children.

This program is designed to prepare highly competitive graduates. The teacher certification program in early childhood and early childhood special education is embedded during the junior and senior years. The primary goal of all professional experiences is to provide interns and residents with multiple opportunities to apply knowledge learned in coursework to practice with infants, toddlers, preschoolers and children in preK-3 classrooms. Students complete internships during their junior year that require a minimum of two days per week in a preschool classroom. In their senior year, students complete a full-time, year-long teaching residency. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty and certified lead teachers from partner schools coach interns and residents during required professional experiences. Students also develop their own instructional practices and skills for effective collaboration and reflection through teaming with their peers in addition to faculty and educators in the field. The professional experiences provided by the program are unmatched in Arizona. It provides students an opportunity to work directly with children and make an immediate impact on classroom achievement.

This program also prepares graduates to qualify for the structured English Immersion endorsement.

Graduates earn an institutional recommendation for their teaching certificate. Those desiring to teach in a public school must pass the appropriate Arizona educator exam (National Evaluation Series or Arizona Educator Proficiency Assessments) to be certified to teach in the state of Arizona.

Education Exploratory, (TEEDUEXPL)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

Students in the education exploratory track have the unique opportunity to explore different certification areas prior to selecting one of many majors within the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College.

During the program's first year of coursework, which includes four foundational education courses, and through specific co-curricular events scheduled throughout the first and second terms, students on this track are exposed to all programs and certification areas. Students make a more informed decision about the grade level or subject they want to teach while the exploratory track keeps them on track to graduate from any of the BAE programs.

This track does not lead to a degree, and students need to declare a major after completion of 30 credit hours.

Educational Studies (Early Childhood Education), BAE (TEESECEBAE)

Campus: Online

Program Description:

The BAE program in educational studies with a concentration in early childhood education prepares graduates to lead change and innovation in early childhood education. It provides students with experience in collaborative and reflective practice, develops leadership and critical thinking, and builds the skills needed for working with and advocating for children from birth to age 5.

This program is delivered online and tailored for individuals working in early childhood settings such as Head Start; child development centers; preschools; and private, public or home-based child care. Students must work or volunteer in an early-childhood setting in the last two years of the program to successfully complete the coursework.

The curriculum allows educators to apply coursework to their professional practice. It focuses on early childhood development, instructional strategies, delivering highly individualized instruction, classroom management, intentional teaching and reflective practice.

This program does not lead to Arizona teacher certification. Students seeking teacher certification should enroll in one of the other Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College undergraduate programs.

Elementary Education, BAE (TEEEDBAE)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West, ASU@Lake Havasu

Program Description:

The elementary education BAE program leads to K-8 elementary education certification in the state of Arizona.

This program offers students a firm grounding in academic content with current research and best practices from nationally recognized faculty in their fields of expertise, accompanied by real-world classroom and professional experiences. This program also provides meaningful experiences throughout the program in integrating technology into teaching and learning.

The teacher certification program for elementary education is clinically embedded during both the junior and senior years. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College students complete internships during their junior year and a full-time, year-long apprenticeship, known as their senior year residency, in K-8 classrooms. Coursework is designed to support the development of instructional competencies, professional skills and content knowledge. Coursework is complemented by professional experiences, which provide interns and teacher candidates opportunities to apply and reflect upon their knowledge and skills in teaming and collaborative models. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty and highly qualified mentor teachers from partner school districts and charter schools work in collaboration to support professional growth aligned to each student's personal goals. Additionally, the professional experience pathway provides students an opportunity to work directly with children and make an immediate impact on student achievement. This intensive, hands-on professional experience model of teacher preparation creates highly sought-after graduates and is unmatched in Arizona.

Graduates are recommended for grades K-8 elementary teacher certification. Those desiring to teach in a public school must pass the appropriate Arizona educator exams (National Evaluation Series or Arizona Educator Proficiency Assessments) to be certified to teach in the state of Arizona.

Elementary Education (Educating Multilingual Learners), BAE (TEDLLBAE)

Campus: Tempe

This program's name has changed effective Fall 2021. The previous name was Elementary Education (Bilingual Education and English as a Second Language).

Program Description:

The BAE program for elementary education with a concentration in educating multilingual learners offers students a firm grounding in current research and best practices for English language learners, accompanied by real-world classroom experiences.

Undergraduates majoring in educating multilingual learners for elementary education (grades K-8) are prepared to nurture and develop languages other than English in dual-language settings and to value the rich linguistic resources that are present in any classroom to support student learning. Students in this program take several courses that focus on developing teachers for linguistically and culturally diverse settings. These courses include topics such as language diversity, dialectal variation in the classroom and funds of knowledge.

Understanding the challenges that emerging bilinguals face instructionally, coupled with understanding the implications of language policy in various learning contexts is imperative to student experiences and coursework. Students learn processes for identifying English language learners as well as developing and supporting the needs of students with individual language learning plans. Students also learn principles of first- and second-language acquisition, foundations of various program models, global awareness and diversity in families and communities in multicultural settings, as well as academic content areas including math, language arts, computer literacy and science with a specific focus on meeting the academic and linguistic needs of English language learners.

The program requires six credit hours of a foreign language or its equivalent and enables students to work with second-language learners.

The elementary education teacher certification program is clinically embedded during the junior and senior years. During this time, students are intentionally and directly implementing course learning and theory to practices in the classroom. Strategies within the program focus on foundations of second language acquisition, biliteracy, culturally relevant pedagogy, effective language instruction and prepares pre-service teachers to develop critical perspectives that allows them to advocate for bilingual children and families.

Field experiences are diverse and involve meeting the needs of emerging bilinguals in structured English immersion, English language development and dual language settings. The primary goal of all professional experiences is to provide interns and residents with multiple opportunities to apply knowledge learned in coursework to practice in preK-12 classrooms. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College students complete internships during the junior year that require one day per week in grades K-8 classrooms and full-time, year-long residencies in their senior year.

Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty and highly qualified certified lead teachers from partner school districts and charter schools collaboratively coach interns and residents during required clinical experiences with high concentrations of English language learners. The professional experience provided by the program is unmatched in Arizona and provides students an opportunity to work directly with children and make an immediate impact on classroom achievement. This intensive, hands-on professional experience model of teacher preparation creates highly sought-after graduates.

Graduates are recommended for grades K-8 elementary teacher certification. Those desiring to teach in a public school must pass the appropriate Arizona educator exams (National Evaluation Series or Arizona Educator Proficiency Assessments) to be certified to teach in the state of Arizona. In addition, students must complete six credit hours of a foreign language or equivalent and pass an appropriate language proficiency test to be eligible for the BLE endorsement. All graduates who meet the foreign language requirement receive an ESL endorsement.

Secondary Education, BAE (TESEDBAE)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West, ASU@The Gila Valley, ASU@Yuma

Program Description:

This BAE degree program in secondary education is offered in two formats:

MyPath2ASU --- This degree program is offered on-site at ASU@The Gila Valley (in partnership with Eastern Arizona College) and ASU@Yuma (in partnership with Arizona Western College) through the MyPath2ASU program. Students may learn more here: <https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-program> (<https://admission.asu.edu/transfer/pathway-programs>).

Concurrent degree ---- ASU students at the Tempe, Polytechnic and West campuses can add the Bachelor of Arts in Education in secondary education to their primary degree in any secondary education content area. With this option, students can graduate with two degrees, a greater understanding of the field of education and certification to teach. More information is available here: <https://education.asu.edu/add-education-courses> (<https://education.asu.edu/add-education-courses>).

The Bachelor of Arts in Education programs in secondary education prepare educators to teach youth enrolled in grades 6-12. While teacher candidates develop a strong theoretical background in their specific content areas, the education program courses focus on developing the skills and teaching abilities required to be successful in the classroom. This program offers a Structured English Immersion endorsement to work with English language learners, and also provides extensive experiences integrating technology into teaching.

Specializations are typically available in the following content areas, depending on campus location: biology, business, chemistry, earth and space sciences, economics, English, general science, geography, history, math, physics, political science and some foreign languages.

The program's professional experience component provides students with an opportunity to work directly with children and make an immediate impact on classroom achievement. The primary goal of all professional experiences is to provide students with multiple opportunities to apply knowledge learned in coursework to practice in the classroom. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College students complete internships during the junior and senior years, one day a week, while enrolled in upper-division education courses.

The culminating experience is a residency which requires working alongside a highly qualified certified lead teacher, full-time, for the entire semester. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty and highly qualified certified lead teachers from partner school districts and charter schools collaboratively coach interns and residents during required professional experiences. This intensive, hands-on model of teacher preparation creates highly sought-after graduates.

Secondary Education (Biological Sciences), BAE (TEBIOBAE)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

BAE programs in secondary education prepare educators to teach youth enrolled in grades 6-12. While teacher candidates develop a strong theoretical background in their specific content areas, education program courses focus on developing the skills and teaching abilities required to be successful in the classroom. This program offers Structured English Immersion endorsement to work with English language learners, and also provides extensive experiences throughout the program in integrating technology into teaching.

Secondary education professional pathway programs are clinically embedded during the junior and senior years. The primary goal of all professional experiences is to provide students with multiple opportunities to apply knowledge learned in ASU coursework to practice in 6-12 grade classrooms. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College students complete internships one day a week during the junior year and first semester of the senior year. In the final semester, students complete a full-time teaching residency. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty and highly qualified lead teachers from partner school districts and charter schools collaboratively coach interns and residents during required professional experiences.

The professional experience provided by the program provides students an opportunity to work directly with youth and make an immediate impact on classroom achievement. Students are also given the opportunity to work collaboratively with fellow interns in content area and interdisciplinary teams. This intensive, hands-on clinical experience model of teacher preparation creates highly sought-after graduates.

Graduates of the program desiring to teach in a public school must pass the appropriate Arizona educator exam to be certified to teach in the state of Arizona.

Secondary Education (Physical Education), BAE (ECPPEBAE)

Campus: Polytechnic

Program Description:

The BAE program in secondary education with a physical education concentration leads to a K-12 teaching certificate. While teacher candidates develop a strong theoretical background in their specific content areas, the program focuses on developing the requisite teaching knowledge and abilities to successfully teach elementary, middle or high school students. The curriculum directly aligns with Arizona's standards for teachers and the National Association for Sport and Physical Education's beginning teacher standards. This program also provides extensive experiences throughout the program in integrating technology into teaching.

The secondary education teacher certification program is clinically embedded during the junior and senior years. The primary goal of all professional experiences is to provide interns and residents with multiple opportunities to directly apply knowledge learned in coursework in preK-12 classrooms. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College students complete internships during the junior year that require one day per week in grades 6-12 classrooms. The professional experience in physical education includes one half-time teaching experience in the elementary school level in term seven and a secondary school setting during term eight. The experience occurs in the morning hours and is followed by further coursework in the afternoons and evenings. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty and highly qualified lead certified teachers from partner school districts and charter schools collaboratively coach interns and residents required professional experiences. Students have the opportunity to work directly with children and make an immediate impact on student achievement. This intensive hands-on professional experience model of teacher preparation creates highly sought-after graduates.

Graduates of the physical education program who desire to teach in a public school must pass the appropriate Arizona educator exams (either the National Evaluation Series or Arizona Educator Proficiency Assessments) to be certified in the state of Arizona. The physical education program also requires its graduates to pass the National Evaluation Series' Physical Education Content Knowledge test for graduation.

Secondary Education (Spanish), BAE (TESPABAE)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West

Program Description:

BAE programs in secondary education prepare educators to teach youth enrolled in grades 6-12. While teacher candidates develop a strong theoretical background in their specific content areas, education program courses focus on developing the skills and teaching abilities required to be successful in the classroom. This program offers a Structured English Immersion endorsement to work with English language learners and also provides extensive experiences throughout the program in integrating technology into teaching.

Secondary education professional pathway programs are clinically embedded during the junior and senior years. The primary goal of all professional experiences is to provide students with multiple opportunities to apply knowledge learned in ASU coursework to practice in 6-12 grade classrooms. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College students complete internships one day a week during the junior year and first semester of the senior year. In the final semester, students complete a full-time teaching residency. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty and highly qualified lead teachers from partner school districts and charter schools collaboratively coach interns and residents during required professional experiences. The professional experience provided by the program provides students an opportunity to work directly with youth and make an immediate impact on classroom achievement. Students are also given the opportunity to work collaboratively with fellow interns in content area and interdisciplinary teams. This intensive, hands-on clinical experience model of teacher preparation creates highly sought-after graduates.

Graduates of the program desiring to teach in a public school must pass the appropriate Arizona educator exam to be certified to teach in the state of Arizona.

Special Education (Visual Impairment), BAE (TESPEVIBAE)

Campus: Tempe, West

Program Description:

The BAE in Special Education with a concentration in Visual Impairment prepares graduates to work with blind and partially sighted students across educational settings. It leads to dual-certification in Visual Impairment (birth--grade 12) and Mild-Moderate Special Education (K--12).

This degree provides a strong foundation in evidence-based, high-leverage practices in special education. The visual impairment concentration focuses on diagnostic assessment, orientation and mobility skills, and specific teaching methodologies for students with visual impairments. It includes a strong focus on assistive technology to advance learning in the classroom and in daily life. Candidates are taught to work collaboratively with parents, classroom teachers and related service personnel to meet the unique needs of students with visual impairments. The curriculum is aligned with Arizona and national standards consistent with the Council for Exceptional Children.

Starting in Term 5, the program is delivered in partnership with the Foundation for Blind Children in Phoenix, Arizona. Courses are taught by faculty associates from FBC and full-time ASU faculty to provide candidates with theoretical and practical perspectives on teaching and learning for individuals with visual impairments. Students take face-to-face classes at an ASU campus and the FBC main campus.

Professional experiences (internships and student teaching) take place at the Foundation for Blind Children and within a local school district, providing experiences that prepare students to teach in self-contained and inclusive settings.

The courses within this degree and concentration meet the requirements for two teaching certificates offered by the Arizona Department of Education: Visually Impaired Special Education, birth--grade 12 and Mild-Moderate Disabilities Special Education, K--12. The program also offers a full Structured English Immersion endorsement (Structured English Immersion, Pre-K--12) to work with English language learners, and provides extensive experiences in integrating technology into teaching.

Special Education and Elementary Education, BAE (TESPEBAE)

Campus: Polytechnic, Tempe, West, ASU@The Gila Valley, ASU@Yuma

Program Description:

Special educators make a difference in the lives of children and families. They are curious about how people learn and develop throughout their lifespan. A special education degree prepares students to understand human diversity, communicate effectively and develop problem-solving skills that support their success and that of others.

The BAE in special education and elementary education prepares teachers to work with all students in inclusive settings. Since the general education classroom is a viable placement option for many students with mild and moderate learning and behavioral disabilities, teacher candidates learn to use evidence-based practices that promote students' success with general education content, including high leverage practices in literacy, math, sciences and social studies. They develop adaptive techniques for students with disabilities and learn to use instructional and assistive technologies to facilitate success in the general education curriculum. Since special educators work within collaborative partnerships that promote inclusive practices, these skills are emphasized throughout the professional preparation sequence, with additional training in interpersonal communication and problem-solving skills.

The special education and elementary education program is clinically embedded during the junior and senior years. It provides teacher candidates with multiple opportunities to work directly with children and youth to practice what is learned during coursework in authentic settings. During the junior year, teacher candidates intern in classrooms serving students with special needs. The residency is a full-time, two-semester experience. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College works with school partners to form students into teams of three or four residents or interns who work across classrooms, working together and working under the supervision of a certified lead teacher in the school. This intensive, hands-on model of teacher preparation creates highly sought-after graduates.

Graduates are eligible for the Standard Professional Mild/Moderate Disabilities Special Education Certificate - Grades K-12 and the Standard Professional Elementary, K-8 Certificate from the Arizona Department of Education. Those desiring to teach in a public school in Arizona must also pass the appropriate Arizona educator exams: National Evaluation Series or Arizona Educator Proficiency Assessments.

Career Opportunities:

National and state studies report the projected need in the next five to 10 years will be high for special education teachers. Graduates of the program are eligible to teach in elementary education grades K-8 and K-12 for the following high-incidence disabilities:

- emotional disorders
- intellectual disabilities (mild or moderate)
- orthopedic impairments
- other health impairments
- specific learning disabilities

Graduates can teach in a variety of inclusive educational settings, including public, charter and private schools, as well as nontraditional settings (juvenile system, children's hospital, etc.).
